Are you interested in a career as a Teacher?

Teachers play a key role in inspiring, motivating and shaping the lives of children and young people. If you have the capacity to listen, enthuse, and build strong and positive relationships whilst conveying your knowledge and understanding to others, then teaching is the career for you.

To work as a teacher you need to have Qualified Teacher Status (QTS). One way of achieving this is to successfully complete a PGCE or Schools Direct programme which leads to a recommendation for QTS.

Our Schools Direct programme is offered one year full time, whilst our PGCEs are available on a one-year full-time basis but many can also be studied flexibly and distance learning meaning we can tailor a programme to meet your individual needs and take any existing knowledge and experience into account. With various start dates available and generous, tax free bursaries of up to £25,000 in some subjects, you’re sure to find a programme that’s right for you.

What programmes are available?

You can study for a PGCE at Edge Hill University in the following areas:

- Early Years Education
- Primary Education
- Secondary Education
- Further Education and Training

For further information or to have a chat about your options contact Rachael Farley, Postgraduate Recruitment Officer: 01695 657142 or farleyr@edgehill.ac.uk
