HR & Consulting

Do you need research in one of these areas?

• Evaluate employee satisfaction and engagement
• Analysis of your HR strategy
• A critical analysis of your recruitment and training procedures in relation to best practice
• A comparison of pay and reward structures

Projects involve a group of students conducting research on an agreed business issue for an external business client.
About the students

Alumni from the MA in Human Resources and Consulting have gone on to work as HR professionals for firms such as KPMG, Deloitte, Coca-Cola and the NHS to name a few. Our students are highly sought-after due to the rigorous academic standards and the employability skills they attain through such live consultancy projects. Former clients have undertaken these projects either to gain access to high-calibre graduates or through a sense of helping the younger generation in their learning.

Cost

Clients are expected to pay for any costs incurred whilst undertaking the project (e.g. travel / telephone calls). A budget should be agreed with the students at the outset and costs agreed before they undertake the work.

Project Overview

- The project begins with an initial meeting* between the student and the client where they discuss the project brief and agree what is to be done.
- The students carry out the work over two weeks during which time they are working solely on the project.
- The team present their findings in the form of a short report to the client.
- Following this, the students may request to work with you further as part of a longer summer project on which they will base their dissertation.
