Protecting Water Catchments from Diffuse Pollution - the Emerging Evidence

Tuesday 21 February 2012

Kingston Theatre
Austin Court
80 Cambridge Street
Birmingham B1 2NP

AIMS

Catchment management is on everyone's agenda. Low cost practices, which deal with pollution at source, sit well with the aim of a sustainable water sector.

This one day conference provides an opportunity to hear from leading organisations in the UK who are promoting catchment management approaches, particularly upstream of water treatment works. There will be a Panel session at the end, involving leading policy makers in this area. This occasion will help Ofwat formulate its policy and expectations for the next price review.

Objectives

- To explore the breadth of the water quality and environmental challenges
- To understand what is working and what is needed to identify robust, cost effective measures, based on sound evidence, which can be adopted and promoted
- To hear about the value of national, regional and local approaches, share the learning and identify integrated actions
- To debate how voluntary actions, incentives, regulation and enforcement can best work together
- To discuss proportionate stakeholder contributions within polluter pays or beneficiary pays principles
- To provide evidence and stimulate policy thinking to aid the development of Ofwat’s approach for the next price review

Who should attend

All stakeholders with a responsibility, or interest in land use and water resource protection. In particular, water companies, regulators, NGOs, the NFU, research organisations, academia and land and water agencies.
Note: there will be a poster session opportunity at no charge. Contact Kate Share kate.share@ofwat.gsi.gov.uk for details.

The meeting will count towards continuous professional development requirements
