The scholarly communications strategy at Lancaster is underpinned by a commitment to open access research. The University seeks to ensure that its research outputs are readily available to give research greater visibility, the potential for more rapid dissemination and greater research impact. Lancaster University has a mandatory position that all research outputs (including electronic theses) are made accessible through the Library managed repository, Eprints.

Embargoing access to a thesis

Sometimes there is a valid reason for restricting access to a thesis for a limited period of time, for example, because of commercial confidentiality or conditions imposed by sponsors. Candidates should consult the Library’s guide to thesis deposit Deposit Your Thesis, and talk to their supervisor before completing and signing this form to establish whether there is likely to be a valid reason for restricting access to their thesis for a limited period of time. However, the Freedom of Information Act 2002 (FOIA) and the Environmental Regulations 2004 (EIRs) require access to any information held by Lancaster University, including material in theses, unless an exemption or exception applies. In normal circumstances any thesis to which access has been restricted will be made available after five years.

Please note that Lancaster University may turn down requests for access to a thesis to be restricted.
Access and Deposit Permissions

- By giving permission to deposit your thesis in the Lancaster University Institutional Repository, you agree that your thesis will be accessible to a wide variety of people and institutions - including automated agents and search engines - via the Internet.

- Lancaster University deposits its scholarly output of research theses in the British Library Electronic Theses On-line System (EThOS) and ProQuest® Dissertation & Theses Global in order to promote and preserve the intellectual output of its research degree candidates. EThOS is the British Library’s Electronic Theses Online Service which allows individuals to discover and access electronic theses awarded by UK Higher Education institutions. It is a national database and supports the Open Access principle by aiming to provide free electronic access to doctoral theses. ProQuest® Dissertation & Theses Global reaches 3,000 universities with over 200 million searches annually and supports discovery of scholarly output through all major scholarly subject and discipline indexes. ProQuest offers a print-on-demand service to individuals. All individual sales are attributed back to the author and copyright holder of the work in the form of a 10% royalty. You can claim these royalties from ProQuest by contacting PQDT Global to set up an account. You will retain all your rights as an author. You may contact the Library or ProQuest to withdraw your work from ProQuest® Dissertation & Theses Global at any time.

- Once the Work is deposited in the Lancaster University Institutional Repository, a citation to the Work will always remain visible, including the duration of an embargo.

Student Deposit Declaration

I understand the thesis listed on this form will be deposited in the Lancaster Institutional Repository and by giving permission to Lancaster University to make my thesis publicly available agree to the following:

I agree that the Lancaster Institutional Repository administrators or any third party with whom the Lancaster Institutional Repository has an agreement to do so may, without changing content, translate the Work to any medium or format for the purpose of future preservation and accessibility.

I understand that the rights granted to the Lancaster Institutional Repository through this agreement are entirely non-exclusive and royalty free and that I am free to publish the Work in its present version or future versions elsewhere.

Please select one of the following two options for access to the thesis:

☐ No embargo/exemption requested – make the electronic copy of the thesis available immediately

☐ Embargo/exemption requested – do not make the electronic copy of the thesis available. Give details below of the reason, or the relevant exemption/exception under the FOIA or EIRs where applicable and the length of embargo required (up to 5 years maximum)

Inclusion of Copyright Material

If your thesis contains material where the copyright is owned by someone other than yourself this is third party copyright material. Copyright law prohibits reusing more than an insubstantial part of third party copyright-protected material unless you have the owner’s permission or your use is permitted by an exception in the legislation (Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988).

When the thesis is published online you need to obtain the copyright owner’s permission to use the material, unless your use is covered by another exception, before it can be made publicly available in the Lancaster Institutional Repository. An exception under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988 permits acknowledged fair dealing for the purposes of criticism, review or quotation. For further information on including third party copyright material in your thesis please see the Library’s guide to thesis deposit Deposit Your Thesis.

If you cannot obtain the necessary permissions, or the copyright material is not covered by an exception, you may deposit two versions of your thesis, one being the full version with all third party copyright material retained, and a second edited version with this material removed. The edited electronic version will be made publicly available; the full version will not.

Please indicate below which situation applies (Please tick one box)
