Welcome to History

There has never been a better time to study History. We study the past to unlock answers to the problems of the present and future, and here at Lancaster University, our students benefit from being part of a vibrant and supportive department that has been at the forefront of innovation in the discipline for 60 years.

We have long been regarded as a world leader in the fields of social history and regional heritage. More recently, we have gained recognition for our renowned expertise in the history of science and medicine and international and military history. What is more, we are internationally esteemed as a leader in the pioneering field of Digital Humanities. These areas of expertise shine through in our teaching. One day, you might be debating the relevance of historical conflicts to today’s global crises; the next, you might be exploring how new technologies are transforming the way we understand and study the past.

Our teaching also reflects our commitment to supporting our students’ professional development. The knowledge and skills our graduates possess help them stand out in an increasingly competitive job market. We are ranked among the top 25 History departments in the UK in all three major league tables, and in the top 25 for graduate prospects in the Guardian University Guide 2023 and Times Good University Guide 2023.

Our graduates are highly sought after by employers in an extraordinary range of sectors, from museums to marketing, and not just for their skills in problem solving and analysis. They are also sought after for the intellectual rigour they bring to decision-making and strategy. We could not be prouder of the successful careers our graduates have developed with companies and organisations ranging from English Heritage and the National Trust to Santander and HSBC.

I hope that you enjoy learning more about our programmes. Please do get in touch if you have any questions.

Head of Department
History at Lancaster

Choose your own adventure

Our programmes combine core and optional modules that give you the skills and knowledge you need to develop your persona as a historian while also allowing you to be guided by your own passions and interests – whether that means specialising in a specific historical period or topic or diversifying your studies across a range of different periods or topics.

Just the right size

Our department prides itself on being a closely knit and supportive community. We keep class sizes reasonable, so that our expert tutors can really get to know you. Your learning will be underpinned by regular small-group seminars and ample opportunities for one-on-one supervision with your academic tutor.

Exciting modules

We offer a wide range of modules that explore British, European, African, American, Asian and Middle Eastern history, from the ancient world to the twenty-first century. This includes innovative transhistorical modules such as ‘Inventing Human Rights, 1776–2001’ and ‘A Global History of the Mind, 1000–2020’.

History on your doorstep

From Lancaster Castle to the Lake District, our department is based in a region that’s full of sites of historical interest and importance, and our connections with regional museums and heritage institutions provide you with opportunities to explore careers in history and heritage while completing your degree.

Taking History at Lancaster University was an incredible experience.

The History department offers lots of choices across historical periods, providing extensive support from lecturers to help develop a critical perspective on these topics. The support with the assessment transition from college to university was extremely useful, as tutors and lecturers were more than happy to discuss and explore ways to personalise and improve my essay writing style to achieve the best grades possible.

Moreover, the availability of online academic resources gave me instant access to thousands of scholarly works to use for free. There wasn’t an expectation for students to purchase books for the course since all readings were digitally available. That made researching for essays quick, easy, and accessible.

One module that I particularly enjoyed was ‘A Global History of the Mind, 1000–2020’. This module critically disentangles the convoluted and transforming ideas on health and identity in relation to the mind. What made this module particularly interesting was the new assessment structure, where instead of writing an essay, we had to create a podcast.

Teaching and assessment

- Our teaching takes place in lectures, group seminars and workshops.
- Lectures introduce important historical questions and provide an overview of the key materials and themes on each module.
- Seminars and workshops are interactive. They give you the opportunity to discuss specific questions and debates.
- You will divide your time between timetabled teaching, individual consultations with academic staff and independent study, resulting in a full study schedule.
- Every module has a dedicated Moodle website as part of the University’s Virtual Learning Environment. This is used for posting resources and communicating with other students in the group.
- Most modules are assessed by a combination of coursework and examination, with coursework making up approximately 50% of assessment overall. Coursework includes essays and primary source analyses, as well as innovative assessments, such as creating podcasts and multimedia presentations.

Georgia’s experience

The support and encouragement from my lecturers and seminar tutors has been second to none, which made the transition from college to university so much easier.

The History department is so welcoming and approachable – any question or query I’ve had has been sorted quickly and I’ve never been made to feel like a question is silly. My seminar tutor for the core module has been especially helpful and encouraging.

The History Society’s academic talks and trips provide great opportunities to develop learning beyond the classroom and to make friends in other modules or year groups. Their trip to Lancaster Castle was really interesting. I can’t wait to discover more in my second and third year!

Heritage placements

At Lancaster, we integrate work experience opportunities into your academic studies.

In your second year, you can opt to take a credit-bearing, heritage work placement module entitled ‘From Education to Employment’, which is coordinated through the Department’s Regional Heritage Centre. The sponsors range from prominent multi-site organisations such as the National Trust to small independent museums, county archives and heritage consultants. On a work placement, you might find yourself analysing data on visitor experiences, writing text for exhibitions or researching world-class collections. This opportunity will provide insight into the different careers that exist in the heritage sector and the type of work those careers involve.

Placement providers include:

+ The National Trust
+ Lancaster City Museum
+ Greater Manchester Police Museum
+ Harris Museum, Art Gallery & Library, Preston
+ Keswick Museum
+ Lancashire Archives, Preston
+ Cumbria Archives Service
+ Lancashire Infantry Museum, Preston
+ Judges’ Lodgings Museum, Lancaster
+ Tullie House Museum, Carlisle

The placements may involve any of the following activities:

+ Curating virtual exhibitions
+ Repurposing, cataloguing and contextualising existing resources
+ Creating and running public workshops, including for schools or families
+ Producing informative literature
+ Checking historic inventories
+ Working with oral history resources including transcription
+ Setting up activity trails
+ Rebuilding the online profile of the organisation

Please note that the above placement providers are given as a guide only as our partnerships can vary each year. Whilst we cannot guarantee all students will be offered a heritage placement, there are other opportunities available. Our Careers Service offer competitive internships you can apply for in all years of study and across a range of employment sectors. You can also choose a placement year degree in which you apply to undertake a year-long, professional placement. Find out more on page 22.

Amy Smart
Placement at Wigan & Leigh Archives

I completed a heritage placement with Wigan and Leigh Archives in the summer term of my second year. Working remotely, I created an interactive, digital map marking places of cultural and historical significance in Leigh. This was to be used in local schools as an educational aid. It involved considerable research to determine locations, access photographs using archival holdings and contextualise these with relevant information. On the two site visits, I particularly enjoyed engaging with archival material physically. Whereas access to primary sources throughout my degree has been digital, it was refreshing to interact with original maps and photographs practically.

I thought a placement would be an excellent opportunity for some professional, subject-specific work experience to enhance my CV (and a welcome change to essay writing). Working independently was not something I was comfortable with before the project, but I now have much more confidence in my research skills, taking the initiative and meeting a brief. Even as someone who does not envisage working in the heritage sector in the future, working on a community-focused project was incredibly rewarding and has strengthened my resolve to work in the third sector.

Emily Mobley
Placement at Lancashire County Museum Services

I was on placement at the Lancashire County Museum Services in their Preston archives during which I was lucky enough to get involved in a variety of tasks. I was trusted with both the documentation and packaging of some collections for storage and movement. I completed a short course on the methodology used when labelling archives and artefacts to ensure their accessibility and accuracy. My favourite task was packaging, labelling and processing a specific collection of military items that were then sent to Lancaster Castle and placed as part of a public display.

It was wonderful to see how the skills I had learnt translated into the practicalities of heritage and archive work. I chose to study this module as I have always been interested in heritage and am personally interested in a future within this sector, particularly archiving. Therefore the opportunity to study something I enjoyed so much alongside gaining beneficial work experience was too exciting to miss. I really enjoyed the experience, which helped solidify my career aspirations and gave me the opportunity to work with a wonderful team of experts. I would recommend the heritage placement module to future Lancaster students as a fun, practical experience that is full of benefits.
Freie University offered a varied course with a lot of opportunity to choose modules from outside of History - this was definitely my favourite part of the experience. I studied a wide variety of content, from the presentation of Medieval History on screen, to German Politics from the country’s origin to the present date. Getting to travel around Berlin was also fantastic; the University’s ID card doubled as a free travel card, so I was able to spend days that I wasn’t in class experiencing all that Berlin had to offer.

The most valuable thing that study abroad contributed to my degree was a broadening of my horizons. Studying in an entirely different academic setting allowed me to experience new ways to write about history. It was certainly challenging in places, but I think it equipped me for the difficulties of final year... as well as giving me friendships and experiences that I wouldn’t have had otherwise!

BA (Hons) History (Study Abroad)
Degree structure

BA (Hons) History

Our History degree encompasses histories from Europe, the Americas, Africa and Asia and examines pivotal events, transformative processes and historical debates.

Joint degrees are structured so you take core and optional modules in both subjects in an approximately 50/50 weighting.

If you choose to study a placement year or study abroad degree, you will spend Year 3 on placement, or studying abroad. You return to Lancaster in Year 4 to complete the final year curriculum.

Year 1

CORE
From Ancient to Modern: History and Historians

This module extends and deepens your knowledge of the past and introduces you to core historical themes from Ancient Rome to the present day. You will engage with a wide range of primary sources used by historians and gain insights into how historians conduct research and interpret the past.

OPTIONAL HISTORY MODULES

Choose from the following modules:
- The Fall of Rome
- Dominions of the Dead? Archives, Museums and Memorials
- Reform, Rebellion and Reason: Britain, 1500–1800
- ‘War Machine’: A Social and Cultural History of the First World War
- ‘Witches’, Warrior, and Slavers: Exploring the History of Lancaster

MINOR MODULE

You can select a module in another subject to complement your studies in History. We will provide a list of minor module options prior to starting your studies at Lancaster along with information on how to register for your preferred choice.

Year 2

CORE
Making History: Contexts, Sources and Publics

This core module focuses on major historiographical case studies, offering an introduction to the theory and practice of the discipline of history: its good and bad practices, its methodologies and different genres, its relation to both past and present and its uses of primary and secondary sources.

CORE
Writing History: Questions, Methods, Conclusions

This module prepares you for your dissertation. You will develop a detailed research proposal, conduct a reflexive feasibility study for your project, present your preliminary findings, and respond to feedback from experts in your prospective field of research.

OPTIONAL MODULES

You can tailor your degree to your interests by selecting from the wide range of optional modules available (see page 14 for an indicative list). You may wish to choose the credit-bearing heritage placement module. Read more about this on page 8.

OR

MINOR MODULE

You may choose to continue the minor subject you studied in Year 1.

Year 3

CORE
Dissertation

Your dissertation gives you the opportunity to work in depth, gaining the satisfaction of working independently and of developing a topic of your own. Working closely with your dissertation supervisor, you will research and write an 8,000–10,000-word study on a historical topic that fascinates you.

CORE
Special Subject

You will select one Special Subject and undertake intensive, primary-source based research. During small-group seminars throughout the year, you will work under the guidance of an expert historian to hone your skills by investigating primary sources and exploring the topic and its debates. See page 15 for indicative options.

OPTIONAL MODULES

You will select two optional History modules. See page 14 for a list of options.

Information contained in this booklet with respect to modules is correct at the time of publication, and the University will make every reasonable effort to offer modules as advertised. In some cases changes may be necessary and may result in some modules and combinations being unavailable, for example as a result of student feedback, timetabling, staff changes and new research. Please check our website for the latest information. www.lancaster.ac.uk

If you wish to take more than 30 credits in English Literature modules in Years 2 and 3, it is compulsory to choose English Literature as a minor module in Year 1.

As a student who came to university with a passion for all periods of history, the broad range of modules at Lancaster appealed to me. Some of the modules I have most enjoyed were from wildly differing periods – from culture and society in the Roman Empire to gender and warfare in 20th-century Britain.

During my second year, I realised that 20th- and 21st-century European and American history was where I wished to focus my studies.

As my dissertation focuses on contemporary American History, I have chosen final year modules which are positioned in Europe, allowing me to cover a broad range of topics, from Russia in the 19th Century, Europe during the Cold War and a Special Subject on the Spanish Civil War.

The Special Subject has been of particular interest as it allows you to go in-depth into a certain area of history. As someone who knew very little of the Spanish Civil War prior to taking this module, it has been incredibly fascinating to discover and engage with a period of history which was previously unknown to me.

Thomas Side
BA (Hons) History
As historians, we do spend a great deal of time in libraries and archives. However, there are numerous opportunities to get out and about.

The first-year module, ‘Histories of Violence: How Imperialism Made the Modern World’, for example, requires students to carry out intensive research into a remnant of the British empire in Lancashire. Past day-trips have included Lincoln, where students visited the medieval cathedral and the City’s original copy of Magna Carta, and we have also taken trip to castles in North Wales built by Edward I. Closer to home, trips could include Lancaster Maritime Museum, to learn about Lancaster’s history as a slaving port, and to Heysham to see the early medieval archaeological remains like St Peter’s Church and the Heysham hogback stone.

Lancaster University Society of History (LUSH)

Lancaster University Society of History (LUSH) is exactly what it sounds like, a chance to bring together anyone with a passion for history, regardless of whether you are a history student or not. Working closely with the Department, LUSH is a fun way for you and your friends to engage with history outside the lecture hall or library. With regular socials, nights out, pub quizzes, movie nights and themed parties, we really do have something for everyone!

Life on your degree

– History students enjoying the winter ice skating rink in Dalton Square, Lancaster.
I am an expert in the archaeology and history of early colonial Mesoamerica, and I am also co-director of the University’s Digital Humanities Centre. In two of my recent projects, ‘Digging into Early Colonial Mexico’ and ‘Unlocking the Colonial Archive’, I have led a team of computer scientists, archaeologists, geographers and linguists in an exploration of the Spanish ‘conquest’ of what we now know as Mexico during the sixteenth century. I am especially interested in this period because it witnessed the contact of two very different civilisations and worldviews. In my work, I have used digital technologies to reveal how the indigenous peoples of Mesoamerica both adopted and challenged western conceptions and technologies, forming new understandings of space and creating new discourses that are alive still today.

Meet our staff

Dr Nicholas Radburn
Senior Lecturer in the History of the Atlantic World 1500–1800 & Director of Part I History

My research focuses on Atlantic history, particularly the trans-Atlantic slave trade and plantation slavery in North America and the Caribbean. My current project studies slave trading merchants in Britain, Africa and the Americas, and explores how their profit-motivated decisions shaped the lives of the people whom they bought as captives and sold as slaves. I have performed archival research for the project in both the United States and the United Kingdom, where I have examined a plethora of papers belonging to slave traders. I also draw extensively on digital resources, principally Voyages: The Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade Database and a 3D model of a slave ship that I have developed in collaboration with an international team of scholars. These digital and textual sources underpin my undergraduate modules at Lancaster, one of which examines the trans-Atlantic slave trade’s long history, and another that examines the intertwined histories of slavery and freedom in colonial America.

Dr Selina Patel Nascimento
Lecturer in the History of the Global South

My research is embedded in the intersectional experiences of enslaved and marginalised women, particularly in their positions in global systems of concubinage. Structures of concubinage have a long history stretching back many millennia, and although they have differed over time and space, their continuity into the present provides a fascinating and under-researched lens into the intricate relationship between sex, slavery and empire in global perspective. While my area of expertise lies in late colonial and early Imperial Brazil (circa 1700–1831), my current research has global dimensions that reach across and beyond the Portuguese empire. This reach is also reflected in my teaching, which includes modules such as ‘Histories of Violence: How Imperialism Made the Modern World’. I am currently completing a book entitled Colonial Concubines: Sex, Slavery, and Transitioning Empires in Brazil’s Northeast, 1750–1831, which analyses how concubines maintained a tense and contradictory relationship with imperial rule as Brazil declared independence from Portugal and transitioned into its own empire.

A Lancaster University History degree is a gateway to an exciting and rewarding career. History graduates are able to think critically, analyse evidence, structure an argument and communicate effectively. A degree in History offers you the combination of specialised knowledge and a comprehensive understanding of the world in which we live.

Placement and internship opportunities

Placements and internships are great ways to gain work experience, make professional contacts and help you decide your career path. You can take modules with integrated work experience, such as the heritage placement or schools volunteering modules. You can also apply to our Faculty Internship Scheme which runs paid internships in relevant sectors. Past employers have included the National Trust and Carnegie Publishing with roles ranging from marketing and PR to specific research projects.

Placement year degrees

With most of our degrees you can apply for a placement year, where you apply to spend Year 3 working in a professional paid role in a sector of your choice. Securing a placement is a competitive process, so we support you with personalised coaching and professional guidance throughout your second year. Find out more at: www.lancaster.ac.uk/fass-placements

After you graduate

Our graduates go on to a wide variety of successful careers, including:

+ Education
+ Museums and Heritage
+ National and Local Government
+ Law
+ Retail Management
+ Human Resource Management
+ Banking
+ Insurance
+ Data Management
+ University Administration

Many of our graduates also choose to continue their studies with specialist postgraduate qualifications.

Molly Anderson
BA (Hons) History, graduated 2022

Molly graduated with a First-Class BA Honours degree in History in 2022. She is now a writer and social media manager for Promenades Travel, a history holiday travel company, where she uses the skills she developed at university, writing critical pieces for the blog and entertaining pieces for social media. She is also a staff writer for The Historians Magazine, which enables her to continue researching historical topics that interest her.

She is planning to start an MA in Heritage Management at Queen Mary University of London in September 2023, with an eye towards taking the next steps in her career working in museums and historic properties.

Lydia Thompson
BA (Hons) History, graduated 2022

Lydia graduated with a First-Class BA Honours degree in History in 2022. During her studies she combined her passions for history and gaming to developing a game that explores the history of the plague in early modern Italy. Lydia wrote a distinction-winning dissertation on the 16th/17th-century priest Matteo Ricci’s translations and interpretations of Confucius in her final year.

Since completing her degree, Lydia has started a career in the gaming industry as a Quality Assurance Tester at Sports Interactive, the world’s leading developer of football management simulations. In this role, she’s applying the skills in research, project management and communications that she developed at university in one of the world’s most rapidly expanding industries.
