IBM
IBM is looking for passionate Lancastrians with the skills and creativity to help it take on some of the modern world’s greatest challenges. If you’re full of great ideas and you have the energy to bring them to life, IBM would love to add your name to the long list of Lancaster students and alumni currently working across the globe for IBM.

For over 100 years, IBM has been creating innovative solutions and products that have changed not only business, but the world. From inventing the barcodes you see on products every day, to creating IBM Watson, a self-learning supercomputer currently being used to help cure all cancers. Even more recently, Apple and Twitter chose IBM as their strategic partner to help bring their products and solutions to the modern day enterprise. Right now, IBM is working to integrate people and technology to tackle the world’s biggest challenges head on, from climate change to water conservation there’s a lot to do, and it needs people with ideas. People just like you.

IBM employs placement students, graduates and summer interns in almost every area, from working with Wimbledon on a new mobile app, or a marketing campaign, through to working with some of the largest UK banks/retailers on their HR and finance requirements. Additionally it also has multiple roles in areas you may know it better for - consultancy, sales and technical specialists. All in just about every country you can think of. So no matter where your talents and aspirations lie, it’s not hard to find like-minded people who share your interests.

<td>Vodafone</td>
<td>Vodafone is well known for innovating communications. In fact, it’s something its people excel at. But it won’t stop there - its technology solutions empower people at home and in work to be the best that they can possibly be. Vodafone teams are at the forefront of the technology that’s bringing smart metering into homes, enabling large and small businesses to provide essential services, streaming music into homes and cars as well as delighting customers with fantastic call quality. On top of this, Vodafone technology enables all sorts of fund raising with JustTextGiving – the UK’s first free text donation service. www.vodafone.co.uk/graduates</td>
