

Jim Spates has been studying Ruskin's life and works for nearly two decades. He has spoken frequently at Ruskin's home, Brantwood, and at The Ruskin Programme at Lancaster University. Among his Ruskin publications are The Imperfect Round: Helen Gill Viljoen's Life of Ruskin and two articles dealing with the late Professor Viljoen's major, unpublished, Ruskin biography, "John Ruskin's Dark Star" and "Ruskin in Milan: 1862" (the latter co-authored with Van Akin Burd). He recently finished an article outlining why Ruskin is so important to the modern world and is working on a book highlighting Ruskin's most significant contributions to Western thought, entitled Resurrecting Ruskin.
