Note.—All the illustrations in this volume (with one exception) have been published previously; which fact (as explained below, p. xxvi.) accounts for their inclusion here. The frontispiece appeared in vol. ii. of Turner and Ruskin, 1900. Plate I. appeared (somewhat altered) as the cover to Studies in Both Arts, 1895. Of the facsimiles on Plate II., those facing p. 116 appeared in Ruskin Relics, 1904, pp. 138, 145; the upper piece facing p. 117 in the Bibliography of Ruskin (see p. 116, below), the lower two in Ruskin Relics, pp. 143, 137. The facsimiles on Plate III. appeared in a sheet put out by Mr. G. Allen in connexion with the Ruskin Commemoration at Venice in 1905 (see p. 122, below.) The drawing on Plate IV. appeared (greatly reduced) in the Strand Magazine, December 1895. The drawing on Plate V. appeared in the Magazine of Art,

April 1900. The photograph reproduced on Plate VI. appeared (reduced) in the Life and Letters of Lewis Carroll, 1898. Plate VII. has never been published. Plate VIII. appeared in The Story of the Thames, 1909; Plate IX. in the Artist, July 1897; Plate XI. in the Pall Mall Magazine, October 1909. The sketches and facsimiles on Plate X. appeared in Ruskin Relics, pp. 170, 175, 174. Photographs of the drawings on Plate XII. were placed on sale by Ruskin (see below, p. 97). Of the two drawings on Plate XIII., the upper appeared in the Artist, May 1896; the lower in Collingwood's Life of Ruskin, 1893. Of the two drawings on Plate XIV., one (Tyrol) appeared in the Artist, May 1896; the other in the Artist, March 1900. Plate XV. appeared in the Studio, March 1900. Of the two drawings on Plate XVI., the upper appeared in the Strand Magazine, December 1895; the lower in Collingwood's Life of Ruskin, 1893. Of the two drawings on Plate XVII., one appeared in the Artist, May 1896; the other (Schaffhausen) in Scribner's Magazine, December 1898. Of the facsimiles on Plate XVIII., the one facing p. 294 appeared in the Pall Mall Magazine, October 1909; the other, facing p. 295, in M. H. Spielmann's John Ruskin, 1900.

Of the drawings thus reproduced, Plate I. was exhibited at the Ruskin Exhibition at Manchester, 1904, No. 188; Plate V. at the Ruskin Exhibition at the Royal Society of Painters in Water-Colours, No. 382, and at Manchester, No. 78; Plate XI. at the Ruskin Exhibition at Coniston (1900), No. 49, at the Royal Society of Painters in Water-Colours, No. 155, and at the Fine Art Society (1907), No. 20; Plate XVIII. (facing p. 294) at the Royal Society of Painters in Water-Colours, No. 161. The design on p. 2 appeared (very defectively) in the Strand Magazine, December 1895.

INTRODUCTION TO VOL. XXXVIII

THIS Volume, which is separated from the Final Index (Vol. XXXIX.) for better convenience in reference, is mainly Bibliographical, but particulars are included of Ruskin's work in drawing as well as in writing.

The Volume is divided into three Parts:—I. Bibliography; II. A Catalogue of Ruskin's Drawings; III. Addenda et Corrigena.

I

It will be understood that this Bibliographical Volume is in some measure a Bibliography by Reference, detailed bibliographical notes having been already given throughout the Edition in the case of each of Ruskin's books: to those notes, the reference only is given, so as to avoid repetition. Editions, etc., which have appeared (or been traced) since the several Notes were printed, are enumerated in the first section of the Addenda (pp. 308–325), references to these being supplied in the main Bibliography.

The arrangement of the Bibliography is sufficiently explained in the List of Contents, and in the Notes prefixed to the several subdivisions. A few explanations may be added with regard to the most voluminous of the subdivisions, that devoted to Ruskiniana (N, pp. 130–190).

Every endeavour has been made to render this account of the criticism of Ruskin's work as complete as possible, but it can hardly be expected that no Ruskiniana have been overlooked, whilst many books and articles, which might be included, have intentionally been omitted owing to considerations of space. Ruskin's vogue has been very widespread; references to his views, his sayings, and his doings are to be found scattered through the periodical literature and the books of fifty years; in the case of books upon the Fine Arts in particular, it was for a large part of that time a rare exception to find no quotation from, or reference to, his works. Some selection and discrimination in the inclusion of such references among Ruskiniana have therefore been applied. Thus short biographical or critical notices, of no interest, in General Dictionaries—English and foreign—and books on particular painters (especially Tintoret and Turner), and handbooks to galleries or countries, containing extracts from Ruskin or paraphrases of his views, are excluded; as also, except for special reasons in particular cases, are books of essays or biography in which there are only passing and incidental references to Ruskin. Enough items remain to satisfy the most exacting student, and baffle the most exhaustive collector, for, even with the omissions above noted, the number of Ruskiniana in subdivision N alone is 1200.

The interest of a Bibliography such as this of Ruskin is many-sided. The collector's interest in it is obvious. It enables him to verify editions, to note the omissions in his collection, to detect the spurious first editions which are sometimes put upon the market. Early editions of Ruskin's Works do not now command the same high prices that were common some few years ago, when many of the books were attainable in no other form; but there are other reasons why they are still, and are always likely to be, sought after. There are book-lovers who like to see and handle their favourite volumes in the very form which they wore when the author himself first saw them. In the case of illustrated works, such as many of Ruskin's, the earlier impressions of delicate steel-engravings have a quality of their own which is at any rate different from that of any other reproductions of the original drawings. But, apart from this factor, a Bibliography has to consider the interest of the collector to whom the pursuit is itself the sport, and the acquisition itself the prize. To collectors who make a point of completeness, whose ambition it is to possess every edition of their author and every relevant book about him, this Bibliography will, it may be feared, prove somewhat tantalising. An absolutely complete collection of Ruskin and Ruskiniana is entirely beyond the purse of most book-lovers, and probably beyond the patience and the power of any. My own collection numbers some 1300 items;¹ but the fullest collection in existence in any private library is probably that of Mr. Wedderburn. He possesses, I believe, every first edition and many unique copies. He has also a collection of Ruskiniana which is probably unparalleled. The nucleus of it is contained in a large folioscrap-book, wherein Ruskin's father, up to the date of his death, had pasted every review of his son's books, or other references to them, which he could find; and this collection was continued by Mr. Wedderburn in two further volumes. These scrap-books have been of great use in the compilation of the Bibliography.¹ Yet if my friend were to go through its pages, ticking off the items which he possessed, he would find, I am confident, that even his collection is very far from complete. The reader may, if he cares, count up the number of possible items. A collection, to be complete, must include, first, all the editions of Ruskin's books or other writings comprised in the subdivisions A, B, and C of the Bibliography: these would certainly number more than 500 volumes, even if all reprints without substantial alteration in contents or form be excluded. The collection of them all, though not impossible, is far from easy; for many of Ruskin's writings first appeared in Annuals, Journals, Proceedings, and the like, which are now difficult to obtain. Next, our collector would have to secure copies of the newspapers or other publications containing the first Reports of Ruskin's Lectures, Addresses, and so forth (subdivision D): there are more than 100 of such things to be collected. Next, he must collect copies of the newspapers which first printed Ruskin's Public Letters (subdivision E): there are over 300 of such. Then he must turn to the publications which first contained Private Letters of Ruskin (subdivision F); the separate Bibliography of Letter in Vol. XXXVII. pp. 617–739 will put him on the track; if he obtained every item therein mentioned, he would have added nearly 200 to his collection. The Minor Writings (subdivision H) would add about 50 more; and the collection of books, articles, etc., containing Conversations or Obiter Dicta (subdivision I) about 100. Next he would have to collect 10 books, etc., containing drawings by Ruskin (subdivision J), and the photographs issued by him (K), about 80 in number. Passing to Writings about Ruskin, our collector would certainly require every complete volume of biography, bibliography, or criticism (subdivision L), about 120, and the volumes of Periodicals and Proceedings wholly or principally devoted to Ruskin (M); here the bibliography, for a reason noted below (p. 124), is probably not quite complete, but it comprises 39 items. Then come the 1200 items of Ruskiniana (N) already mentioned. Passing over the Manuscripts, the collector would finally desire to possess the books or other publications in which various Portraits of Ruskin were first published or most clearly printed: about 50 items more, making a grand total of 2750—a sufficiently formidable sum, which, in one department, may incidentally give the reader an idea of the amount of labour expended upon the present Edition of Ruskin's Works. The voluminousness of this Bibliography may prove disheartening to most collectors, but the completeness of the Edition itself will, it may be hoped, afford some compensation. Within these volumes are collected all Ruskin's writings and speeches, together with many which appear nowhere else (see below, pp.23–25), and all his published drawings, together with 176 not heretofore reproduced. Every edition of each book has been collated, and the various readings have been given. In the field of Ruskiniana diligence has been exercised to make the Edition as complete an Encyclopædia to the study of Ruskin as was possible. Naturally it was not possible (nor if possible would it have been profitable) to reprint all the Ruskiniana which are included in the lists, but the reader will find in that section of the Bibliography many notes and references of interest.

Not every reader, nor every student, is a collector; but a full Bibliography suggests many points which have an interest wider than that of the collecting bibliophile. A Bibliography, carefully arranged and wisely consulted, contains the life-history of an author's work. In the tabulation of details, apparently so dry, so forbidding even, is the material not only for that part of the life of an author which is contained in his books, but also for tracing the rise and fall of opinions and the movements of public taste. Bibliography is, in short, the historical material of criticism. A few remarks may be made to illustrate these points from the Bibliography of Ruskin. The chronological arrangement shows at a glance the early beginning and the long continuance of his literary life. He was eleven when a piece from his pen first appeared in print, and from his fifteenth year onward for fifty-five years his literary output was constant. Turning from one division of the Bibliography to another, the reader will observe that, almost from the first, Ruskin was an author who attracted the attention of reviewers; but he had made a false start, and his first reputation was that of an Album Poet. Three pages of the Bibliography are filled before Ruskin, anonymously at first, made a second reputation as "the author of Modern Painters" (volume i.). His books for seventeen years following (1843–1860) were widely read and as widely approved; he had his detractors and his severe critics, but these were years for the most part of steadily growing and continually enhanced reputation. Then in 1860 there came a change. He has noticed the point himself in one of his lectures. "For fifteen years precisely," he says (taking Modern Painters, vol. ii., 1845, as the starting-point), "my writings were thought praiseworthy; for fifteen years precisely (1860–1875, when he was speaking), thought the reverse." Then another change came, "and people are beginning to think again there may perhaps be something in what I say after all."¹ The Bibliographical particulars given in this Edition illustrate these fluctuations. A reference to the extracts given from contemporary reviews of Ruskin's Unto this Last (1860) will show how he was supposed to have destroyed by that treatise on Social Economy the reputation which he had built up as an art-critic. There are few things more instructive in bibliographical history than the fortunes of that little book.¹ By the test, whether of circulation or of direct influence, the reprobated book which was summarily ejected from a popular magazine, which was scoffed at by all the reviews, and which for some years loaded the publisher's shelf as dead-weight, has eclipsed the author's earlier works. It suffered only for being a little in advance of the time; with the development of current opinions on economics and politics, a development to which Ruskin's writings contributed not a little, readers began to "think that there might be something in what he said after all"; and it will be noted, in the pages of the Bibliography dealing with Ruskiniana, how much attention was paid during the last quarter of the nineteenth century to his work in social and economic affairs. It has sometimes been said that Ruskin's vogue as a writer on economics has been accompanied by some eclipse of his influence in other directions. Bibliographical evidence, so far as it is relevant to the question, does not support that thesis. Any one who refers to the bibliographical notes throughout the Edition, and the supplement to them in the "Addenda," will find that Ruskin's public, for his general books no less than for his economic, has been greatly and continuously increasing. If we may judge from the flood of unauthorised reprints which followed the expiry of copyright seven years after his death, his public is increasing still.² Up to about 1875 or a little later, Ruskin's books were still in the most part for the few (as may be seen from the particulars of prices given in the bibliographical notes); afterwards, they have been for the many.

Another point of considerable interest may be discerned from the Bibliography in a similar connexion. This is the vogue which Ruskin has enjoyed during recent years in foreign countries, and more especially in France and Germany. His work was first introduced to French readers by Browning's friend, M. Milsand, in 1864, and it is a sign of the times that his "Etude sur John Ruskin" has recently been reprinted.³ An earlier, though only an incidental, appreciation of Ruskin, by which he himself was yet more gratified, had been given by Montalembert (1856).⁴ Of late years, there have been, in connexion with one aspect of Ruskin's work or another, many French "studies"; nor has he anywhere found more sympathetic or discerning commentators than (to name but a few of French writers on Ruskin) M. de la Sizeranne, M. Bardoux, M. Cherfils, and M. Chevrillon.¹ He has been fortunate also in his French translators. In Germany the vogue of Ruskin has been yet more extensive. Perhaps it was Herr Engel who set the fashion, for in his "History of English Literature" (1897) he commended Ruskin to German readers as "the Englishman's Winckelmann and Lessing in one." However this may be, a perusal of the Bibliography will show that Ruskin has often been taken as the theme for University dissertations, that various commentaries on his work have been published, and that on the occasion of his death, and in years immediately following it, his life and work attracted an amount of notice in the newspapers and Reviews hardly less widespread than in England itself. All his principal works have been translated into German, and volumes of Selections in that language have been numerous. "In the last twenty years," said Professor Sieper of Munich in a recent lecture in London, "Ruskin and William Morris more than any other Englishmen had influenced German thought."² I am not aware that Ruskin has been translated into Russian; but Tolstoy's appreciation of him is well known.³ Ruskin has also been the subject of essays or treatises in Belgium, in Denmark, in Holland, in Italy, and in Switzerland. Many of his books have been translated into Italian, Spanish, and Swedish; and one of them (Stones of Venice) into Hungarian. He is also not unknown, it seems, in Japan.⁴ A summary of foreign translations is given below, on p. 25. Ruskin has, in short, become a world-author. His vogue and influence among the English-speaking people on the other side of the Atlantic may be traced fully in the Bibliography.⁵

Ruskin, it may be noted further, has attained the last, and not always the most welcome, distinction accorded to a great writer: he has become a school-book. The Bibliography includes a "Ruskin Reader"; there is "Ruskin for Boys and Girls"; and school editions of several of his books have been issued, Sesame and Lilies being especially favoured for this purpose. In Canada and in the United States, more particularly, teachers and professors in Schools and Colleges have devoted much attention, as a glance through the Bibliography will show, to the analysis and illustration of Ruskin as a master in the art of English Literature.¹

Such are some of the points which a detailed Bibliography suggests for the study of an author's influence. It has a further, and in some respects a greater, interest in connexion with the study of an author's treatment and opinion of his own books. No part of the labour undertaken for this Edition has been heavier than that involved in the collation of the text of different editions. Scholars will look indulgently on such labour, as at any rate an intelligible and forgivable weakness; but I have noticed in some of the friendly reviews, which the Edition has been fortunate enough to receive, a note of impatience, half amused and half pitying, at what has seemed meticulous thoroughness. A word or two of explanation may thus not be superfluous. The collation of editions is necessary, in the first place, from the strictly bibliographical point of view, in order to satisfy the harmless curiosity of the collector, and sometimes to safeguard him from imposition. More than one spurious "first edition" has thus been detected in the course of this Work. Secondly (and this is a more important point), the collation of "various readings," supplemented in most cases by access to the author's original manuscripts or proof-sheets, has made it possible to give for the first time an accurate text of Ruskin's works, to remove mistakes which have hitherto been current, and, incidentally, to clear up many a reference otherwise obscure. Thirdly (and this is the most interesting point), the Bibliographical thoroughness of the Edition makes contribution to the study both of Ruskin's literary art and of the history of his opinions. He was a most careful craftsman, and a ruthless reviser. The textual notes and collation of various readings admit the student, as it were, to the craftsman's workshop; showing the successive stages through which the search for the exact word, or the building up of a sentence or paragraph, was carried out. If Ruskin is to be used as a school-book, one could imagine many a profitable lesson founded on such questions as why this or that word was rejected, why this or that turn of a sentence was preferred. Ruskin's revisions were often of opinions, as well as of style, and the bibliographical apparatus contained in this Edition will not, it is hoped, be blamed by any careful reader. These few words of a bibliographer's apology may be permitted in an age of hurry.

II

The Second Part of the volume contains a Catalogue of Ruskin's Published or Exhibited Drawings, together with some others, as explained below (p. 221). References are given to passages in the Edition dealing both with Ruskin's drawings generally (p. 217) and with particular examples (pp. 224 seq.), so that the Catalogue serves also as an Index to one branch of the author's works. This Catalogue, in addition to its interest for collectors, will probably be to many readers a revelation of the amount of labour which Ruskin devoted throughout his life to drawing. He has himself spoken of "the labour I have had to go through in order to make sure of my facts, in any statements I have made respecting either architecture or painting."¹ "People sometimes praise me as industrious," he says in Præterita, "when they count the number of printed volumes which Mr. Allen can now advertise. But the biography of the waste pencilling and passionately forsaken colouring, heaped in the dusty corners of Brantwood, if I could write it, would be far more pathetically exemplary or admonitory."² "My old work haunts me," he had written some years previously to Professor Norton; "I don't like to let it all rot in the damp here, till you can't read any of its wreck; so I am going to try to edit some, with engravings, as I used to do, if I can find engravers; or else numbering the drawings, and leaving them for reference or publication by my executors."³ The exhibitions of Ruskin's Drawings held after his death, the 176 drawings published for the first time in this Edition, and now the Catalogue of them all, are a fulfilment of his desire. Whistler's saying, "talking all his life about what he has never done," has been commonly taken as addressed to Ruskin; if it were so intended, it was very wide of the mark. Ruskin, who divided his energies between the arts of writing and of painting, did not indeed claim for himself any equality with professional artists;⁴ but he did claim such proficiency in drawing as proved his capacity to understand what good qualities are, and such diligence in manual study from nature and art as to form a sound basis for his literary work. The Catalogue, which, though mainly limited to engraved or exhibited drawings, enumerates 2145 pieces, sufficiently illustrates Ruskin's diligence; the illustrations in the Edition will enable readers, not familiar with the originals, to form some idea of his artistic skill. Various critical judgments are quoted, or referred to, in the notes prefixed to the Catalogue.

III

The Third Part of the volume is occupied with Addenda and Corrigenda. This Edition has occupied nine years in passing through the press, and it deals with a subject to which throughout that period fresh contributions have been made. The additions are necessarily, therefore, numerous. In the first subdivision, the Bibliographical Supplement, already referred to, will be found (pp. 308–325). "Additional Matter" follows (pp. 326–349); this consists, first, of "Notes contributed to Murray's Handbook to Northern Italy" (1847). These have hitherto escaped the attention of Ruskin's editors and bibliographers; an incidental reference in a letter of Ruskin's father gave the clue. Secondly, there are several additional Letters by Ruskin; a few of these had escaped notice when Volumes XXXVI. and XXXVII. were compiled; the others have been printed subsequently to the appearance of those volumes. Next come "Corrections in the Text and Notes, and Additions to the Notes, etc., in Vols. I.–XXXVII." The claim has been made above that the text of Ruskin is for the first time adequately correct in this Edition; but in a Work of such magnitude, some errors of the press are almost unavoidable; the kindness of readers and subscribers has enabled these to be now corrected. Some wrong references have also been put right; and various additional elucidations have been included. Lastly, a Synoptical Table is given, whereby Turner's Drawings in the national collection may be identified. Soon after the appearance of the Turner Volume (XIII.), in which attention was called to the neglect of the drawings, a complete inventory of them was made by order of the Trustees; the Table gives, opposite to each of the old numbers (as cited in Vol. XIII. and elsewhere in the Edition), the number that the drawing now has in the official Inventory. This addition has been made in the hope, which the editors are perhaps vain in cherishing, but which they have spared no pains to justify, that the Library Edition of Ruskin may become a Work of permanent reference.

Of the contents of the present volume, the Bibliography (as also the bibliographical notes in preceding volumes) is the work of Mr. Cook. The Catalogue of Manuscripts is the work of Mr. Wedderburn (who also discharged the initial task of sorting and arranging the mass of papers left in confusion at Ruskin's death). The Catalogue of Drawings is the work of Mr. Hugh Allen and Mr. Cook.

The illustrations to this volume are of miscellaneous interest. The frontispiece is from Mr. Arthur Severn's portrait of Ruskin in old age (No. 62 in the list, below, p. 213). The other portrait (Plate VI.) is from an excellent photograph taken in 1874 by Ruskin's friend, the Rev. C. L. Dodgson, "Lewis Carroll" (No. 29 in the list, p. 209).

Plate I. is a design which was made by Burne-Jones for one of Ruskin's books. It was adapted (as explained below, p. 33) for the cover of a volume of Selections published in 1895.

The other illustrations are inserted in order to fulfil the promise made in the prospectus of this Edition that it should include every published piece of Ruskin's work. They are reproductions of various drawings, etc., within that category for which no convenient place could be found in earlier volumes.

The drawings need not be described here, as the particulars will be found in the Catalogue. Plate IV. is No. 1408 in the Catalogue; Plate V. is No. 1225; Plate VII., No. 112 (see also p. 312); Plate VIII., No. 641; Plate IX., No. 949; Plate XI., No. 1174; Plate XII. combines Nos. 1228, 1229; Plate XIII. combines Nos. 1299, 1300; Plate XIV. combines Nos. 1764, 1365; Plate XV. is No. 1417; Plate XVI. combines Nos. 1588, 1589; Plate XVII. combines Nos. 1761, 1498; and Plate XVIII. combines Nos. 1856, 1857.

Plate X. brings together drawings of a piece of Native Silver and a Diamond Diagram (No. 1139 in the Catalogue) with a piece of a letter from Ruskin, which contains rough sketches of snow crystals. The diagram is of "the big 'St. George's' diamond he bought for £1000, and studied, and made his secretary study, for weeks together. It ought perhaps to be said," adds Mr. Collingwood, "that the diagram represents only one facet, and that this is magnified fully two diameters; the diamond is large, but not so large as all that. I cannot reproduce the drawing made at the time, too elaborate in its attempt at transparency and detail; 'that style of drawing was too utter by far,' he said, but his diagram may give some hint of the reason why he preached uncut diamonds as well as the jewellery of native gold."¹

The diamond in question was ultimately called by Ruskin the “Colenso Diamond” and, so inscribed, was presented by him to the nation: see Vol. XXVI. p. lv. The drawing of Native Silver on the same Plate is a rapid sketch in colour of a knot of natural silver wire, showing the arborescent shapes in which Ruskin delighted.

Plates II. and III. contain (on each side of each Plate) facsimiles of Ruskin’s handwriting at various dates; the facsimiles are collected from various publications.

The design on p. 2 was made by Ruskin for a book-plate; the idea being to bring in the initials of J. M. W. Turner (Justice, Mercy, With Truth): see Vol. I. p. xi., Vol. XXXVII. p. 729.

I. WORKS BY RUSKIN

A. A CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF ALL RUSKIN'S BOOKS AND CONTRIBUTIONS TO PERIODICAL LITERATURE (OTHER THAN LETTERS AND REPORTS OF LECTURES, ETC.)

THIS list includes, in order of publication, First Editions (or, in case of contributions to periodicals, first appearances). Later editions (or appearances) and reprints are excluded, but substantially Revised Editions are included.

All details of every edition, translation, etc., will be found in the Bibliographical Notes in the several volumes.

The first reference after the title of each book, or piece, is to the place in this edition where it is printed; the second (as the "Bibliog." implies) is to the place where the detailed Bibliographical Note is given.

Where letters are added in brackets after the second reference, they indicate the Collected Volumes of Ruskin's books in which the scattered pieces were included. Thus "(Arrows)" means that a piece was reprinted in Arrows of the Chace (1880); "(O. O. R.)," in On the Old Road (1885); "(P.)," in the Poems (1891); and "(R. on P.)," in Ruskin on Pictures (1902). It should be noticed that, in this edition, many of the contents of Arrows and On the Old Road have been given not in Vol. XXXIV., but in previous volumes.

It is impossible entirely to avoid cross-division as between books and lectures (pp. 40-47), since so many of Ruskin's literary works were first prepared in the form of lectures, but the cross-references supplied will make things plain.

It may be noted that Frondees Agrestes is included here (rather than under the head of Selections) because Ruskin contributed original matter to it.

Writings printed for the first time in this edition are enumerated below, under the years 1903-1909, pp. 23-25. But in order to make the present list (1830 seq.) more complete as a chronological index of Ruskin's literary activity, the titles of many of the hitherto unprinted pieces are included here also, under their dates of composition. But this has only been done in the case of independent pieces to which a precise date can be assigned.

An asterisk calls attention to such writings.

The Seven Lamps of Architecture.—VIII. 3–6, 19–272. Bibliog., ibid., li.–lv. (and see Addenda, below, pp. 311–312).

[A separate reprint of The Scythian Guest, which bears the date “1849” and contains what professes to be a Preface by Ruskin, is not authentic: see II. 102 n.]

“Mont Blanc Revisited.” This poem first appeared in a book entitled A Happy Christmas. Original Contributions. Edited by a Clergyman of the Diocese of Norwich. London: James Nisbet & Co., 21 Berners Street. MDCCCXLIX. (P.)

W. H. Harrison’s name appears several times in the list of contributors, which fact may account for the first insertion of Ruskin’s poem in the little volume.

Poems: J. R. Collected 1850. (For Private Circulation.)—II. 1–240, 355 Bibliog., ibid., 2.

In this volume Ruskin’s father “collected” all the previously printed poems enumerated above, except “Skiddaw and Derwent Water,” “Saltzburg,” and “Fragments from a Metrical Journal”; and printed for the first time several others, namely: “I weary for the torrent leaping,” “The Avalanche,” “Ehrenbreitstein” (II. 355), “The Emigration of the Sprites,” “On Adèle, by Moonlight,” “Good-night,” “The Gipsies,” “The Exile of St. Helena,” and “Charitie.”

1850–1851

* Essay on Baptism. See below, p. 23.

1851

The King of the Golden River (written in 1841).—I. 305–348. Bibliog., ibid., 349 (and see below, Addenda, pp. 309–310).

THE foregoing enumeration is of separate works, etc. Collected "Works" have appeared in the following forms:—

1871–1880

Ruskin's own "Works Series." For his "Advertisements" of this Series, see XVIII. 10–11. The Series included only eleven of his books, as under (the references are to the places in this edition where Bibliographical particulars of the "Works" edition of the several books are given):—

- Vol. I. Sesame and Lilies.—XVIII. 9–12.
II. Munera Pulveris.—XVII. 119–120.
III. Aratra Pentelici.—XX. 185–186.
IV. The Eagle's Nest.—XXII. 115–116.
V. Time and Tide.—XVII. 300.
VI. The Crown of Wild Olive.—XVIII. 373–374.
VII. Ariadne Florentina.—XXII. 295.
VIII. Val d'Arno.—XXIII. 5–6.
IX. The Queen of the Air.—XIX. 284–285.
X. The Two Paths.—XVI. 245–246.
XI. A Joy for Ever.—XVI. 7–8.

1882–1910

Mr. George Allen and his successors have published a large number, though not all, of Ruskin's books in uniform style in three different forms, the "Small Edition," the "Pocket Edition," and the "Popular Edition." These have been described in the detailed Bibliographical Notes to the several books. These editions, however, besides not including all the author's books, had no "Works" title-page, and were not numbered as volumes in a successive Works Series.

UNAUTHORISED AMERICAN EDITIONS

The "Complete Works of Ruskin" (so called, though not in fact complete) have been issued in various forms, all unauthorised, in America, especially by Messrs. John Wiley & Sons, of New York, whose "Catalogue of the Works of John Ruskin" forms a 12 pp. pamphlet in ornamental wrapper. There are "Complete Works" (19 vols.) and "Choice Works" (9 vols.) Also:—

Miscellanea. A Collection of the Minor Writings of John Ruskin. 2 vols. (1886).

Vol. I. contains Giotto, Michael Angelo and Tintoret, Academy Notes (1875), Notes on Turner, Notes on Prout and Hunt, Catalogue of Turner Drawings (1881), and Guide to the Academy at Venice. Vol. II. contains Fiction, Fair and Foul, In Montibus Sanctis, Cambridge Inaugural Lecture, Cæli Enarrant, The Opening of the Crystal Palace, The King of the Golden River, and Sheepfolds. Each piece is separately paged, and the volumes were made up by binding together separately issued books.

THE AMERICAN "BRANTWOOD" EDITION: 1891–1893

On the passage of the American Copyright Act of 1891, an authorised "Brantwood Edition" of many of Ruskin's books was issued in America by Charles E. Merrill & Co., New York, in conjunction with Mr. Allen. Nineteen of the books (22 vols.) in all were so issued; all the books, except the Poems, having introductions by Charles Eliot Norton. In these introductions, Mr. Norton published many extracts from Ruskin's letters to him (see XXXVII. 683). This "Brantwood Edition" (of which mention has been made in the detailed Bibliographical Notes) comprised the following books:—

A Joy for Ever.	The Eagle's Nest.
Ariadne Florentina.	The Elements of Drawing.
Aratra Pentelici.	The Ethics of the Dust.
Lectures on Architecture
and Painting.	The Queen of the Air.
Lecture on Art.	The Seven Lamps of Architecture.
Modern Painters, vol. ii. (2 vols.).	The Two Paths.
Munera Pulveris.	The Stones of Venice (Travellers' Edition;
Poems (2 vols.).	2 vols.).
Sesame and Lilies.	Time and Tide.
The Crown of Wild Olive.	Val d'Arno.

In 1907 Messrs. George Routledge issued a so-called "Universal Edition of John Ruskin's Works." The edition (15 vols.) comprised, however, only a reprint of early editions of such of Ruskin's Works as had then passed out of copyright.

It will be seen from the foregoing bibliographical statement that the present "Library Edition" is the only real Works Edition of Ruskin

C. SELECTIONS

DIVISIONS (i.) and (ii.) are (with one exception) books authorised by Ruskin or his publisher:—

(i.) From Various Works. (ii.) From Single Books.

Division (iii.) gives a few specimens of unauthorised American Selections.

Division (iv.) enumerates Selections translated into foreign languages.

Division (v.) gives specimens of unauthorised English Selections.

(i.) SELECTIONS FROM VARIOUS WORKS

“SELECTIONS”: 1861

The first volume of Selections was made by Mr. W. Smith Williams (literary adviser to Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.), at the instance of Ruskin's father (XVII. li.). For a reference by Ruskin to the volume, see ibid. It had the following title-page:—

Selections | from the | Writings of John Ruskin, | Master of Arts,
Oxon., | Author of “Modern Painters,” “Seven Lamps of Architecture,” | “Stones of Venice,” etc. etc. | [quotation¹] | With a
Portrait. | London: | Smith, Elder and Co., 65 Cornhill. |
M.DCCC.LXI. | [The right of Translation is reserved.]

Post octavo, pp. viii. + 440. Title-page (with blank reverse), pp. i., ii.; “Advertisement,” p. iii.; List of works from which the selections are taken, p. iv.; Contents, pp. v.-viii.; Text, pp. 1-440. Imprint (“London: Smith, Elder & Co., Little Green Arbour Court, Old Bailey, E. C.”) at the foot of the last page.

Issued in green cloth boards, lettered across the back: “Selections | from the | Writings | of | John Ruskin. | London | Smith, Elder & Co.”—Price 6s.

The First Edition was issued on November 18, 1861. There was a reprint on July 1, 1862, and there were several later reprints.

The portrait (frontispiece) is F. Holl's engraving (given as frontispiece to Vol. XVI.); for particulars, see ibid., p. lxx. The “Advertisement” is printed in Vol. XVII. p. 1.

The Selections are given under six different heads—Scenes of Travel, Characteristics of Nature, Painting and Painters, Architecture and Sculpture, Ethical, and Miscellaneous. They are taken from the following passages:—

Press:—C. Whittingham and Co., Took's Court, | Chancery Lane," on the reverse), pp. iii., iv.; Text, pp. 1–282. Imprint repeated on reverse of the last page.

Issued on December 17 in mottled-grey paper boards, with white paper back label, which reads, "The | Ruskin | Birthday Book | 1883." 3000 copies (of which only 75 were in paper boards, the remainder being in cloth), 10s. Also 1000 large-paper copies (post 4to), 15s., of which 100 were issued in paper boards, the remainder in dull-red cloth: in the large-paper copies the portrait was pulled on India paper.

The portrait (an engraving by W. Roffe from a photograph) is given as frontispiece to Vol. XXIX. The Birthday Book was compiled by Miss Maud Bateman and Miss Grace Allen.

1884: THOUGHTS ON EDUCATION

Some Thoughts on Education, dedicated to the Rt. Hon. Anthony John Mundella (Entrapped to give the sanction of his name on hearing that the little book contained No Flattery); by his Faithful Servant, S. A. Miller. 1884. (A. J. Roche, The Steam Press, Lewisham.)

The Second Part (pp. 49–109) consists of "extracts taken by permission from Fors Clavigera"; the Third (pp. 110–134), of extracts from several other of Ruskin's books.

1886: NOTES ON MILLAIS, AND ON HOLMAN HUNT

The Notes on . . . Millais, mentioned above (p. 19), included, besides original notes by Ruskin, numerous extracts from his previous writings.

Notes on the Pictures by Mr. Holman Hunt exhibited at the Rooms of the Fine Art Society, 1886. With Criticisms by John Ruskin, LL.D., D.C.L. . . . (London: William Reeves).—Octavo, pp. xxiii. + 40. Issued in green paper wrapper (1s.); and a large-paper ed. in brown-paper wrappers (2s. 6d.).

This collected various notes on Holman Hunt, but contained nothing new. The compiler (as of the Notes on Millais) was Mr. A. Gordon Crawford (pseudonym for A. G. Wise.)

1888: HANDBOOK TO THE NATIONAL GALLERY

Mr. E. T. Cook's Handbook, mentioned above (p. 20), included numerous selections from Ruskin's works.

1892: THOUGHTS ABOUT WOMEN

Ruskin's Thoughts about Women. Collected from his more modern Works and arranged by Kate Stanley, F.R.B.S., Head Governess of Whitelands College, Chelsea. London: G. White, Steam Printer, 396 King's Road, Chelsea, S.W.—Octavo, pp. 16, in green paper wrappers, price 4d.

1893: "SELECTIONS" (2 VOLS.)

Selections from the Writings | of | John Ruskin, | D.C.L., LL.D., | Honorary Student of Christ Church, Honorary Fellow of Corpus | Christi College, and sometime Professor of | Fine Art in the University of Oxford. | First Series | 1843–1860 [Second Series | 1860–1888] | With a Portrait. | George Allen, | Sunnyside, Orpington, | and | Bell Yard, Temple Bar, London. | 1893. | [All rights reserved.]

Crown 8vo, Vol. i., pp. xv.+524. Half-title (with blank reverse), pp. i., ii.; frontispiece, portrait (the same as in the Selections of 1861); Title-page (with blank reverse), pp. iii., iv.; prefatory note, pp. v., vi.; list of works from which selections are taken, pp. vii.-viii.; Contents, pp. ix.-xv.; Text, pp. 1–505; Index, pp. 507–524. Imprint (“Printed by Ballantyne, Hanson & Co. | Edinburgh and London”) at foot of last page.

The volume was edited by Mr. Collingwood, and it was stated in an introductory note that it was based (with some revision) on the Selections of 1861, including only passages from books issued up to 1860. A few passages were added from Elements of Drawing, Arrows of the Chace, On the Old Road, and one of the Turner Catalogues.

Vol. ii., pp. xii.+488. Frontispiece, portrait (photogravure from a photograph by Barraud, given as frontispiece to Vol. XXXIV.). List of works, pp. v., vi.; Contents, pp. vii.-xii. Text, pp. 1–468; Index, pp. 469–488. Imprint as before.

The second volume contains selections from the eleven volumes of the “Works Series,” Unto this Last, Ethics of the Dust, On the Old Road, Fors Clavigera, Mornings in Florence, St. Mark’s Rest, Proserpina, Deucalion, Bibliotheca Pastorum, The Bible of Amiens, The Art and Pleasures of England, Præterita, and The Nature and Purpose of St. George’s Guild. The passages are arranged under the headings, “Art,” “Education,” “Ethics,” “Economy,” and “Religion.”

First Edition, issued, vol. i. June, vol. ii. July, 1893, in green cloth lettered on the back, “Selections | from | The Writings | of | John Ruskin | First [Second] Series | 1843–1860 [1860–1888]. 5000 copies of each volume were issued; and there were the following reprints:—July 1894, 3000 of each volume; January 1, 1898, 1000 of vol. i., 400 of vol. ii.; January 1899, 1000 of each volume; March 1900, 1050 of vol. i., 850 of vol. ii.; September 1901, 1000 of each volume; January 1904, 1250 of vol. i., 1000 of vol. ii. The price was 6s. per volume, reduced January 1904, to 5s., and January 1907 to 3s. 6d. It will be seen that of this edition of the Selections alone 29,500 volumes were issued.

There was also a large-paper edition, large post 8vo, with the portraits pulled on India paper, 30s. the 2 vols. (reduced January 1903 to 21s.). 280 copies.

Pocket Edition (1905). Uniform with other volumes as described in Vol. XV. p. 6, the title-pages being

The text of the Preface by W. G. Collingwood is as follows:—

"In the lately published Poems of John Ruskin, The Poetry of Architecture, and Verona and other Lectures, an attempt was made to present some of Mr. Ruskin's drawings in facsimile. The line-engravings, mezzotints, and lithographs in his earlier books, though fine examples of the celebrated engravers who produced them, are not, in many cases, other than translations of Mr. Ruskin's originals,—faithful, indeed, up to the point to which those styles of engraving can be faithful, but hardly rendering the characteristic handling and interesting personality of the draughtsmanship.

"Modern photogravure, however, and improved methods of chromo-lithography, give us the chance of an almost perfect rendering; the only drawback to which has been the miniature scale of most book-illustration. Many small sketches have been attempted in this way: a few larger drawings have been reduced to fit the limit of size, but lose much of their charm by the reduction.

"The present publication aims at a worthier representation of Mr. Ruskin's work. The plates, from drawings hitherto unpublished, and representing different periods and varying styles, have been produced on a larger scale, under Mr. Ruskin's personal direction and superintendence. The cover is from a design by Sir Edward Burne-Jones, Bart. The text has been selected to illustrate the subjects of the pictures; these forming a series of Studies in Both the Arts of which Mr. Ruskin is known as a master—the Art of Drawing, and that of Literature.

W. G. C."

"CONISTON, August 1895.

The design by Burne-Jones was made by the artist for Unto this Last or Munera Pulveris,¹ but not used. It was shown at the Ruskin Exhibition at Manchester in 1904 (No. 188), and is here reproduced (Plate I). It was adapted for Studies in Both Arts by the omission of the lettering "Justitia," and the insertion of a scroll at the top, bearing the words "STVDIES: IN: BOTH: ARTS:" and another at the bottom "BY JOHN RUSKIN."

The following is a list of the drawings (with their places in this edition) and of the illustrative passages:—

1. "Porta Capuana, Naples" (XXXVI. Plate iii. p. 23).—Præterita, ii. ch. 3, § 49 (XXXV. 285–287).
2. "Vesuvius, 1841" (XXXV. Plate xiv. p. 288). Letters to Dale, ii. (I. 386–388), and Præterita, ii. ch. 3, § 50 (XXXV. 288).
3. "Archivolt in St. Mark's" (XI. Plate 16, p. 350). Stones of Venice, ii. ch. iv. §§ 26, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37 (X. 95–96, 101–106).
4. "Fondaco de' Turchi, Venice" (X. Frontispiece). Stones of Venice, ii. ch. v. (X. See p. 144 n.).
5. "Castelbarco Tomb, Verona". (IX. Plate D, p. 176). A Joy for Ever, § 76 (XVI. 66–67), and Stones of Venice, i. ch. ii. (IX. 175–177).
6. "Tomb of Can Signorio, Verona" (XI. Plate B, p. 90). Verona, §§ 18–20 (XIX. 439–441), and Stones of Venice, iii. ch. 2, § 56 (XI. 90).
7. "Münster" (XII. Plate v. p. 36). Lectures on Architecture and Painting, §§ 18, 49 (XII. 35–36, 71).
8. "Bonneville" (XXXVI. Plate xiii. p. 242). Præterita, ii. ch. 11, §§ 213, 214 (XXXV. 442–444).
9. "The North Side of the Valley of Chamouni" (V. Plate B, p. xx.). Modern Painters, vol. iv. ch. 13, §§ 9, 11, 12 (VI. 205, 207–209).
10. "The Mountains of Annecy, seen from the Brezon" (XVII. Plate vi. p. lxxii.). Modern Painters, vol. iv. ch. 16, §§ 26, 24 (VI. 301, 299).

¹ Not for Sesame and Lilies as stated in the Catalogue of the Ruskin Exhibition at Manchester (No. 188).

1903: DANTE REFERENCES

Comments of John Ruskin | on the Divina Commedia | Compiled by | George P. Huntington | With an Introduction By | Charles Eliot Norton | Boston and New York | Houghton, Mifflin and Company | The Riverside Press, Cambridge | 1903.

Crown 8vo, pp. xiv. + 201. Editor's Preface, pp. v.–vii.; Norton's Introduction, pp. ix.–xiv.; Selections from Ruskin, pp. 1–201, arranged under the following heads:—Dante, Dante and other Poets and Painters, Dante's Interpreters, Some Characteristics of the Divina Commedia, The Source and Inspiration of the Divina Commedia, Inferno, Purgatorio, Paradiso.

The compiler remarks in his Preface that "the selections form an extensive commentary on the poem. Of the Inferno all but two, and of the Purgatorio all but three of the cantos are referred to; and of the Paradiso more than one half." Ruskin's comments, as also his quotations and references without comment (not included in Mr. Huntington's book), are collected in the index to this edition (Vol. XXXIX.).

Mr. Norton in his Introduction says: "No other great English writer has shown such familiarity with the Divine Comedy as Mr. Ruskin. The references to it scattered through his writings . . . form a comment on the poem, partial and irregular indeed, but of peculiar interest."

1906: "RUSKIN TREASURIES"

A series of 12 little books, demy 32mo, in blue cloth, 6d. each net, issued by George Allen. The subjects of the volumes are "Architecture," "Art," "Economy," "Education and Youth," "The Dignity of Man," "Girlhood," "Liberty and Government," "Maxims," "Religion," "Of Vulgarity," "Wealth," and "War."

October.—French Manners and Customs. At the Working Men's College. Working Men's College Magazine, October 1860.—XVI. lxix. n.

In the Working Men's College Journal, June 1908, vol. x. p. 343, Mr. J. P. Emslie gives the following reminiscences of this lecture, which was delivered "at the request of some students of the College who were about to make an excursion into Normandy." In addressing them, Ruskin said that he could only tell them of some of the notable things of Normandy, not give them practical instructions for travelling, nor tell them what to take, as each man knew best what it was that he liked to travel with. "So," he said, "each one of you will take what he pleases in his knapsack; but there's one thing which I hope that every one of you will put into his knapsack, and that is, plenty of Patriotism. I wish you to understand me in this matter: by patriotism I mean, not only that you should love your country, as you ought to do that; but you should also love other people's country. So many people go abroad only for the purpose of vaunting England to the disparagement of other nations, and they cause a great deal of illfeeling in consequence. This ought not to be. You ought to love your country, just as you love your father and mother; but you must remember that other people love their country, and their father and mother; and to be always praising your country and speaking ill of other countries is as if you were to say, 'Oh! my father and mother are very good people, but your father and mother are very bad people.' January 6.—A Christmas Greeting. Speech at a dinner given by Ruskin to Coniston children.—XXXIV. 663–664. Bibliog., ibid., 632. (Ruskiniana.)

February 13.—Modern English Sports. Some remarks made at a lecture, given at the Marlborough Rooms, Regent Street, by Mr. Frederick Gale, at which Ruskin took the chair:—

“In introducing the lecturer, Professor Ruskin said that he should be very glad to see some of the old-fashioned pageantry revived, and suggested that the present Lord Mayor should appear on the Thames in a barge decorated with statues of Victory and Amphitrite and with Union Jacks waving” (Globe, February 15). “Turning his eyes from the youth of old Greece, Mr. Ruskin bethought him of the boys of young London, and he wondered, not without reason, how activity and athleticism can flourish in this dull and depressed age, devoid of light and destitute of pageantry” (Daily Telegraph, February 16, leading article). From other passages in the latter article, it appears that Ruskin's plea for a Revival of the Pageant was received at the time with ridicule in other quarters as showing a “characteristic lack of the sense of the ridiculous.” For a reference by Ruskin to his speech, see XXXVII. 645.

June 14.—Speech at a dinner to Sir Richard Burton.—XXXVII. 398 n

June 22.—The Arundel Society. Speech at the Annual Meeting.—XXXIV. 637–639. Bibliog., ibid., 637 n.

E. PUBLIC LETTERS

IN this Division of the Bibliography a Chronological List is given of all Ruskin's Public Letters; that is, primarily, his Letters to the Newspapers; but letters to private correspondents written obviously for publication are also included. Owing to the habit of many of his correspondents of publishing his letters, the line is not always easy to draw between Public and Private (Division F).

The principal collections of Ruskin's Public Letters, hitherto published, are:—

Arrows of the Chace (2 vols., 1880; see above, p. 16).—For the collation of the contents of those volumes, see XXXIV. 462–465.

Ruskiniana (part i., 1890; see above, p. 21).—See, similarly, XXXIV. 466–468.

In the present edition, many other Letters, in addition to those included in the collections just mentioned, are gathered together from various sources; and all are here enumerated.

The subject of the letter is given in the first column; its date of composition, in the second; its place and date of first publication, in the third; in the fourth column is the reference to the volume and page in this edition where the letter is printed and further Bibliographical particulars will be found.

F. PRIVATE LETTERS

A Chronological List of all the Letters (or extracts from letters) by Ruskin contained in this Edition

The Bibliography of Books, etc., containing Letters from Ruskin, has been given in Vol. XXVII. pp. 617-739.

The present edition, however, not only includes all these, but gives, in various places, a very large number of letters not hitherto printed.

The following list enumerates all the letters in chronological order; and as the place of writing is added, the list will serve to some extent as a Ruskin Diary.

Rhyming Letters, mainly addressed in Ruskin's youth to his father, are not here included; for these, see the General Index, under "Ruskin, Verses" (39).

The Bibliographical reference, in the case of previously printed letters, will be found at the several places where the letters are printed.

"H. Hill," or "H. H.," means Herne Hill, and "D. Hill" Denmark Hill. "J. J. Ruskin" is, of course, Ruskin's father, and "M. Ruskin" his mother.

G. DIARIES AND NOTE-BOOKS

IN this Division of the Bibliography, a chronological list is given of all the passages from Ruskin's diaries and note-books which are printed in the various volumes of the edition, with references to the place where each will be found.

It may be pointed out that years for which diary extracts are scanty or absent are often fully covered by letters. When Ruskin was travelling, away from his parents, his diary was often written in the form of letters to them; thus the tours of 1845, 1851-52, 1858, 1861-63, 1866-70, of which there are few or no records in the diary, are fully covered by letters: see above, pp. 57-58, 59-60, 62-63, 64 seq., 66-69.

J. BOOKS WITHOUT (ORIGINAL) LETTER-PRESS BY RUSKIN BUT CONTAINING DRAWINGS BY HIM¹

1844.—The Amateur's Portfolio of Sketches. Ruskin's drawing of "Piazza Santa Maria del Pianto, Rome" is the 23rd of 30 lithographs; it measures 15 x 101/2. It is reduced in Vol. I. p. 382 (Plate 15). Bibliog., ibid., p. lvii.

1869.—Cadore, or Titian's Country. By Josiah Gilbert. London: Longmans, Green & Co.—Ruskin's drawing of "The Antelao seen from Venice" faces p. 22. It is given in XXXVI. p. 118 (Plate 6).

1875.—A Handbook of Pictorial Art. By the Rev. R. St. John Tyrwhitt. Second edition. Oxford: Clarendon Press.—Ruskin's drawing of an Apple, reproduced by chromo-lithography, faces p. 219. It is given as the frontispiece to Vol. XV. Further particulars, ibid., p. xxx. (The drawing did not appear in the 1st ed., 1868.)

1883.—Art Journal, February, p. 49. A drawing of Venice by Ruskin. In this edition, frontispiece, Vol. IX.

1897.—Architectural Review, Christmas Number. Full-page plate (half-tone) of "Budding Sycamore."—XXI. 292 (Plate 66).

[1898.—Architectural Review, Christmas Number. Full-page plate (half-tone) lettered "Part of the South Transept, Rouen Cathedral: drawn by John Ruskin." This was a mistake, the drawing being, in fact, by Ruskin's assistant, J. J. Laing.]

1898.—Architectural Review, June, "Art Supplement." Two drawings, "At Venice," "At Verona."—XXIV. Plate A.

1903.—Drawing Syllabus for guidance in Home Office Schools, with Practical Hints on Class Teaching. London: Printed for his Majesty's Stationery Office, by Darling and Son, Ltd., 34–40 Bacon Street, E., 1903.—Foolscap, pp. 15, with numerous plates. Issued in green paper wrappers. Among the plates is a lithograph of Ruskin's drawing "The Dryad's Toil," after Plate 51 in Modern Painters.

1908.—A History of British Water Colour Painting, with a Biographical List of Painters. By H. M. Cundall. With 58 coloured illustrations. London: John Murray.—No. 45 of the illustrations is Ruskin's "A Vineyard Walk at Lucca."—Vol. XXXVII. Plate vii.

1909.—The Story of the Thames. By J. E. Vincent. London: Smith, Elder & Co.—Plate No. viii. in this vol. is a reproduction by half-tone process of a drawing by Ruskin of Eton College Chapel (No. 641 in the Catalogue of Drawings, below, p. 249).

[The following publications, included in other sections of the Bibliography, contain important collections of drawings by Ruskin:—

Studies in Ruskin: see below, p. 114.

Studies in Both Arts: see above, p. 33.

The Studio: see below, p. 176.

The Artist: see below, pp. 164, 167.]

¹ That is, the first publication of such drawings (except in the case of the 1903 entry).

K. PHOTOGRAPHS, ETC., ISSUED SEPARATELY IN ILLUSTRATION OF RUSKIN'S WORKS

FROM time to time there were issued, and placed on sale through Ruskin's agent (Mr. W. Ward), various photographs, etc., illustrative of his books. They were announced in successive Catalogues issued by Mr. W. Ward. The following is a classified list of them, the numbers in brackets being those in Mr. Ward's Catalogues.

In one form or another, this edition includes all the photographs, to the subject of which reference is made in the text.

To illustrate Fors Clavigera:—

The Four "Lesson Photographs"¹ (1-4).—See XXVIII. xix.-xx.; reproduced in that volume.

Holbein's "Introduction to the Dance of Death" (5).—Plate III. in Vol. XXVIII. (p. 550).

Athena (6).—This was a separate issue of a Plate in Aratra Pentelici (No. IV., Vol. XX. p. 242); referred to in Letter 78 (Vol. XXIX. p. 128 n.).

Bust of Ruskin by Boehm. A fly-sheet (foolscap), dated "Oxford, May 27, 1880," inviting subscriptions thus:—

"Many friends of Mr. Ruskin have expressed a desire that a statue of the author of Modern Painters should be placed in the School of Drawing, Oxford, which owes its existence to his generosity and bears his name. A Bust of Mr. Ruskin has been executed by Mr. Boehm, A.R.A., in Terra-cotta, of which one copy is now being exhibited at the Royal Academy, and another may be seen in the Turner Room at the University Galleries. Mr. Boehm has also made a full-length sketch of Mr. Ruskin in clay. It is proposed to raise by subscription a sum sufficient to procure a life-size Statue modelled upon this sketch. The cost of executing this would be in Terra-cotta, £700; in Bronze, £1000; in Marble, £1200." List of the Committee (headed by Prince Leopold and the Marquis of Salisbury) followed.—The appeal was printed in the Times, May 26. Ultimately a marble bust was placed in the Ruskin Drawing School.

Is it true that Mr. Ruskin's books are "scarce, dear, and difficult to obtain?"—Crown 8vo, pp. 4; a leaflet, without wrapper.

Circulated in 1880 by the Manchester Ruskin Society. The contents of the brochure had appeared in the Educational Chronicle.

13. Title-page of Gold, 1891.

A Note by Mr. Wise on p. 3 of the wrapper is as follows:—

"These 'Illustrations,' which represent the scarcer and more uncommon of the First Editions of Mr. Ruskin's books, are intended to supplement the verbal descriptions given in the Bibliography, to the end that copies of the books in question may more readily be recognized, and spurious examples more easily detected."

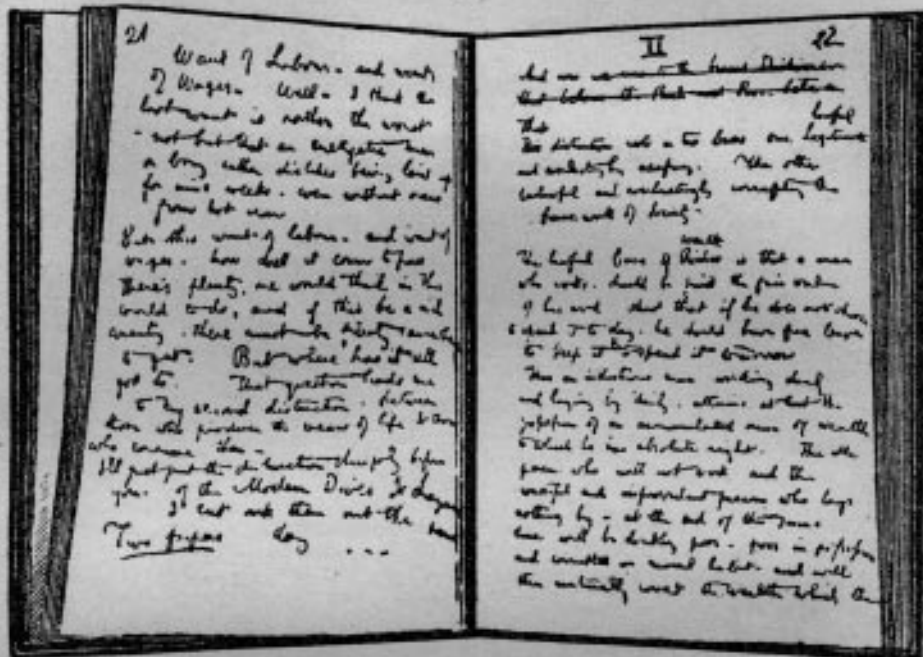

Unfortunately, the title-pages thus illustrated belonged in four cases (asterisked above) to spurious editions. For the genuine ones, see the several bibliographical notes.

"The earlier portion of the volume is based upon a Supplement which I wrote, in some haste, for the Proprietors of the Graphic" (see below, p. 172). Chapter x. (R. and Cruikshank) is reprinted with additions from the Pall Mall Gazette (see below, p. 151). Chapter xiv. ("The Portraits of Ruskin") is reprinted with additions and alterations from the Magazine of Art (see below, p. 160). Chapter xv. (Ruskin's "Black Arts") is reprinted from the same magazine (see above, p. 20). The book also incorporates from the Pall Mall Gazette a "Conversation at Brantwood" (see above, p. 93). For collation of numerous Ruskin Letters included, see XXXVII. 726. For other Ruskiniana quoted from the book, see XXX. xlv., XXXIV. xlv., 566.

Wilmersdoerffer. "John Ruskin."

This paper was a separate pull from the pages of a magazine (see below, p. 178), the title-page of the reprint being:—Nord und Süd. Eine deutsche Monatsschrift. Herausgegeben von Paul Lindau. . . . Sonder abdruck aus Heft 283, Oct. 1900. Breslau

Bardoux. Le Mouvement idéaliste et social dans la Littérature anglaise au XIX^e Siècle. John Ruskin. Par Jacques Bardoux, avocat à la cour d'Appel, Docteur es Lettres. Paris: Calmann Levy.—Crown 8vo, pp. xii.+551, issued in green paper wrappers, 3 f. 50.

A careful and exhaustive study. There is a concise "Bibliographie des Œuvres de Ruskin," fairly extensive, pp. 535–540; and a "Bibliographie de la Littérature Ruskinienne," pp. 541–549 (not very accurate).—Quoted, VIII. xliii. n.

Jameson. A Bibliographical Contribution to the Study of John Ruskin. Compiled by M. Ethel Jameson. Cambridge (U.S.A.): Printed at the Riverside Press.—Crown 8vo, pp. 154.

This book contains:—"Significant Facts in the Life of John Ruskin," pp. 1–38 (American readers should note that this section abounds in misprints and mistakes); "Estimates of Ruskin," 38–47; list of "Books by production chronologically," 48–55; "British Editions of Ruskin's Books," 55–85; "Foreign Editions," 85–98; "Books composed of and containing selections from Ruskin's writings, also of books for which he wrote prefaces, notes, letters, etc.," 99–108; "Books concerning John Ruskin, his life, work, and writings," 108–119; "Magazine Articles," 119–144; Index, pp. 147–154. Though it contains many mistakes, omissions, and confusions—sometimes of a comic character, as when an item called "Growth of Ruskin" turns out, upon search, to be "Growth of Russia"—this Bibliography is valuable for its fulness in noting Ruskiniana, and its list of American editions differentiates it from other essays in the same kind.

Rawnsley. Ruskin and the English Lakes. By the Rev. H. D. Rawnsley, Hon. Canon of Carlisle. Glasgow: James MacLehose & Sons.—Crown 8vo, pp. xii.+243.

Chaps. i. and ii. ("Ruskin and the English Lakes") are biographical.—Some reminiscences of Ruskin quoted, XXXIV. 719.

Chap. iii. ("Reminiscences of Ruskin among the Peasantry of Coniston"):—"He hedn't a bit o'pride, hedn't t' Professor, and he was partickler fond of a crack about dogs and sheep, . . . and birds and aw mak of things that hed life. . . . I'member he was yance up here latin' mosses and what not, and he shewed me a bit of them colourments upon the steans, nay I can't mind on what he cawed them, but he was pleased as a child wid yan o' 'em on a boulder stean, and talked for iver of it. . . . He was fond of iverything in t' daale, and partickler fond o' barns. School childer wad wait for him at lonning-end just on chance of a word or a pat o' t' head fra t' Professor. . . . I'member yance of a time when he and yan they cawd Bell [see XXVI. 309] hed a crack about politics and sec-like, and William clapped Professor on t' shoulder and he said, 'Well, to my waays o' thinking, for aw your conservative talk and writings and what not, you are as radical as t' best on us.' And Professor leuked oop wid a smile and smacked his hand intil William's, and he said, 'Well, well, you're not so far wrong efter aw.']"

 Greek Gospels, annotated (201).—XXXIV. 703.

The volume is the source, as indicated above, of numerous anecdotes and reminiscences contained in this edition. With regard to ch. ix., the facsimiles in this edition give ample material to any reader who is interested in the subject of character in handwriting—a subject in which Ruskin himself took some interest (see, e.g., IX. 446); and it may be well here to collect references to Ruskin's successive "hands."

Its variableness is the first fact which will strike any one who examines the examples. "In writing," says Mr. Collingwood, "he held the pen as we are taught to hold a drawing-pencil, and the long fingers gave much more play to the point than is usual in formed penmanship. Knowing that, it is not surprising to find that his writing varies, not only from one period to another, but with passing moods. Everybody shows some of this variety, but Ruskin's hand was as flexible and impressionable as his whole being."

"He had an odd way, down to the last, of 'printing' an inscription on the fly-leaf of a book or on the mount of a drawing, in neat, square Roman type, inked between double lines ruled in pencil. . . . This was a reversion to early habits. His juvenile MSS. contain many pages of similar calligraphy." (See Vol. II. Facsim. 2 and 3, and Harry and Lucyn XXXV. 53, and for an earlier "script," XXXV. 24.) "His ordinary running hand was a shocking scribble"; but there are examples of fair copies, "in the most approved writing-master's manner" (II. 264). After 1830, he exchanged, in his literary productions, his "print" for copper-plate (see the "Fair copy of a poem," here reproduced). "The model upon which Ruskin's handwriting was at last formed was his mother's. . . . In the note-book in which he composed verses from 1831 to 1838 you can see the development of his hand from a spiky and cramped boyish scribble (XXXV. 72, 121) to the more open and slightly more upright style of 1835 and 1836 (the year of his matriculation at Oxford); a neat and educated penmanship, easy to read and regular, though differing slightly from day to day in size and slope. The backward switch of his y and forward toss of the tail to his angular t are already there; and the dainty shaping of capitals, based on Italic or Elzevir print, like his mother's, with suggestion of the serif in a little elegant curl to H and F. . . . At Oxford his writing became rather larger and looser, perhaps from Latin exercises in which indubitable distinctness is required." The page of a fair copy of The Poetry of Architecture in I. 140 is a good example; at XXXV. 72 is another page. "You note the tendency to round the foot of the down-stroke and the length of the greater limbs of the letters. He used to tell his secretary to take no notice of a letter in which h and l looked like n and e."

In the period of the earlier part of Modern Painters, he adopted a smaller hand; and the character is intermediate between that of the Poetry of Architecture and his later style. The facsimiles in Modern Painters, vol. i., show it (III. 89, 256), and that from Stones of Venice, here given, is the same. By the time of the third volume of Modern Painters "the regular and tight spikiness begins to disappear" (V. 80). It must be to this period that an anecdote told by Mr. W. M. Rossetti refers. "My brother was one day in a picture-gallery (perhaps the National Gallery), and he took out of his pocket, for perusal, a letter recently received from Ruskin. Some person (unknown to Rossetti) passed by, and gave a glance at the handwriting, and he then said to my brother: 'Will you excuse me for saying that, in passing, my eye happened to fall upon that letter, and, being an expert in handwriting, I cannot resist the conviction that the writer must be one of the most remarkable men living: might I inquire who it is?'" (Ruskin, Rossetti, and Pre-Raphaelitism, p. 11). The later handwriting, with its greater freedom and "far-flung curves," appears in all the later facsimiles, which show little differences other than between better and worse, and more and less regular.

The Manchester City Art Gallery. Catalogue of the Ruskin Exhibition. Spring 1904.—Sixteenmo, pp. 8 (unnumbered)+150, in grey paper wrappers. The words of the title-page, as above, are reproduced on the front, with "a Cotoneaster by Ruskin, being a companion to the drawing given to the late Queen for her Jubilee." (See XXV., Plates xxx., xxxi.)

The exhibition was arranged, and the catalogue written, by W. G. Collingwood. "Room I. His Student Days," Nos. 1–60 drawings from the age of 10 to 21. "The next groups of exhibits (61–82) illustrate the connection of Ruskin's still-life drawing of plant-forms, etc., with that of his friend, William Hunt." The next group (83–106) consisted of drawings by Ruskin in the Cunliffe collection, hung together by request of the lender. Other drawings by Ruskin, Nos. 107–115: "Room II. Examples of the work of artists, ancient and modern, in illustration of Ruskin's writings" (Nos. 116–134). "Examples of Turner and of Ruskin's Study of Turner's works," Nos. 135–185. Examples of the English Pre-Raphaelites, Nos. 186–205. Copies of Old Masters praised by Ruskin, Nos. 206–217. "Room III. Ruskin's work of the Modern Painters, Seven Lamps, and Stones of Venice period," Nos. 218–322. "Room IV. Ruskin as Teacher. Chiefly later drawings in the time of his professorship at Oxford, with examples of artists he recommended to students, and of pupils taught by him," Nos. 323–431. Ruskiniana, MSS. and books, 432–448; Annuals, etc., to which he contributed, 449–470; early editions of Ruskin's works, etc., 471–487; autograph letters, 488–493; various Ruskiniana, 494–507; various Ruskin books and blocks, etc., 508–542.

The Catalogue contains some notes by Ruskin on his drawings: these are included in the Catalogue of Drawings, below.

Also a few other Ruskiniana, here appended:—

359. Elm-Bark and Ivy (by George Allen): "Study by my pupil-assistant, Mr. G. Allen, from nature; elm-bark and ivy. The ivy leaves are touched with the brush, all the rest is worked entirely with the point (steel pen with Prussian blue and black), the whole intended as a study for practice in etching. Exquisite where completed, but wanting in breadth" (1859).

471. Presentation copy of Rogers's Italy, with the poet's autograph inscription, "To John Ruskin, Esq., with the sincere regard of the author"; and on another leaf, "The second of two copies given by the author to me with his autograph. Given by me, with kind regards, to Arthur Burgess, 1869. J. Ruskin."

473. Modern Painters, vol. i., ed. 5, with Ruskin's inscription: "J. Ruskin to Dante G. Rossetti, with sincere and respectful regards, 1855."

510. Aratra Pentelici, 1872, with early unlettered plates, inscribed: "Arthur Burgess, with John Ruskin's love and thanks, 24th August, 1872."

Farrar. Ruskin as a Religious Teacher. By the Very Rev. F. W. Farrar. Reprinted from St. George (below, p. 126).

Second edition, 1907; third (reset, Chatto & Windus, pp. 62), 1909.

Richards. Address delivered before the Men's Class of the Asylum Hill Congregational Church, Hartford, Connecticut. By Alfred T. Richards, January 10, 1904. A pamphlet, pp. 15 (no imprint), in white paper wrappers, lettered as above on the front cover. The Address, entitled "The Afterglow of a Great Man's Life," is a biographical sketch of Ruskin.

On p. 10 is a letter from Ruskin (XXXIV. 504); on p. 11 the following anecdote:—"Mr. Ruskin would often repair to Mr. Taphouse [a pianoforte dealer in Oxford], and ask him to play some chords on an old harpsichord. The music would put Mr. Ruskin into a kind of day-dream, or ecstatic state; 'then,' said Mr. Taphouse, 'his talk I can describe no otherwise than as the beautiful reverie of an angel.'"

International Art Congress, Venice, 1905. A Souvenir of the Ruskin Commemoration held in the Ducal Palace, September 21. Facsimiled from the Manuscript of "The Stones of Venice" and the Seal of Francesco Foscari in the possession of Mr. George Allen.—Foolscap, pp. 4. Issued for private circulation; folded and enclosed in an envelope, lettered "Ruskin Commemoration, Venice, September 21, 1905."

Thus lettered on p. 1; on p. 2, facsimile of MS. of Stones of Venice, i. ch. 1, § 1 (this is the fair copy of the MS. of an earlier draft facsimiled in IX., between pp. 16, 17); on p. 3, facsimile of MS. of Stones of Venice, ii. ch. 5, closing passage—here reproduced; on p. 4, the Doge's seal.

The Catalogue, principally concerned with the general contents of the Museum, comprises the following Ruskiniana:—

A catalogue of drawings by Ruskin, exhibited at the Museum; collated below, p. 222.

List of Ruskin MSS. and sketch-books, also there exhibited; collated below, pp. 197 seq.

"124 Minerals given by Mr. Ruskin in 1884 and described by him."—XXVI. 516–518

Chap. I. The Quarry.

§ 1. Time first the dominion of men was asserted over the Ocean. Three thrones of earth beyond all others, have been set upon its sands: the thrones of Tyre, Venice, and England. Of the first of these great powers only the memory remains; of the second the ruin; the Third which inherits their greatness, if it forget their example, may be led through powder eminence to less fitted destruction.

The Profusion, Exaltation, the Sin, and the Punishment of Tyre have been recorded for us, in perhaps the most touching words ever uttered by the Prophets of Israel against the Cities of the stranger: But we read them as a lovely Song: and draw our ears to the sternness of their warning: for the very depth of the Fall of Tyre has blinded us to its reality, and we forget, as we watch the bleaching of the rocks between the sunshine and the sea, that they were once "as in Eden the Garden of God."

Her Successor, like her in Profusion of beauty, though less in Endurance of dominion, is still left for our beholding in the final period of her decline; a Ghost upon the sands of the sea - so weak - so quiet - so breath of all but her lookings, that we might well doubt, as we watched her faint reflection in the mirage of the lagoon, which was the City and which the Shadow.

I would endeavour to trace the lines of this mirage before it be for ever lost, and to read, as far as I may, the Warning which seems to me to be uttered by every one of the fast gaining waves, that beat like passing bells, against the Stones of Venice.

§ 2. It would be difficult to estimate the value of this before which might be derived from a faithful study of the history of this strange and mighty city, a history which in spite of the labour of countless Chroniclers, remains in vague and disputable outline - buried Christian Cherfils. Canon de Turner: Essai de Synthèse critique des Théories picturales de Ruskin. Thèses néo-ruskiniennes. Paris, Léon Vanier.—Pp. 106.

Those are Neo-Ruskinians, says the author, who recognise in Ruskin a critic as well as a poet, but who in accepting the general spirit of his doctrine do not hold themselves debarred from passing judgment on the letter. Ruskin remains the best critic of Turner; but his work on Turner is a forest. The object of the author is to find a clear path through it, and to bring into relief the principles of R.'s "canon of Turner."

M. PERIODICALS AND PROCEEDINGS WHOLLY OR PRINCIPALLY DEVOTED TO RUSKINIANA

(i.) PAPERS OF RUSKIN SOCIETIES

This section of the Bibliography is probably incomplete, as the Papers of the numerous Ruskin Societies are not to be found in any public library, and are difficult to collect.

For a general note on the formation of such Societies, see XXXIII. xxvii. and n. For a letter by Ruskin on the earliest of them (Manchester), XXXIV. 539.

Among publications of the Manchester "Ruskin Society (Society of the Rose)," there are:—

A "Preliminary Statement" (a printed fly-sheet).—Also a second and longer issue of the same.

A fly-sheet, containing a reprint of a notice of the Society from the Manchester City News, March 8, 1879.

A similar reprint from the Manchester Guardian, March 27, 1879.

A Prospectus, 4 pp., dated "Christmas 1879"; headed "The Ruskin Society. | Society of the Rose," with an extract from Ruskin's letter. The following extract shows the objects of the Society:—

"The Ruskin Society finds the occasion of its existence in the need felt by a few students for associated sympathy through which to gain expression for the manifold thought and feelings evoked by the deep and sincere words of the famous Art Critic and writer on Political Economy. The teachings of Mr. Ruskin, the more they are really understood, seemed to reach the heart of things with the touch as of Ithuriel's spear; and the conviction grew, therefore, that the power which could see the good and evil that are in the world so clearly and so strongly, must be vitally related to the power which could describe an availing remedy for the one, while it set forth with rare felicity the true nature and claims of the other."

"Mr. Ruskin and St. Mark's, Venice." A reprint from the Manchester Examiner, December 6, 1879.

R. Bailey Walker's account of Ruskin.—See below, p. 147.

First Annual Report, May 1880.—Octavo, pp. 12, in yellow or grey paper wrappers.

Second Annual Report, 1881.—Octavo, pp. 12, in grey paper wrappers.

Syllabus, 1881-2, 4 pp., on pink paper.

Third Annual Report, read February 13th, 1882. Octavo, pp. 16, in grey paper wrappers.

At first, the central "Society of the Rose" at Manchester had "Centres" in London, Glasgow, and other places. In 1881 a separate "Ruskin Society of London" was established, which issued a 4 pp. prospectus; a First Annual Report (1881), 8vo, pp. 8, in grey paper wrappers; Second Annual Report (1882), do.; Third Annual Report (1883), do. Reports (in buff paper wrappers) for the session 1890-1891 and 1891-1892; and in white paper wrappers for 1893-1894. Among other papers may be mentioned:—

"Dr. Bayne on Ruskin" (a quarto sheet, printed on one side only).

Catalogue of Books belonging to the R. Society of London, November 1894.

"The Ruskin Society of Glasgow" issued in 1879 a prospectus, 8vo, pp. 8, in yellow paper wrappers.—See XXXIII. xxvii. n.

The "Birkenhead Ruskin Society" issued a Report, 1881-2, 8vo, pp. 12, in brown paper wrappers.—See XXXIII. xxvii. n.

(ii.) MAGAZINES OF RUSKIN UNIONS, GUILDS, ETC.

The Ruskin Reading Guild Journal. Edited by William Marwick. Volume I. 1889. George Allen, etc. (Printed at the Arbroath Herald Office.) Small quarto, pp. 384+xi. Issued in twelve monthly numbers, price 6d. each, with Green's photograph of Ruskin (1885) as frontispiece to the volume.

The Editorial Note (p.1) explains that hitherto (Nov. 1887 to Dec. 1888) the Journal appeared in MS. form. The printed Journal was to be the organ of the various Ruskin Societies, and of the "Ruskin Reading Circle"; and a large part of the contents of the vol. are occupied with the proceedings of those bodies. The following Ruskiniana may be particularised:—

"Sonnet to John Ruskin," by H.T. W[har]ton, p. 33.

"Langdale Linen Industry," by Albert Fleming, pp. 37–38.

"The Ruskin Cabinet—Whitelands College," pp. 62–63, 65, 143–145, 368–371.—Also separately printed, see above, p. 17.

"The Missal of Kaiser Max," by W. G. Collingwood, pp. 65–69, 97–101, 132–136, 193–197, 241–245.—See XXX. 251.

"The Ruskin May Queen Festival, Whitelands College, May 1, 1889," by Annie Turner, 166–169.

"Mr. Ruskin and the Rose Queen," 169–171.

"Unpublished Note by Mr. Ruskin," 184.—XXX. 357.

"Mr. Ruskin as Social Reformer," by S. Josephine Harris, 205–209, 225–229, 257–261.

"The Re-Issue of Modern Painters," 220–224.—Correspondence printed also separately, see p. 114.

"Recent Paintings and Ruskin's Principles," by W. G. Collingwood, 273–275.

"The late Mrs. Ewing and the Elements of Drawing," 280. See below.

"Ruskin on Childhood and Children," by R. Bird, 289–294, 335–338, 355–359.

A "Supplement to the Ruskin Reading Guild Journal, February 8, 1889," pp. i.–xi., contains "John Ruskin. An outline of his Life and System," by J. Marshall Mather, and a "Birthday Address to Mr. Ruskin" as follows:—

"We, the undersigned, offer our heartfelt congratulations to Mr. Ruskin on his Seventieth Birthday, and fervently hope that he may be spared for many years to instruct, delight, and guide the ever-increasing number of his Disciples." The address was signed by members of the St. George's Guild, Carlyle Society, Glasgow Ruskin Society, Liverpool Ruskin Society, Ruskin Reading Guild, and various "Unattached" persons.

Of the Ruskin Reading Guild, under that title, only vol. i. was issued; it was continued as—Igdrasil.¹ Journal of the Ruskin Reading Guild. A Magazine of Literature, Art, and Social Philosophy. Edited by William Marwick and Kineton Parkes. Volume I. January to September, 1890. George Allen.

Octavo, pp. 392, issued in nine monthly numbers. (Printed by Hazell, Watson, and Viney.)

Igdrasil continued the work of its predecessor as a "medium of intercommunication" for the Ruskin Societies. In Volume I. the following Ruskiniana may be particularised:—

"Letters by Ruskin not republished in Arrows of the Chace," 81–87, 121–126, 169–176, 209–219, 249–255, 297–306, 345–350 (afterwards collected in a volume, Ruskiniana, see above, p. 21).

"The Genesis of Modern Painters," by W. G. Collingwood, 3–9.

"A Few Words about Jeremias Gotthelf," by Julia Firth, 20–23.

"The Philosophy of Modern Painters," by W. G. Collingwood, 42–50.

"The Influence of Reynolds on Ruskin," by W. G. Collingwood, 126–131.

"Social Problems: Socialism and the Teaching of Mr. Ruskin," by Henry Rose, 131–135, 176–181, 286–288, 310–314, 375–378; also in vol. ii. 74–75, 105–111. Reprinted in The New Political Economy, 1891 (below, p. 161).

"Supplement to Igdrasil, May 1890," pp. xvi. "The Ruskin Museum, Meersbrook, Sheffield."—An account of the opening ceremony: see XXX. 324–327.

"Ruskin and Reynolds, their Theories of Art," by W. G. Collingwood, 219–225.

"Ruskin May-Day Festival, 1890," by Mary Birch, 228–234. (Among those present on this occasion were Ruskin's friends, the Duchess of Albany and Lady Mount-Temple.)

"Rose Queen Festival," 234–239.

"May Festivals at Blackheath and Warley," 240–245.

"The purport of Modern Painters," by W. G. Collingwood, 314–319.

The article contained the following address presented to Ruskin on his eightieth birthday:—“The Ruskin Rose Queens of the Cork High School, on behalf of their maidens and subjects, send their most affectionate greetings and congratulations to their dear Friend on his eightieth birthday. They recognise the bright and joyous festival as the outcome of his love of beauty and his desire to increase the happiness of human beings, and especially of those in the threshold of life’s duties and responsibilities. They rejoice, too, that he has ever sought by precept and practice to encircle the Girlhood of their Kingdom with a fringe of flowers.”

Ruskin Union Journal. London: The Ruskin Union. Treasurer: 7 Pall Mall—Honorary Secretary, E 4, The Albany, Piccadilly. No. 1 March 1900.—Quarto, pp. 48, issued in greenish paper wrappers, lettered on the front as above, the words “Ruskin Union Journal” being enclosed in a circle of olive.

An “Introductory Note” explained that the Journal was to be the organ of a Ruskin Union, affiliating the various Ruskin Societies, etc. A report of the Inaugural Meeting of the Union, with correspondence relating thereto, occupies pp.4–12. The following Ruskiniana were also included:—

“The Life and Work of John Ruskin,” by Rev. J. B. Booth, 13–24.

“After Twenty-Five Years, John Ruskin and the Royal Institute of British Architects. Three Hitherto suppressed Ruskin Letters,” 25–28.—XXXIV. 513–516.

No second number was issued, the Ruskin Union henceforth adopting Saint George as its journal, which accordingly revised its title-page as follows:—

 “The Relation of Science to Art,” by R. Warwick Bond, 250–270.
 “Some Personal Recollections of John Ruskin,” by Selwyn Image, 287–301:—

Of Ruskin's Oxford lectures, Mr. Image says: “I have heard in my time many speakers of high repute, but never one that gave me the same sense of what I may call genius for the art of speaking, quite apart from the value of the thoughts uttered. It used to be said of Savonarola that when he preached his physical presence seemed actually to be enlarged. I would say the same thing about Ruskin. . . . Always beginning in a low voice, slowly and quietly, he grew more and more full of sparkle and vigour as he proceeded. But he never lost command of himself, or became the plaything of his eloquence. Towards the end of his lecture he generally grew more quiet. Those perorations, those incomparable perorations, were delivered very gravely, with the most exquisite sense of cadence, of rhythmical modulation. Everybody, of course, looked forward to them. Ruskin knew that quite well himself. I remember an amusing instance of it. . . . Drawing himself up and looking straight at his audience, his face half reproachful, half a gleam with malicious fun—‘Ladies and gentlemen,’ he said, ‘there is to be no peroration to-day. I know you think I take immense pains with these endings. I do take immense pains with them. But they are not what I want you to come and listen to me for. So to-day we will have none.’ And he abruptly stopped.”

Of a sketching lesson at Hincksey: “A rude little brat of a child held out a stick with a dead snake at the end of it. ‘I say, guv'nor, draw this,’ shouted impudence. ‘My dear child, I should be delighted to,’ gravely answered the professor—‘if I had time,’ and went on placidly with his work.”

Of his first introduction to Ruskin's drawing-class: “‘Mr. Image, why, you have been sitting all the while with your face to the light—let us change places.’ The words and action were simple enough, but what a world of delicate consideration was in them! They put one at ease in a moment—as much at ease as a shy youth could be in the presence of a great man he worshipped.”

Of Ruskin's drawing of Laurel (No. 8 in the Educational Series, XXI. 75): “A fine drawing with a brush, full of Ruskin's characteristic nervous handling. What little training I had had before was under the old South Kensington system. Nervous, sensitive handling was not encouraged under that system: the thing was to draw hard outlines, hard as nails. Into such hard outlines I did actually have the audacity to translate this splendid drawing of Ruskin's with the purely conceited intention of showing off my firmness of hand. By-and-by Ruskin came round and looked. He said only a few quiet words, but I can assure you they effectually killed my conceit. Then he took the brush into his hand, and showed me what kind of touch was worth having, what kind of line and form was fine or not fine, and wherein lay the splendid quality of design in this Apollo's sceptre. . . . Whatever small power of Design I may possess, I date the dawn of it from that lesson.”

“A remark on Michelangelo, quoted as from a private letter on p. 294, occurs in Ruskin's preface to Christian Art and Symbolism, XXII. 110.

N. RUSKINIANA

A Chronological List of Newspapers, Magazines, Books, etc., containing Reviews of Ruskin's Books, General Criticisms, Reminiscences, and other Ruskiniana

FOR the principles of selection adopted in this section of the Bibliography, see the Introduction, above, pp. xvii.–xviii.

It should be noted that many "Ruskiniana" are included in volumes which, in virtue of other contents, figure elsewhere in the Bibliography. Some of the volumes of Ruskin's letters, for instance, contain interesting reminiscences in prefaces, etc.; and a similar remark applies to many Reports of Lectures.

It should be noted further that books, periodicals, and newspapers containing Letters from Ruskin are not here included unless they contain other Ruskiniana as well. Thus, a collector should compare this section N. with sections E. and F., and with the Bibliography of Private Letters in XXXVII. 617–739.

Even with these qualifications, the number of separate items recorded in this section N. is 1200.

"Extract," or "Extracts," followed by references, means that at the places indicated extracts are printed.

Alison. History of Europe from the Fall of Napoleon to the Accession of Louis Napoleon in MDCCCLII. By Sir Archibald Alison. Vol. i., 1853.

On p. 495 (in ch. v., dealing with Literature and the Arts), Alison describes Turner's later works as "the works of genius run mad," and continues: "There is only one consolation in reflecting on this running riot of so much talent—and that is, that it has elicited the genius, and displayed the taste and vivid powers of description of his accomplished advocate, Mr. Ruskin, who, in attempting to defend his extravagances, has only caused his ingenuity to be the more admired, that it has obviously been exerted in an indefensible cause. His great and varied genius and taste appear equally conspicuous in the Seven Lamps of Architecture, one of the most profound and original works of the kind in the English language."

Hogg's Instructor (Edinburgh), November, N.S., vol. i. "John Ruskin," pp. 434–447.

Reprinted in The Eclectic Magazine of Foreign Literature (New York), January 1854, vol. 31, pp. 65–78. Enthusiastic: "his powers are mighty and his mission great."

Gentleman's Magazine, March, N.S., vol. 43, p. 285.

In a report of proceedings at the Society of Antiquaries (February 1), it is mentioned that the Society had, on the proposal of R., decided to form a fund for the Preservation of Mediæval Buildings and other Monuments. A Memorandum embodying the objects of this “Conservation Fund” (a forerunner of William Morris's Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings) appears in the same Magazine for June, pp. 616–617: though embodying R.'s ideas on “restoration,” it does not suggest his style.

 Hamerton: A Painter’s Camp and Thoughts about Art. By Philip Gilbert
 Hamerton. 2 vols.
 This book contains much criticism, for the most part appreciative, of Ruskin; see, e.g., vol. ii. pp. 15, 155–159, 243–296 (“Colour-Painting and Word-Painting”). Hamerton says very truly that most of the reviews of R. are travesties of his real teaching; his own verdict is that “so far as concerns the art of painting, Mr. R.’s opinion is the most reliable opinion to be had at this day in Europe.” He refers to Unto this Last as “those lamentable sermons in the Cornhill, showing the author’s resolute determination to destroy his own reputation.”
 Patterson. Essays in History and Art. By R. H. Patterson. Edinburgh: Blackwood.
 “Battle of the Styles,” pp. 331–350, “written on the delivery of Mr. Ruskin’s lectures in Edinburgh.” A plea for Greek v. Gothic; the essay concludes with a “Bah” of disgust at the high place claimed by R. for Turner.

Hamerton. Etching and Etchers. By Philip Gilbert Hamerton. London: Macmillan. "Ruskin," pp. 100–111.

First, a general account of Ruskin as an Etcher, pp. 101–107; then detailed criticism of particular Plates (in Seven Lamps and Modern Painters), 107–111. "No architectural draughtsman whom I can name, with the one glorious exception of Méryon, has ever drawn buildings in a way comparable" to R. On p. 102, Hamerton says: "I was looking through the portfolios of an eminent painter who is usually very severe in his criticism of Mr. R., and finding one of the best soft-ground etchings in the Seven Lamps, I thought the opportunity a good one for bringing my friend to admit some artistic capacity in the etcher. He entirely agreed in all I had to say of the plate, but answered me with the following syllogism: 'A man ignorant of art cannot produce a good etching; R. is ignorant of art; □ R. has not produced this etching.']"

The Young Woman, February, vol. 2, 161–162. Illustrated interview with John Strange Winter (Mrs. Standard).

This interview contains some reminiscences of Ruskin; also the following, in connexion with Ruskin's letter to the Daily Telegraph, January 9, 1888, "Ceasing to be English" (XXXIV. 613):—

One day (at Sandgate) he said: "I am going to write another letter to the Telegraph, which will wake people up, and I want you to get me some statistics about the armament of the British troops, about the bayonets that twisted and the swords that snapped. I also want you to give me your ideas about the death of the Prince Imperial." Mrs. Standard did not give the statistics, and the letter was not written.

McClure's Magazine (New York), March, vol. 2, 316–317. “John Ruskin at Home,” by M. H. Spielmann.

London, April 19. “What Londoners read.”

An article founded upon inquiries made at the Free Public Libraries in London. “We are glad to record that the democracy believes in Ruskin. With all works which appertain to art it is Ruskin first and the rest nowhere. Some of his works are as seldom ‘in’ as the best known novels. . . . If we were to say who was the most popular author in political economy and sociology, it would be Ruskin.”

Westminster Budget, October 21. “Mr. Ruskin at Brantwood.”

A similar glimpse—of Ruskin walking out.

British Weekly, 1894:—

“Mr. Ruskin has occupied a part of his time lately in the perusal of Mr. S. R. Crockett's The Stickit Minister—the idioms with which the work abounds doubtless proving rather difficult of enunciation to the friends who usually read to him—and has written an appreciative and friendly letter to the author.”

Leisure Hour, vol. 44, 762–764. “The Picture Galleries of the Memory,” by the Rev. F. A. Malleston.

Description of “a walk with Mr. Ruskin” (cf. XXXIV. 216 n.). Mr. Malleston describes the Professor rushing in from the kitchen with his usual affectionate greeting, but without his coat, and with traces of flour whitening his clothes. He had been engaged more so in a study of contorted strata in great rocks and in little agates by means of alternate layers of cochineal-stained pink and white pie paste, which being rolled tightly down in three successive layers, were then compressed laterally and cut across with a sharp knife.”

January 22. Ruskin died on Saturday, January 20, and the daily papers of Monday, January 22, contained obituary notices, leading articles, etc. On following days there was discussion as to his place of burial. It is needless to enumerate all the articles and notes; among the more considerable biographies, appreciations, etc., were the following:—

Christian World, reminiscences “From a Lady Disciple”: for some extracts from letters, see Addenda, below, p. 331.

Temps (Paris), by M. Abel Chevalley: “With R. disappears one of the great intellectual and moral forces of the present age. He represented an aggregate of philosophical and social tendencies of which the influence was immense on the thought and life of England and the world during the last half of the nineteenth century. It was in very truth a religion which he founded—a religion not so much of beauty as of harmony, the virtues of which cannot but be social.”

Times, memoir; leading article, extract IV. xlvii. n.

St. James’s Gazette, January 23. The following anecdote of Ruskin:—

“About the middle of the seventies, 1875 or 1876, an elderly gentleman, passing through the picturesque little town of Ashbourne, Derbyshire, paid a visit to its fine old parish church. The sexton, who was dusting the seats (it was a Saturday afternoon), was somewhat alarmed by the visitor’s sharply calling his attention to a very fine lancet window in the chancel. ‘Look at that window,’ he cried; ‘it’s positively shameful! It’s disgraceful!’ The poor man was staggered for the moment. He stammered out, ‘I keep ‘em as clean as I can, sir, but the old vicar as put in them windows told me not to meddle with the painted glass for fear I should damage ‘em!’ ‘Your old vicar ought to have been ashamed of himself,’ said the stranger, ‘for putting in such a ghastly daub. Why, it would disgrace a penny edition of Jack the Giant Killer!’ The subject of the window was David and Goliath. In the evening the new vicar, who had just been appointed to the living, received a long letter bearing on the same topic, and also expressing the writer’s disgust at finding the lovely valley through which he had travelled made hideous with the smoke and noise of ‘a beastly railway engine.’ The letter was signed ‘John Ruskin.’”

The anthem was Mrs. Browning’s “He giveth His Beloved Sleep”; the hymn, “Now the labourer’s task is o’er.”

The Nation (New York), January 25, vol. 70, 66–68. A notice of Ruskin

January 26. Ruskin was buried at Coniston on Thursday, January 25, the memorial service at Westminster Abbey being held at the same time. The daily papers contained notices of one or other or both of the services.

January 27 (Saturday). The weekly papers contained notices of Ruskin, and appreciations of his life and work. Here, again, it is needless to enumerate them all; among them may be mentioned:—

Academy, various notes, and a facsimile of five lines of the MS. of "The Black Arts."

Black and White, by May Bateman. For collation of Ruskin letters in this article, see XXXVII. 620; reminiscences, XXXIV. 716–717.

Speaker, by J. Comyns Carr.

British Medical Journal, January 27. "Mr. Ruskin's Illness described by himself," by H., p. 225. "H." was possibly Dr. Harley. This curious piece is as follows:—

"During my first illness of wild delirium—for I have had several such attacks, but the first was by far the worst—the voice of the fowls was an inexpressible terror to me. Ridiculous as it may seem, my madness took the form of my ever being in conflict, more or less personal, with the Evil One. I had at that time an old peacock who was good for nothing—and bad for very much; for at that season of the year the weather was abominable, and he was for ever foretelling rain with his ugly, croaking voice. I was lying ill upstairs, and so quickly flew my thoughts (I have since in my subsequent attacks, which were much less severe, been able to verify this extraordinary psychological fact, which proves how the Creator of all can subdivide time infinitesimally) that every time he croaked I thought I was in a farmyard and that I was impelled by the tyrant Devil to do some fearful wrong, which I strove with all my might and main to resist. But my passionate efforts were of no avail; and every time I did the wrong I heard the voice of the Demon—that is, the peacock—give forth a loud croak of triumph. And this was more terrible than I can express in words.

"In the first instance, when the illness first came upon me, I seemed to be aware of what was about to happen. I became powerfully impressed with the idea that the Devil was about to seize me, and I felt convinced that the only way to meet him was to remain awake waiting for him all through the night, and combat him in a naked condition. I therefore threw off all my clothing, although it was a bitterly cold February night, and there awaited the Evil One. Of course, all this now seems absurd and comical enough, but I cannot express to you the anguish and torture of mind that I then sustained. I walked up and down my room, to which I had retired about eleven o'clock, in a state of great agitation, entirely resolute as to the approaching struggle. Thus I marched about my little room, growing every moment into a state of greater and greater exaltation; and so it went on until the dawn began to break, which, at that time of year, was rather late, about half-past seven o'clock. It seemed to me very strange that that, of which I had such a terrible and irresistible conviction, had not come to pass.

"I walked across towards the window in order to make sure that the feeble blue light was really the heralding of the grey dawn, wondering at the non-appearance of my expected visitor. As I put forth my hand towards the window a large black cat sprang forth from behind the mirror! Persuaded that the foul fiend was here at last in his own person, though in so insignificant a form, I darted at it, as the best thing to do under the critical circumstances, and grappled with it with both my hands, and gathering all the strength that was in me, I flung it with all my might and main against the floor

"A dull thud—nothing more. No malignant spectre arose which I pantingly looked for—nothing happened. I had triumphed! Then, worn out with bodily fatigue, with benumbed with the bitter cold of a freezing February night, I threw myself upon the bed, all unconscious, and there I was found later on in the morning in a state of prostration and bereft of my senses.

"I lay like that for a fortnight, during which I was in a state of wild delirium, and when at last I began to regain consciousness, the most fearful thoughts took possession of me. Demons appeared to me constantly, coming out of the darkness and forming themselves gradually into corporeal shapes, almost too horrible to think of. But even worse and more torturing than these were the fantastic, malignant, and awful imps and devils and witches that formed themselves out of various articles in the room. The knob on the top of one of the bedposts of my little bedstead was continually turning into a leering, gibbering witch; and so forcibly did the likeness burn into my mind that I have since sketched the Old Lady. I will show her to you later on.

“There is a marvellous fact in connection with my illness which I believe is common to all who have suffered from the same disease; while all ugly things assume fearfully and horribly hideous forms, all beautiful objects appear ten times more lovely. Thus my Turner drawings, of which there are about a score upon the walls, and which are absolutely perfect as they are, seemed a thousand times more lovely, the colours brighter, and they looked in their splendour more like pictures of Heaven than of earth. The same applies to pretty patterns in materials, such as the borders on my window-curtains, or the wall-paper.”

“May not this in some degree have been due to your æsthetic sense being more highly developed than most people’s?” I asked.

“No; I am persuaded it is not,” he replied. “It affects every one alike. In the other attacks, which, as I told you before, were not so severe, I always knew what was coming; and whilst they were upon me, I could examine and analyse their nature, as if I were carrying out an independent investigation; and, observe, in every case these illnesses have been brought on not by overwork, as many have supposed, but by acute mental suffering or misfortune.”

“I have sometimes wondered,” proceeded Mr. Ruskin, more slowly, and seeming to weigh his thoughts as he spoke, “whether the peculiar habit of some persons who are for ever striving to find a resemblance, or fancy they do, between what they see and something quite different, which they ought not to be thinking about at all, if they would only rightly understand what they are looking at, can be a variation in a mild form of this disease, or whether it is merely the natural perversity of their foolish dispositions. Shakespeare evidently understood the symptom when he placed that wonderful touch of Nature in poor Hamlet’s mouth. Yet entirely healthy persons sometimes make a practice of it. Why, when I took my two little wards on a tour through Switzerland, many years ago, there was nothing they saw—neither leaf, nor stone, nor pool, nor mountain—but what in their eyes bore resemblance to some other thing which had no sort of connection with them. So strong and continuous and unbearable did this habit become that I was obliged, for my own comfort’s sake, to silence my little fairies, almost irresistible temptations (for them) they obeyed my order until our arrival at the Rhine Falls, at Schaffhausen, when they broke into a merry peal of laughter on instantly recognizing—as indeed we all three did on the moment—the extraordinary likeness of the centre rock to Mr. Punch; and as I had joined in their laughter, they forced me to rescind my order.”

British Weekly, February 1, vol. 27, 373. “A Visit to Ruskin in 1880,” by Charles J. Guthrie (son of Dr. T. Guthrie).

Mr. Guthrie, quoting from a letter written at the time, gives the following notes of Ruskin’s conversation:—(1) Remarks on the Zulu War, quoted, XXXV. 725. (2) “I told him the story of the Northern Admiral who said, referring to his son, an officer in a Southern frigate, ‘I never know but every gun I fire may kill my boy.’ Ruskin remarked, ‘Yes, that was very dreadful, but it was very noble. He knew all that; and yet, because he thought it his duty, he fired the guns.’” (3) “Of Uncle Tom’s Cabin he said: ‘A strange commotion that book of Mrs. Stowe’s made, describing nothing but how a black woman secured her freedom and safety by flying with her child to Canada. Why, in this boasted country of ours, poor women every day are much worse off. There is nothing for them but to poison their children!’” In showing his illuminated books, Ruskin “pointed out the difference between the free and bold drawing of the foreign, and the stiffness of the English. ‘We have always been a stiff-necked people—hearts of oak, and frequently heads of oak, too!’” The article ends with an anecdote of Dr. John Brown and Ruskin, cited in XXXV. 723.

Drawing of Fribourg (167).—II. Plate xxiv.

Letters from J. J. Ruskin to W. Smith Williams (p. 169). These are interesting; the date is 1856:—

"I see that you consider my son may now number his foes—Edinburgh, Quarterly, Blackwood, Athenæum,—with smaller fry, Art Journal and Illustrated News. I hope the remaining journals may neutralise the effects of these. If we put praise and abuse together, I know no writer of the day more frequently mentioned, a proof he obtains more than usual attention."

"A learned gentleman was saying lately at the Dean of Christ Church's table that Ruskin was terribly cut up in the Edinburgh and Quarterly. The Dean [Liddell] quietly replied the Edinburgh article was not worth naming, and the Quarterly one, no man with a heart in his body could have written”

“I wonder, all things considered, at the influence of these quarterly and other Reviews. They are mere advertisements or battlefields—Macaulay v. Croker, and Croker v. Macaulay. My son values the small mention of his name by the foreigner Montalembert¹ more than all the approvals in the Reviews. He has set to work for his fifth volume, although most of the day is passed among the hills. His guide says he goes over the Alps like a chamois. The tide of adverse criticism does not overwhelm him; on the contrary, he says he will make Modern Painters a profitable book for you.”

“In my dumb and blind childhood in a country village the volumes of Modern Painters found me and gave me speech and sight. To no man do I owe more, probably to none so much, of the transforming and vivifying gifts which make life a live thing to a young man.”

Atlantic Monthly, April, vol. 85, 568–576. “The Contributors’ Club.”

This article consists of (1) “Recollections of Ruskin” (568–570), by “a girl fresh from an American College” who attended R.’s lectures at Oxford in 1884.

(2) “Ruskin as a Lecturer” (571–572), “notes of face and manner taken at the time” by one who attended the same course: “Mr. R.’s manner has a happy mixture of force and gentleness, but the force makes itself felt first. The one surprise which a face-to-face auditor must feel is the strength of his sense of humour. It is with a sense of relief that, when we hear the merciless invective against the modern spirit, we see its delivery accompanied with a twinkle of the eyes and a good-natured curve of the lips that modify its sting.”

(3) “Ruskin and the Hincksey Diggers” (pp. 572–576), by one “who came in the seventies under the personal spell of the Master” [Canon H. D. Rawnsley]. The writer describes how Ruskin first unfolded his idea to Mr. J. R. Anderson in February 1874 (“1873” in error in the Atlantic); and how the first twelve diggers, all from Balliol, breakfasted with the Professor (see XX. xlii.). Ruskin, between those occasions, was at Brantwood, and “wrote playfully that, however faithless it might seem, he was not Browning’s Lost Leader, but would yet meet his guests and claim leadership of a cause that was not lost.” Mr. Rawnsley then gives an extract from the letter to Mr. J. R. Anderson, printed in XXXVII. 85, and continues: “How deep and real was his interest in the plan is evidenced by the minute and careful instructions he penned at Genoa and Rome. His instructions relate first to the filling up of certain hollows, to the putting in of certain drains, to the turfing and planting of certain banks with wild flowers; but he asks for special care for the mosses and ferns that are, he remembers, growing in certain cottage steps, and suggests that some one shall be told off to be the peculiar guardian angel of all gentle life of flower and moss and fern which it is desirable to conserve. The filth in the back streets of Genoa only makes him the more determined, evidently, to see to it that the squalor of Hincksey shall be removed, that so village life in decency should be possible; and in one of his letters he urges that men shall endure hardness, for that part of the gain to all the workers will be the having had to run the fire of criticism and mockery for a great idea.

“In another letter written from Rome, he says that, standing by St. Paul’s tomb, the thought had come to him how fatally the Apostle’s teaching about faith had been misrepresented, and how sure he was that if St. Paul could come on earth to-day he would approve all honest attempts to show forth faith by works.

“In a later letter he expresses a hope that his diggers may some of them band themselves together, one day, and go out in a kind of Benedictine brotherhood to cultivate waste places and make life tolerable in our great cities for the children of the poor.”

Later in the year, when Ruskin had returned to England, he joined his diggers. “I can see him,” says Mr. Rawnsley, “in blue frockcoat and blue cloth cap, with the earflaps pulled about his ears, sitting cheerily by the roadside breaking stones not only with a will but with knowledge, and cracking jokes the while.

“Not the least pleasant part of the Hincksey day’s work was the walk to and fro with the Master across the Oxford vale. . . . I remember saying to him, as we walked down the beautiful Long Walk at Christ Church, how full of wonder that living arcade of elm-like boughs was; and he replied sadly, 'My dear Rawnsley, I have lived to find that none of this beauty has any power to help a broken heart.' " Mr. Rawnsley goes on to describe R.'s enchanting manner and delightful unconventionality in the lecture room and at his breakfast parties.

“His last public act,” it is stated, “was in connection with the memorial raised by the Society in 1897 against the rebuilding of part of the west front of Peterborough Cathedral, which he had drawn as a boy. To this memorial he added a pathetic signature, traced with evident difficulty by a hand that had lost its cunning. As this will be of interest to many of our readers, it is here reproduced.” It is believed, however, that later signatures were to an address presented to Watts and to a petition on behalf of Mr. Gleeson White.

T. P.'s Weekly, April 3. "Ruskin and Emerson":—

"Ruskin wrote: 'Emerson came to my rooms a day or two ago. I found his mind a total blank on matters of art, and had a fearful sense of the whole being of him as a gentle cloud—intangible.'

"Emerson said: 'I had seen Ruskin at Oxford, and had been charmed by his manner in the lecture-room, but in talking with him at his room I found myself wholly out of sympathy with Ruskin's views of life and the world. I wonder such a genius can be possessed by so black a devil. I cannot pardon him for a despondency so deep. It is detestable in a man of such powers, in a poet, a seer such as he has been. Children are right with their everlasting hope. Timon is always inevitably wrong.'"

Mr. Fenn describes how he and a friend, another artist, met Ruskin and Millais at Glenfinlas in 1853 (see XII. xx. seq.). Mr. Fenn and his friend were “good water-dogs” and used to perform various feats in a deep pool. “I assure you, gentlemen,” said Ruskin, “I envy you more than you can conceive. I declare I would rather be able to do what I saw you do than have written my rubbishing books. To have the constitution and the strength to turn out of one’s bed on a chilly, misty morning such as we are having now, and tumble headlong into that ice-cold, noisy burn, like otters, is to possess one of the greatest gifts that God vouchsafes to man.”

The Working Men’s College Journal, May, June, vol. x. 322–328, 341–346. “Recollections of Ruskin,” by J. P. Emslie.

Mr. Emslie was a pupil in Ruskin’s drawing-class. “Ruskin had a gift for perceiving a feature, not immediately apparent, in an object, but which, secondary though it was, gave charm or character to the whole. ‘Don’t you see,’ he said one evening, ‘that lovely swell on the side of the leaf?’ ‘Yes,’ I said. ‘Well then,’ he replied, ‘you haven’t made enough of it in your drawing, and in consequence you’ve lost a piece of rich form.’ . . .

“Very often if a student, in his endeavour to represent everything, had made too much of a detail, Mr. Ruskin would make a hasty sketch on the margin of the drawing in order to show what was the general form of the object which was being drawn, and how far the drawing had deviated from that general form. I say ‘hasty sketch,’ yet the haste of the sketch was not the haste of indecision, but the haste of one who wishes to be as short a time as possible from the main work, and desires his pupil not to lose the thread of the discourse which he is making for that pupil’s instruction. These sketches were most masterly, giving the prominent features of an object in exceedingly few, slight, but most expressive touches; not one line too many, not a stroke thrown away, but nothing omitted that could tell in the representation. I am happy in being the possessor of one of these sketches. I was copying Turner’s ‘Mill near the Grande Chartreuse,’ and Mr. Ruskin pointed out to me that I had made a rock too pointed in form. ‘Look!’ he said, sketching on the margin of my paper as he spoke; ‘the rock is of that general form, with fissures in its sides, the water flows over its top and rounds that top, then runs down the clefts in its sides and wears away their edges, so that a certain roundness comes into the whole mass.’

“For a short time I leave off writing to look at this sketch, and I count the lines that compose it: thirty-eight lines, as nearly as I can make them out; they were done in about as many seconds, and the work is a splendid suggestion of a water-worn rock. Below it is a sketch of a tree, slighter and less expressive, but sufficient for the lesson which he gave me. He explained that my tree did not tell its own story sufficiently, and, as he sketched, pointed out that the tree would naturally have grown upright, but being on the side of a steep bank, it declined a little from the perpendicular; as it grew higher and became heavier from increase of branch and leafage, it declined still farther from the perpendicular, but the lower part of the trunk, being older and stronger than the upper part, was only a little out of the upright; as the branches grew, they naturally shot upward, those on the upper side of the trunk have a free course and grow fairly well, but those on the under side of the trunk fall over with it and droop more and more the nearer they are to the ground; as they near the top, they get a better chance and grow in a more normal fashion, whilst the forms of the masses of leafage on the two sides of the tree differ from each other in consequence of this difference in the growth of the branches. All this history of a life, as shown in the form of a tree, astonished at the same time that it convinced me of its truth, as he spoke and illustrated his meaning by his sketch . . .

“There was in the drawing-class room Albert Dürer’s engraving known as the Death’s Head Coat-of-Arms. To those who do not know this engraving, I may say that the prominent object in it is a large shield charged with a skull, the skull being represented, not with heraldic flatness, but in full relief, so that the great feature of the work is one of grimness. Above the shield is a helmet with a grand pair of wings for a crest. A lady stands beside the shield holding a strap, which passes over a staff and, joined to shield and helmet, holds them in their places. Slightly in the rear of the lady is satyr who, with one hand on the staff, is placing his head near to that of the lady, whose coy smile shows that she is aware that he is manœuvring to get a kiss from her. This grandly conceived and patiently executed work was put before us as an example of thoroughly good art. I once asked Ruskin what it meant. He replied that it possibly represented the arms and supporters of some noble Nürnberg family, or it might possibly be an allegory. Honour, as typified by the arms, is sustained by the lady; the satyr, typifying Evil, is endeavouring to kiss the lady; if he can succeed, he will, while her attention is diverted, snatch away the staff over which passes the strap which the lady holds, and which keeps the shield and helmet in their places, and then Honour, as symbolized by the arms, will fall to the ground

"He gave us some addresses on composition. After he had spoken he would perhaps say: 'There, now you can go and compose pictures; that is, if you have the gift. I haven't it, but know its laws and can teach them to you, leaving you to apply them, if nature has endowed you with the ability to do so.' And one evening, looking at the work of a student who was copying a group of bottles, baskets, and other objects of still life, he said: 'That's exceedingly well grouped; did you arrange that?' 'No,' was the reply, 'Mr. Dickinson grouped them.' Whereupon Mr. Ruskin remarked: 'Ah! I thought it was the work of a master. Can't you see how well those objects contrast and balance each other? That's a thing that I couldn't in the least do myself, but I know, directly I see it, when it's well done.'"

The Bookman: Ruskin Double Number, October 1908.

A miscellany containing, inter alia, "Ruskin's Position in the World of Art," by M. H. Spielmann; "John Ruskin as a Social Reformer," by J. A. Hobson; and short opinions upon "The Influence of Ruskin" by various persons: the most considerable of these is by Dr. J. B. Crozier. Two letters from Ruskin are printed at pp. 15, 16. For one of these, see XXXVIII. 610. For the other, see Addenda, p. 381.

Athenæum, October 17. An article giving "a comprehensive study of Ruskin's intellectual and moral character." It contains the following reminiscence:—

"To the writer of these lines is present while he traces them his last visit to Brantwood in 1893. Ruskin sat crouched like an old lion in his arm-chair, the fine Della Robbia Madonna above his head, a vase filled with pansies beside him, some glowing minerals on a central table, a large globe in one corner, choice books in their recessed cases. He was, as always, carefully dressed, with perhaps the extra neatness of an invalid, the historic blue tie showing through his long beard as he stroked and parted it, the eyes shining from under shaggy brows. Torpid at first and whispering, he grew animated as the interview proceeded. Pointing inquiringly to a college badge worn on his visitor's coat, he murmured some indistinct sentences about Oxford, in which Acland's name was audible. He chuckled merrily over an anecdote of an American lady, who boasted of having unloosed the tongues of silent Oxford dons at dinner-tables by begging them to explain the meaning of Fors Clavigera. He caused some of his treasured autograph Waverley Novels to be brought down, pointing out the beauty of the clear manuscript, without erasures or corrections. Of St. Ronan's Well he said as we turned the leaves, 'An unfortunate attempt.'"

Cornhill Magazine, December 1908. "A Budget of Memories," by Sir George Trevelyan.

"I have been shown over Venice," he says (p. 783), "by Ruskin as cicerone in his own gondola. It is interesting to remember that the architectural decoration to which he specially called attention in most cases dated from the Renaissance. The spirit (so he explained) in which these men worked was not the highest; but their artistic execution was perfection itself."

Chambers's Journal, January 1. "Some Celebrities I have known," by A. Stodart Walker; pp. 33–35 refer to Ruskin.

A letter from Ruskin on Scott and Scotsmen (printed in XXXIV. 606) is given in part on p. 34; whilst on p. 35 Mr. Walker gives the first sentences of it as if they were his recollection of Ruskin's conversation. Other remarks which he records are:—(With reference to Michael Angelo's "Moses"): " 'How often have you seen it?' 'Oh, half-a-dozen times.' 'No man should dare to give an opinion on any work of art unless he has seen it every day for six months'; adding after a pause, 'and even then he should hold his tongue if he has used his eyes as you seem to have used them.' " (With reference to a book): " 'How often have you read it?' 'Oh, two or three times.' 'You can never know a book until you have read it at least twenty times.' " (With reference to a photograph which Ruskin was asked to sign): "It does not do me justice. It does not show the good that is in me—I mean the capacity I possess for the work that I do. I shall send you another one." The other one was doubtless by Barraud: see XXXIV. 562.

The Report states that the total number of visitors to the Museum since its establishment by Ruskin has been "upwards of 1,000,000."

NO DATE

Is English not so clear as Latin? A few words in reply to Professor Ramsay's attack on the Queen's English. By A. Cuthel (Glasgow: James Hadden).

"Such a pamphlet cannot be seen into with a glance. It seems to me admirably done" (J. R.).—Quoted from an advertisement

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF AUTHORS OF, AND PERIODICALS CONTAINING, RUSKINIANA; BEING AN INDEX TO DIVISION II. OF THE BIBLIOGRAPHY

THE references in this Index are (1) to the authors of books, or other separate publications, about Ruskin; (2) in the case of papers in magazines, etc., to the name of the periodicals.

References in the latter case are sometimes given to the author's name, as well as to the periodical; but considerations of space have necessitated some discrimination, and the name of every writer is not included in the index.

In the case of Biographies containing Ruskiniana, the name of the subject of the biography, and not the writer of it, is indexed.

It may be noted that the same page often contains more than one item. Thus, in the reference to "Athenæum, 130," three articles are referred to.

III. CATALOGUE OF RUSKIN MSS.

The names in brackets indicate the ownership of the MS.

The references are to the volume and page at which further particulars, and in some cases a facsimile, will be found.

The entry "No MS." does not amount to a positive statement that there is no MS. of the piece in the author's hand, but only that the MS., if any, is unknown to the editors.

A. PUBLISHED WRITINGS

A Joy for Ever.

No MS. except the 1880 preface (George Allen). XVI. lxix.–lxx.

The MS. of this piece, together with several letters to C. A. Howell and others referring to the subject, was offered for sale some years ago by Dodd, Mead & Company, 755 Broadway, New York.

Fiction, Fair and Foul.

(A. Wedderburn, F. W. Hilliard.) The original MS. is in Mr. Wedderburn's collection. Mr. Hilliard has a fair copy of the first paper. XXXIV. xxxv.–vi. Facsimile, XXXIV. 312–3.

Field Sports, Morality of. Facsimile, XXXIV. 498–9.

Fors Clavigera.

Comparatively little of this remains, much having been destroyed by Ruskin as it was set up in type. See Vol. XXVII. lxxxviii.–ix., and Vol. XXIX. xxvii. The largest amount of it in any one place is that at Brantwood, but even that collection is fragmentary and not very large. It consists of the following: Letters 12 and 13 (parts only), 58 (fairly full and with first draft of St. George's Creed), 60 and 61 (fragments only), 62 (partly MS., partly corrected proofs), 63 and 64 (fragments only), 74 (in part), 81 (a fragment), 84 (full), 87 (fragment), 88 (fairly full), 92 (full), 95 (fairly full). In addition to these is the MS. of what has been printed for the first time in this edition as Appendices 4–8, 12, 13, 15, 16, 18, 19, 21–25 of Vol. XXIX. Fragments of the MS. of Fors may well be in many hands. Often a few sheets of MS. were given away by Ruskin, and now and again a Fors was drafted in one of his note-books. Thus Mr. S. C. Cockerell has a little of the MS. (see above, s. Ariadne), and some of it occasionally appears in booksellers' catalogues, e. g. in that of Mr. B. Quaritch (No. 286), some proof-sheets of Letter 67 were advertised for sale together with some of the MS. of Letter 82. The fact that Miss Anderson has the last two sheets of this MS. gives a good example of how Ruskin broke it up. Facsimiles (of parts of Letters 1, 12, 41, 58, 74, 91, 92, a hitherto unpublished passage, and the Constitution of St. George), XXVII. 12–13, 204–5, XXVIII. 80–81, 420–1, XXIX. 30–31, 446–7, 460–1, 536–7, XXX. 4–5.

Francesca's Book. No MS. XXXII.

Franco-Prussian War, Letter on. Facsimile, XXXIV. 501.

Giotto and his Works in Padua. (Allen.) A few sheets. XXIV. xlvii. Facsimile, XXIV. 90–91.

Greek and Christian Art. (Two Lectures.) See XX. 403, 407.

Greek Art and Mythology, Lectures on (Arachne, Ægina, Elis, Tarentum, etc.).

MSS. in the Oxford ledgers, at Brantwood. XX. lviii.–ix. And see s. Arachne.

Harbours of England, The.

(J. P. Morgan, and a proof, Allen.) XIII. lvii.–viii. Facsimile, XIII. 18, 28, 33.

Home and its Economies. No MS.

Hortus Inclusus.

The original letters are in the possession of Mr. A. Fleming. The last letter was exhibited at Manchester in 1904.

Illumination, Addresses on. No MS. XII. lxxxvi

King of the Golden River, The.

(Brantwood.) I. xlviii.–ix., 305. This is a thin 4to MS., now bound in dark-blue morocco. The variations between it and the printed text are all noted in this edition. The illustrations by Doyle) are not with the MS., and it is not known if they are extant.

Landscape, Lectures on.

(Brantwood.) MS. of draft in one of the Oxford ledgers at Brantwood, and some loose sheets. Also a fair copy in another's hand, revised by Ruskin. (Lent to Manchester, 1904.) XXII. xxx. Facsimile, XXII. 12–13.

Laws of Fésole.

(Brantwood.) Part of the MS. XV. xxx. A good many pages of matter for the intended continuation of the book are in a bound-up volume at Brantwood. This contains the original drawings for Plates VIII. and XI. Some of this matter is given in this edition: see XV. 395. Mr. F. W. Hilliard has part of the MS. of Vol. I. chap. 6. Facsimile, XV. 484–5. Another part of the MS. (chap. vi.) consisting of 9 pp. was sold at Sotheby's, Dec. 1, 1910.

Lectures on Art.

No final MS. known, but much draft material in the Oxford ledgers at Brantwood. MS. of 1887 preface (Allen). XX. xlix. Facsimile, XX. 16–17, 42–43.

Leoni. (Brantwood.) I. 288, II. 532.

Letter to Prout (1844). III. 662 seq. MS. at Brantwood.

Letters to a College Friend. (In America.) I. 400.

Letters to Dale. See below, s. Three Letters.

Letters to Count Zorzi on St. Mark's. No MS.

Letters.

The originals of the letters are, of course, in the hands of the persons to whom they were addressed, or their successors. Those to Rawdon Brown are in the British Museum (Additional MSS. 36304); those to Miss Beever (as already stated, s. Hortus Inclusus), in the possession of Mr. Albert Fleming; a large collection, addressed to Professor Norton, in America; etc., etc. A few other letters (some published, others not) are in the British Museum (Egerton 2846, 2847; Add. MSS. 36525, 37021, 37194, 37725). A good many have been sold at Sotheby's from time to time. See below, pp. 347–9. For facsimiles, see II. 264; XII. xxiv.; XIII. 324; XXVIII. 402–3; XXX. lx.–i., lxvi.–vii.; XXXVI. 251, 276–7, 524; XXXVII. 122–3, 140–1, 210, 372, 414, 418–9, 614, 702, 705, 728–9.

Light and Water Colours. XIII. 589 seq.

The MS. of this letter and appendix was sold at Sotheby's, Dec. 1, 1910.

Louvre, Notes on the. (Brantwood.) These are in diaries of 1844, 1849, 1854. XII. lxxxvi.

Love's Meinie.

(Brantwood, A. Wedderburn.) XXV. xxxii. A bound-up volume at Brantwood contains proofs of the lecture on "The Chough," and some additions to it and various notes on birds. The MS. of the lecture on "The Robin" is in Mr. Wedderburn's collection. Mr. B. B. Macgeorge has the MS. of the Preface. Facsimile, XXV. 20–21.

Michael Angelo and Tintoret, Relations between.

Brantwood.) Some MS. in Ruskin's diary, and some dictated notes in Mrs. Severn's hand. XXII. xxxiv. Facsimile, XXII. 84–85.

Minerals, Catalogues of. See XXVI. pp. 417, 457, 519.

Modern Art. (Brantwood.) MS. in another's hand, corrected by Ruskin, thin 4to volume. XIX. lxxii.

Modern Painters.

(J. Pierpont Morgan, Brantwood.) Almost the whole of this MS. was bought from Mr. George Allen and Mr. F. W. Hilliard by Mr. J. P. Morgan. Part, however, of the first MSS. of vol. i. and some notes for vol. ii. are at Brantwood. See II. 532; III. li., 635, 680 seq.; IV. xlix., 359 seq.; V. lxi., 433 seq.; VI. xxi. seq., 479; VII. lxxviii., 479. See also XIX. lxxi. The MS. of some additional passages first given in this edition is not in Ruskin's hand (IV. 378 seq., VII. 481 seq.). Mr. Hilliard's MS. was exhibited at the Ruskin Exhibition in Manchester in 1904. It was of Vol. II. only, and consisted of 137 folios, being a draft of the first fifty pages of the book as originally printed, and the printer's copy of the whole. At the same exhibition a proof of the 1884 Epilogue, corrected by Ruskin, was exhibited by Mr. W. G. Collingwood. Some proof-sheets were also advertised for sale in Mr. B. Quaritch's catalogue (No. 286).

For facsimiles, see III. 89, 256; IV. 364-5; V. 80, 292-3; VI. 120-1, 296-7; VII. 374-5, 458-9.

Unto this Last. (Formerly Allen, now in America.) XVII. cxiii. Facsimile, XVII. 74-75.

Val d'Arno.

(Brantwood.) MS. of first draft of Lects. i.-v. written by Ruskin in a separate book. XXIII. lix. Facsimile, XXIII. 22.

Valle Crucis.

(Brantwood.) XXXIII. lxiv., lxvii. MS. of "Candida Casa" and "Mending the Sieve," fairly complete.

Valley of Somme, Flamboyant Architecture. (A. Wedderburn.) XIX. lxxii.

Venice Academy Guide. No MS.

Verona and its Rivers.

(Brantwood.) MS. 4to of the Lecture, but with some omissions. The MS. is largely not in Ruskin's hand, but is revised by him. XIX. lxxii.

Working Men's College Memorandum. Facsimile, XVI. 470-1.

B. DIARIES AND NOTE-BOOKS

In addition to the above MSS. of his published books, there are at Brantwood a large number of diaries and note-books, to which the editors have had full access. These are written in various volumes of all sorts and sizes, from large folios to small account-books. The same book is often made up partly of diary and partly of notes of the subject or subjects to which Ruskin was at the time devoting particular attention.

(a) DIARIES

The references are to the volumes and pages where the diaries are summarised, or quotations from them referred to.

1830. A tour to the Lakes. II. xiv., 534.

1835. Tour abroad. I. xix., xxx.; II. xiv., 395.

1840. March 31-June 23, with some diary of 1843 and 1844. III. xii.; IV. xiv.; XII. lxiv., 131; XIV. 127.

1840, Oct. 8-1841, June 29. Tour abroad, with some diary on return to England. I. xx., xxxviii.; II. xiv.; III. xii.; IV. 339; XXV. 234; XXXV. 295, 308.

1844. Tour abroad. III. xii., xxv.-xxvii.; IV. xiv., xxii.; XIII. xlvi.

1845. First tour abroad without his parents. Two volumes, mostly in the hand of his servant Hobbes, but corrected by Ruskin. III. xiii.; IV. xxiv.; V. 393; XI. x.; XII. x.-xi.; XXXVI. 47.

1846-47. Abroad and in Scotland. VIII. xx., xxvii.-viii.; IX. xi.; X. 152; XI. x.; XXV. 154; XXVI. xxi.; XXXV. 418.

1848-49. Abroad. V. x., xvii.; VIII. xxix.; IX. xi.; XXVI. xxiii.

1849-52. Two volumes containing mainly architectural notes made in France and Venice. VI. x.; IX. xi., xxiv.; X. xii., xxiv.; XII. xi.; XIII. 47, 369, 460.

1851, 1853, 1854. Mixed diary and notes, at home, at Venice, and in Scotland. See above, p. 87.

1854. Abroad. V. xi.; VI. x.; XII. xi.; XXIX. 302; XXXI. xli.; XXXV. 449

1854. A volume marked "Turner, Missals," consisting more of notes than of diary.
- 1856–59, 1861–62. Marked "Savoy Flora." VII. xi., 207 n.; XIV. 83, 141, 252; XV. 85; XXXIV. 585.
- 1861–63. Two volumes, marked "Rock Book," "Geol. Switz., etc." These are more notes than diary. XXVI. 570; XXXVI. 538.
- 1866–67–70. Two books. (a) 1866, April 27–1867, October 11. Switzerland, Keswick, London. (b) 1867, Oct. 24–1870, Feb. 26. "Abbeville Book." XIX. xi.
- 1869–70–74. Marked "Palermo Book." XXI. 112.
- 1871–72–73. This book runs from Dec. 1871 to April 1873, with some gaps. XX. xi.; XXII. xi.; XXIII. x.; XXXV. xiii.
- 1874–75. "St. Martin's Book." XXIII. x.; XXVIII. x.; XXXVI. xcvi.
- 1875–76. "Broadlands Book." XXIII. 32; XXIV. xi.; XXV. x.; XXVIII. x.
- 1876–77, 1878, 1880, 1881–82. XXIV. xi.; XXV. x.; XXVIII. x.; XXIX. 136; XXXV. xiii.
- 1877–78. Marked "Myths," "Botany." XXV. x.
- 1876–81, 1883. This is a large volume, and contains Ruskin's translation of part of Plato's Laws. XXV. x.; XXX. 194; XXXIII. x.–xi.
- 1882, Aug. 10–1883. XXX. 223; XXXII. xxii.; XXXIII. x.–xi.
1884. XXV. x.; XXXIII. x.
- 1885, Jan. 1–July 14. See above, p. 89.
- 1885, July 15–Dec., 1886–87. XXXV. xiii.; XXXVI. lxxvi.
1888. Two fragmentary diaries, one containing Jan. 1–10 only. XXXV. xiv.

There are also at Brantwood some seven bound quarto volumes of letters from Ruskin to his parents: (i.) 1827–44: see II. 534. (ii.) 1845. (iii.) 1847–48–49–50–51. (iv.) 1851–52. (v.) 1853. (vi.) 1857–58–59–61. (vii.) 1862–63; and a considerable number of letters to his mother, and to Mrs. Severn.

(b) NOTE-BOOKS, ETC.

Botany. (a) Marked "First Flora 1866." This refers to six botanical note-books, viz. First, Second, Third, Savoy, Milan, and Home Flora. Of these the "Milan" book is missing. The "Second Flora" contains material used in Proserpina, Vol. I. chaps. i. and iv.; the "Third Flora" similar material, chaps. ii. and iii.; and the "Home Flora" much material there used, e. g. chaps. ii. §§ 8—end, iii. §§ 8–16. It also contains a draft of St. George's Rules. For the "Savoy Flora," see above, s. Diaries, 1856–62.

[Brantwood Study described. Facsimile, XXIII. lxxviii.]

Chaucer Book. Notes on Chaucer, with some history notes.

Chess Notes. Two books

Classical Notes. (a) A large ledger with mythology notes (pp. 1–75). It also contains the first plan (pp. 77–82) for 1883 lectures at Oxford, thus—

1. All great art is praise.
2. The Word is in thine heart.
3. The Eyes of Science.
4. Elf Land.
5. The Fireside.
6. The Hillside. (See Vol. XXXIII.)

and (p. 83) some notes on the book of Daniel, begun Jan. 28, 1886.

(b) Folio book on various plants as mentioned in the classics and on Latin adjectives (8 pp.), a note on the seamew, a list (28 pp.) of St. George's minerals and a plan for a school collection of minerals.

(c) Notes on Latin verbs (26 pp.) and on metals (29 pp.).

(d) Folio book on Greek words and Greek mythology.

(e) 4to book of classical notes.

Coin Book.

[Geological Map (1835). XXXV. 152.]

Geology. (a) Some early geology on 80 pp. of closely written foolscap. (b) 4to book on the breccias of Mornex, largely in Mrs. Severn's hand, with some botany notes.

(c) Catalogue of crystals. (d) Geological notes, catalogue of minerals. (e) Large catalogue of mineral collection.

[Greek Gospels, annotated by Ruskin. Facsimile, XXXIV. 703.]

Juvenilia. For a detailed account of these MSS., containing Poems, Geological Notes, etc., etc., see II. 529. seq.

To those there described should be added three small books, containing: (a) Early Latin Grammar, with reports of three sermons. (b) Early mineralogy and catalogue of minerals, again with a report of a sermon. (c) Early mineralogy, with some notes of travels added to by Ruskin's father, and a very neat "printed" copy of Mrs. Hemans' "The Sound of the Sea."

[Several maps made by R. when young, e.g. the map of Italy (1827). Facsimile, XXXV. 72.]

Mineralogical Dict., 1831. XXXV. 121.

Miscellaneous Note-Book, on Political Economy and Classics at one end, and on Geology at the other.

Oxford Ledgers. Two large ledgers with MS. of the draft or material for Oxford lectures. See above, s. Lectures on Art, Landscape, etc.

"Pindar" and "Psalterium" Book.

Plato's Laws. Book I. and part of Book II. Ruskin's translation was written in his diary of 1876–80. There is also at Brantwood a bound-up volume containing the beginning of an Introduction to the Laws; a fair copy of the diary translation in the hand of a secretary, revised by Ruskin; some notes on Book I.; various pages of the Laws from Jowett's Plato, with marginal notes by Ruskin, together with some notes on Athenian History, dictated by Ruskin to a secretary.

[Sermon Book (1827). XXXV. 72.]

IV. PORTRAITS

OF Ruskin's personal appearance, many varying accounts have been given. He is often spoken of as short in stature, but this is not correct. "I grant, alas!" wrote Mrs. Arthur Severn in 1891,¹ "that in the last ten years he has stooped so much that he has shrunk into what might be considered by some people a little man; but about twenty-five years ago, I should certainly have called him much above the average height. And as a young man he was well over 5 feet 10 inches—indeed, almost 5 feet 11 inches; and people who knew him then would have called him tall."² Richmond's portrait of 1842 (No. 6) is of a tall, slight young man; the stoop and hunched appearance of the back, in old age, are suggested in Barraud's photograph (No. 47).

Unfortunately Ruskin was not among the eminent men of the time painted by Watts. "It would have been impossible for me to attempt it," he said, for "I should have felt paralysed in Ruskin's presence."³ In 1859 and later Ruskin gave sittings to Rossetti (XXXVI. 311, 329, 335, 405, 497), but nothing came of them except a very unsatisfactory crayon drawing (No. 15). In 1866 Ruskin gave sittings to Burne-Jones, who made some drawings, but these were not preserved (see XXXVI. 500, 501, 504, 511, 521, 522). In 1899 a scheme was set on foot for having his portrait painted by Holman Hunt (XXXIV. 734), but the state of Ruskin's health rendered it impossible for the necessary sittings to be arranged.

It is, therefore, mainly upon photographs that the portraiture of Ruskin in later life depends, and the more important of them are therefore included in this list.

(1.) 1822.—Oil portrait at the age of 3½ by James Northcote, R.A., life-size. At Brantwood. Described in Præterita, i. § 14.—XXXV. Plate ii.

Of this picture there is a reduced copy, also in the possession of Mrs. Arthur Severn. The Plate in this edition is reproduced direct from the large original.—Reproduced (half-tone process) in Magazine of Art, January 1891, and M. H. Spielmann's John Ruskin, 1900, p. 19, and thence frequently in newspapers, etc.

(2.) 1822.—"The Thorn in the Foot." Fancy Portrait (oil) by James Northcote, R. A. At Brantwood. Described in Præterita, i. § 16.—XXXV. Plate iii.

Magazine of Art and John Ruskin, etc., ut supra.

(3.) 1841.—Cameo in ivory. Done at Rome. At Brantwood. Described in Præterita, XXXV. 280.—XXXV. Plate xiiiA.

(4.) Circ. 1841.—Portrait in oil by Thomas Richmond (elder brother of George Richmond, R. A.). In the possession of Mr. William C. Ward.

A small picture (13¼ in. x 10). Figure, about three-quarter length, standing, and holding his gloves; hat and umbrella on a stone bench beside him.

(5.) 1842.—Full-length, in water-colour, by George Richmond, R. A. At Brantwood. Described in Præterita (XXXV. 398).—III. Frontispiece.

For reproductions, see III. xvi. note.

² See Dr. Furnivall's description, VIII. xxxiv.

³ M. H. Spielmann's John Ruskin, p. 157. But see XXXVI. lvii.

(6.) 1853.—Pencil and slight wash drawing by J. E. Millais, R.A. Formerly in Lady Trevelyan's possession, now in that of Miss Trevelyan.—XXXVI. Plate A. Thus described by T. Woolner, R.A.:—

“The Millais pencil sketch was in the possession of Lady Trevelyan, wife of the late Sir Walter Trevelyan, of Wallington. The likeness, so far as I can remember, was very good, but the expression that of a hyena, or something between Carker and that hilarious animal. Enemies would call the expression characteristic, but friends would declare that it did him injustice.” On Ruskin's mouth Woolner added: “It would be hard for any one to read that feature. Rossetti told me that when a boy Ruskin had part of one of his lips bitten off by a dog. The mouth is the most expressive of all features, and tells the history of its owner's nature better than any other; but under the circumstances how would it be possible to read it accurately? To fill up the gaps in Sappho's verse would be but a schoolboy's exercise compared to such a task. Lavater might give a hint, or the Greek expert who discovered that Socrates was a sensual fellow, but I don't think any modern physiognomist could do much with this modern instance. Of course, the main force of his head is perception, this faculty being unusually developed; but, so far as I remember, I do not think there is anything else out of the common in the shape of it. His expression is varied beyond all example in my experience.” (Magazine of Art, January 1891, p. 77, and M. H. Spielmann's John Ruskin, 1900, p. 165.)

(7.) 1853–4.—By the stream of Glenfinlas, oil, by J. E. Millais, R.A. In possession of Admiral Acland.—XII. Frontispiece.

For reproductions, see XII. xv. note; and for references, see General Index (Millais).

(8.) 1854.—Pencil and slight wash drawing; head (looking left), by J. E. Millais, R.A.; signed “January 17, 1854.” In possession of MR. Arthur Severn.

In the Ruskin Exhibition at the Fogg Art Museum, 1909–10 (see below, p. 222), No. 16, “Portrait of Ruskin; reproduction of pencil drawing by John Millais,” was a reproduction of No. 9.

(9.) 1856.—Photograph (side-face) taken by a student at the Working Men's College.—XXXVI. cx., Frontispiece.

Of this year is a woodcut in the Illustrated London News, entitled “Distribution of Prizes at the Architectural Museum, April 7, 1856,” and containing what purports to be a likeness of Ruskin.

(10.) Circ. 1857.—Oil-portrait, life-size head, by Thomas Richmond. In possession of the artist's son (Ruskin's godson), Mr. John Ruskin Richmond.

(11, 12.) Circ. 1857.—Oil-portrait, head, smaller, by Thomas Richmond.—In possession of the artist's daughter, Mrs. G. H. Wollaston.

There is also a water-colour sketch for the above.

(13.) 1857.—Head in chalk, by George Richmond, R.A., 1857. Engraved by Francis Holl, R.A.—XVI. Frontispiece.

Mrs. Severn tells an anecdote about this head: see XXXVI. xxvii. Ruskin's own criticism of the portrait (“misses all really valuable in the face”) is given in XVI. lxx.

Reproduced in Magazine of Art, January 1891, p. 77—and frequently in newspapers, etc.

(14.) 1857?—Head in chalk by George Richmond. In the National Portrait Gallery (No. 1058).—XXXVI. Plate C.

(15.) 1861.—Crayon drawing by D. G. Rossetti., In the University Galleries, Oxford.—XXXVI. li., 329, 335, Plate B.

(16.) 1861.—Portrait by himself in water-colour.—XVII. Frontispiece.

For particulars, see XVII. cxiv.–v.

(17.) 1862.—Photograph by Lombardi: standing.

Reproduced in the Gentlewoman, January 27, 1900.

(18.) 1863.—Photograph, with D. G. Rossetti and W. B. Scott, in Rossetti's garden in Cheyne Walk, by Messrs. Downey.—XXXVI. Plate 18; referred to, ibid., 454.

(19.) 1863.—Photograph by Messrs. Downey; Ruskin seated, leaning on a walking-stick.—Referred to, XXXVI. 49 and n.

(20.) 1864.—Bust (?) by Alexander Munro. Referred to in Ruskin's Letters (XXXVI. 467); but the editors have been unable to trace it.

(21.) 1867.—Photograph (full-face) by Messrs. Elliott & Fry.—This appears as the frontispiece to Vol. XXVII., where it is wrongly dated 1876.

The original of numerous woodcuts, etc.; among them:—an engraving by M. Klinkicht in Magazine of Art, January 1891 (p. 78); Review of Reviews, January 1898 (p. 15); Bookman, March 1900 (p. 180). An excellent lithograph in the Examiner, November 1, 1879; "Ruskin in Middle Life," wood-engraving by T. Johnson in the Century Magazine, February 1898.

(22.) A photograph, in a slightly different pose, by Messrs. Elliott & Fry.

Reproduced as frontispiece to vol. i. of Letters of John Ruskin to Charles Eliot Norton.

(23.) 1867.—Photograph (side-face) by Messrs. Elliott & Fry.

(24.) From No. 23 an etching was made and published by S. Haydon (face reversed), vignetted with a laurel wreath below.

(25.) 1869.—Chalk drawing. Full face.

Reproduced from a photograph (in Mr. Hugh Allen's possession) in E. Gosse's English Literature: an Illustrated Record, vol. iv. p. 289; also as frontispiece to Sesame and Lilies in Heinemann's "Favourite Classics" (1908). Mr. Allen believes the drawing to have been made by Arthur Burgess.

(26.) 1872.—Caricature portrait by F. Waddy in Vanity Fair, February 17.—See above, p. 144.

(27, 28.) 1874.—Two portraits by himself, one in pencil (10 x 8), the other in water-colour, presented to Professor Norton.—Mentioned by Ruskin, XXXVII. 82, 92.

(29.) 1874.—Photograph by Rev. C. L. Dodgson ("Lewis Carroll"), leaning back in a chair. One of the best photographs of Ruskin: see Plate VI., opposite.

Copies of this were printed by Mr. H. P. Robinson, of Tunbridge Wells. "As several friends begged Lewis Carroll for copies, he wrote to ask Mr. Ruskin's leave. The reply was, 'Buy Number 5 of Fors Clavigera for 1871, which will give you your answer' [See XXXVII. 86]. This was not what Mr. Dodgson wanted, so he wrote back, 'Can't afford tenpence.' Finally Mr. Ruskin gave his consent" (Life and Letters of Lewis Carroll, by S. D. Collingwood, 1898, p. 157). At p. 158 of that book is a small reproduction of the photograph.

(30.) 1874.—Caricature portrait. "No XVI., Great Guns of Oxford, President of the Amateur Landscape Gardening Society" (signed "Ino").

Photographs of this drawing were sold at the time by Messrs. Shrimpton, of Oxford. It is a skit on the Hincksey Diggings.

(31.) 1874.—Caricature. A print published by Once a Week (May 22, 1874), showing Ruskin as an Angel of Light hovering over London and scattering flowers of art.

The print was reproduced, under the heading "A Forgotten Portrait of Ruskin," in the Glasgow Evening Times, December 31, 1904.

(32.) 1875.—Plaster medallion by Charles Ashmore, of Aston, near Birmingham.

Described in the Magazine of Art, January 1891 (p. 122), and Spielmann, p. 174; probably founded on photographs.

XXXVIII.

From a photograph by Lewis Carroll
1874

- (33.) 1876.—Dry-point etching by Georges Pilotell. Published by Nosedà.

From a sketch made by the artist, who chanced to see Ruskin in the National Gallery. Reproduced in Magazine of Art, January 1891, p. 79, and Spielmann, p. 105.

- (34.) 1877.—Chalk drawing, life size, by E. W. Andrews.

Exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1877 (No. 1275). "Mr Ruskin was engaged for some days," says the artist, "in making studies from one of Turner's works—if I recollect rightly, the 'Apollo slaying the Python'—in one of the large rooms at the National Gallery, where I was at work near him, and it was during this time I made my small studies of Mr. Ruskin, from which the larger work was produced. Thus the portrait was taken from sittings, although Mr. Ruskin was an unconscious sitter" (Magazine of Art, March 1891, p. xxii.).

- (35.) Circ. 1877.—Water-colour drawing, full length, by Mr. Arthur Severn. R.I. See Spielmann, p. 175.

- (36.) 1877.—Bust by Benjamin Creswick.—XXX. Plate iii.

For particulars, see XXX. xlv.

- (37.) "Partly based on" No. 36. A portrait in vol. ii. p. 103 of Collingwood's Life (1893).

- (38.) 1879.—Woodcut by H. S. Uhlrich; according to Ruskin, "out and out the best portrait of me yet done" (XX. lix).—XX. Frontispiece

- (39.) 1879.—Bust by J. E. Boehm, R.A. 1880. In the Ruskin Drawing School at Oxford (inscription, XXI. 1.). Also in the National Portrait Gallery (No. 1053).—XXI. Plate lxx.

Reproduced in Studies in Ruskin; Magazine of Art, February 1891.

"I never saw any face," wrote the sculptor to Mr. Spielmann, "on which the character and the inside of the man was so clearly written. He can never have tried to dissimulate" (Magazine of Art, p. 122). It appears from a circular already quoted (above, p. 111) that Boehm also made "a full-length sketch of Ruskin in clay." Ruskin mentions his sittings to Boehm in letters: XXXVII. 301, 303.

- (40.) 1879.—Water-colour by Hubert Herkomer, R.A. Exhibited at the Grosvenor Gallery, 1881; presented by the artist to the National Portrait Gallery, 1903 (No. 1336); etched by the painter, and published by the Fine Art Society, 1881.—XXXVII. Plate viii.

The drawing is reproduced in an excellent woodcut by W. Biscombe Gardner in Magazine of Art, February 1891 (p. 125), in the Bookman, March 1900 (p. 187), and in St. George, vol. i. 1898; the artist's etching, in Harper's Magazine, March 1890 (p. 581).

"I painted John Ruskin in 1879," says Mr. Herkomer in an American paper. "It was in water-colour, a drawing of head and shoulders life-size, painted at Denmark Hill [a mistake for Herne Hill], in the little garret bedroom which had formerly been his nursery. He seemed most anxious not to look at the painting until I quite finished it; whilst sitting he was theorising about the methods of painting. I used in those days to paint abnormally large water-colours, and always covered the paper first with a wash of some ochre or grey, then sketched the subject with charcoal. I would then commence with a hoghair brush, working up the ground colour with some fresh tones, and out of a kind of chaos produce a head. Ruskin queried even the possibility of this, and would hardly believe that my final outlines and delicate bits of drawing were put in last. His theory was to draw the outline with the precision of an expert penman, then fill in with colour. He has tried this method over and over again, but the result has never been satisfactory; the theory seems to him right for all that. I know that he made repeated attempts to paint himself to prove this, between his sittings to me, but they were never openly shown." (The Star, March 4, 1890.) Ruskin much liked Herkomer's portrait, see XXXVII. 303, 427.

The editors have no knowledge of the "attempts" here mentioned; Ruskin, however, had made two in 1874 (see above; Nos. 27, 28), and had thoughts of again attempting a portrait of himself in 1875 (XXXVII. 160), but nothing came of it.

- (41.) Circ. 1879.—A portrait, by W. G. Collingwood, in a design for the seal of the Liverpool Ruskin Society.

Engraved by H. Allen; an example was shown at the Manchester Ruskin Exhibition (1904), No. 417.

(42.) 1881.—Bust by Mr. Atkinson.

“The Professor treated the unknown visitor as his visitor, found him lodgings and a workshop, and a place at his table for a great while, during which the bust made but slow progress. One reason, perhaps, for Mr. Atkinson’s difficulty was that Ruskin had just grown a beard, and the well-known face was no longer there to mould. ‘Can’t you treat the beard in early Greek fashion? I should like to be a Bearded Bacchus,’ he said. In spite of the admitted failure, he gave further work to the sculptor in casting leaves and other details. . . . Some of Mr. Atkinson’s casts are on view in the Coniston Museum. But the sculptor’s chief personal wish was to get a mould of Ruskin’s hand. He used to say there was more in it than in his face; at least, it was the most characteristic feature, and representable in solid form, while the face, depending on the bright blue eye and changeful expression, evaded him as it evaded more celebrated sculptors.” (W. G. Collingwood, Ruskin Relics, p. 136.)

(43.) 1881–1882.—Water-colour picture, by W. G. Collingwood, of Ruskin writing in his study. Now at the Ruskin Museum, Coniston.

Reproduced in 1902 as a coloured plate, with letterpress: see above, p. 120.

(44.) 1882.—Photograph (full-face, with beard) by Messrs. Elliott & Fry. Engraved on steel by W. Roffe (Ruskin Birthday Book, 1883, Frontispiece).—XXIX. Frontispiece.

The original of many woodcuts, etc.; among others:—Art and Literature, April 1889 (large photogravure); Goodwill, May 1894; Review of Reviews, January 1898 (p. 19); Bookman, March 1900 (Supplement).

(45.) A woodcut by R. Bryden was founded on No. 44 and published as “Literature Portraits No. 16,” in a supplement to Literature, August 24, 1901.

(46.) 1882.—Photograph (not quite full-face) by Messrs. Elliot & Fry (August 9).

Again often reproduced; e.g., in Tinsley’s Magazine, November 1889; English Illustrated Magazine, August 1893 (p. 783); Review of Reviews, January 1898; Magazine of Art, February 1891 (p. 123).

(47.) 1882.—Photograph (full-face, with arms on a table) by H. R. Barraud—one of “the first,” said Ruskin, “that expressed what good or character there is in me for my own work” (XXXIV. 562, XXXVII. 427).—XXXIV. Frontispiece.

Of this photograph, two slightly different “positions” were taken, often reproduced; e.g., Bookman, March 1900 (p. 192). Founded on it is the etching by W. Burton prefixed to W. G. Collingwood’s Biographical Outline (above, p. 114).

(48.) 1882.—Photograph (head, nearly full-face) by H. R. Barraud.

Reproduced in Collingwood’s Life (1893), ii. 215; and probably used by T. A. Butler (woodcut in Harper’s Magazine, February 1889) and T. Johnson (woodcut in Century Magazine, January 1888).

[1884.—In this year Miss Kate Greenaway had some sittings (XXXIII. xlix.), but the portrait was never completed.]

(49.) 1884.—Pencil-drawing of Ruskin at Herne Hill by T. Blake Wirgman. In Mr. Spielmann’s collection. Published in the Graphic, April 1886.

In consenting to sit, the Professor wrote to the lady who pleaded for Mr. Wirgman: “I’ll have this portrait different from any that have been yet—only I always fall asleep in a quarter of an hour, so everything in the way of expression must be got, tell the artist, in ten minutes.” There were two sittings—one at Herne Hill, the other in Burne-Jones’s studio. “When the drawing was finished, Ruskin put a few finishing touches to it himself—touches having reference chiefly to the hair and eyebrows” (Spielmann, p. 180). Reproduced in the Bookman, March 1900 (p. 190).

(50.) 1884.—Bust by Conard Dressler. Exhibited at the New Gallery in 1889. Presented by Mr. T. Thornton to the National Gallery in 1902.

“Ah!” said Ruskin to Mr. Spielmann of this work, “it makes me look far crazier than ever I’ve been.” “He took occasion to tell me,” adds Mr. Spielmann, “in a sweeping sort of way, that he was dissatisfied with all his portraits, and the truer and more candid they were, the less he cared for them. 'I like to be flattered, both by pen and pencil, so it is done prettily and in good taste.'" (Magazine of Art, Feb. 1891, p. 123; repeated in Spielmann, p. 181, with "more frantic" for "far crazier." "Frantic" was what Ruskin wrote: XXXVII. 604.)

"I cannot tell how many sittings we had," wrote the sculptor in a letter in which he described with glowing enthusiasm the fascination of his visit to the Professor in the spring of 1884. "They took place in the outhouse, a very convenient place for my purpose; and I had as many as I wanted, some long and some short, as the humour served. I had, with the help of the old valet, made a little platform for the Professor to sit upon, and from this position he would watch me at my work for a couple of hours, sometimes talking the whole of the time. . . . My deepest recollection of Professor Ruskin is as he stood one evening after dinner (during which the conversation had been about his life and work, and had been more animated and touching than usual) at the open window overhanging the lake. The sun had gone down, and he wistfully looked over towards the Old Man of Coniston, behind which the sky was still aglow. He seemed to be mentally reviewing his life's work. His head was held up, although his body was slightly stooping, his right hand behind his back, and his left held on to the casement for support. I was deeply impressed with the expression of mystery in his face, and determined to endeavour to reproduce it in my bust. I have failed in my ideal; but that is what I tried." (Magazine of Art, pp. 123, 124; Spielmann, p. 185.)

(51.) The sculptor afterwards made a bronze bust, with some modifications. This was presented by Mr. T. Thornton to the Ruskin Memorial Hall at Bournville.

Reproductions in the Artist, March 1900; Magazine of Art, February 1891.

(52.) 1885.—Photograph (in soft hat and overcoat, with stick, standing against a garden wall at Brantwood) by Green Bros., of Grasmere. The best likeness of Ruskin in his Brantwood days.—XXXVII. Frontispiece.

Frontispiece to The Ruskin Reading Guild Journal, vol. i., Review of Reviews, January 1898 (p. 18).

(53.) 1886.—Photograph (full-face, right hand in coat, standing against a pine trunk) by H. R. Barraud.

"Taken in one of his most frivolous moods. Young ladies and professional beauties, he said, were taken beneath palm branches, or leaning gracefully against a tree, and for that playful reason he selected the pose—very awkward for a man of such natural grace of movement" (Spielmann, p. 157 n.). Often reproduced; e.g., in the Bookman, March 1900 (p. 191).

(54.) 1886.—Photograph (seated, with hands crossed) by H. R. Barraud.

Reproduced in the Bookman, March 1900 (p. 191).

(55.) 1883.—Medallion by Clement Emptmeyer.

Exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1883 (No. 1662).

(56.) 1888.—Miniature by Miss Ethel Webling.

Exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1888 (No. 1546).

(57.) 1892.—Photograph (with long flowing beard) by Captain Walker.

An enlarged drawing made from this is printed in Collingwood's Life (1893), ii. 244.

(58.) 1893.—Photograph by Miss Acland (August 1) of Ruskin and Acland in the Garden at Brantwood.—XXXV. Plate A.

First published at p. xxv. of the 1893 ed. of The Oxford Museum.

(59.) 1893.—Photograph by Miss Acland on the same occasion of Ruskin alone (seated in a basket-chair).

Reproduced in Review of Reviews, January 1898 (p. 23), and Bookman, March 1900 (p. 193).

(59A.) 1894.—Photograph by C. P. MacCarthy.

A copy of this, in possession of Mr. E. H. Blakeney, is inscribed "Professor Ruskin, photographed at Brantwood, by C. P. MacCarthy, May 1894." It shows Ruskin seated, looking slightly round, most of one side of the face in shadow.

(60.) 1896.—Photograph (side-face) by F. Hollyer.—XXXV. Frontispiece (there called “Datur hora quieti”).

Often reproduced; e.g., Commonwealth, July 1896; Magazine of Art, April 1900 (p. 264).

(61.) 1897.—Photograph (in felt hat and overcoat) by J. M’Clelland.

Reproduced in the Bookman, March 1900 (p. 173).

(62.) 1897.—Photograph (full-face, seated in his study) taken at Brantwood July 17, by J. M’Clelland.

One or other of the positions reproduced in Scribner’s Magazine, December 1898; The Girl’s Realm, April 1900; Bookman, March 1900 (p. 194).

(63.) 1897.—Oil-portrait, by Arthur Severn, R.I. At Brantwood.—Frontispiece to this volume.

Reproduced as frontispiece to Turner and Ruskin, vol. ii.

(64.) Mr. Severn’s water-colour sketch (13½ in. x 10) for No. 63 is in the collection of Mrs Cunliffe; it was exhibited at the Ruskin Exhibition at Manchester in 1904.

(65.) 1897.—Oil-portrait, by W. G. Collingwood. Exhibited at the Royal Society of British Artists. Now at the Ruskin Museum, Coniston.

(66.) 1897.—Head only, in oil, by W. G. Collingwood. Exhibited at Liverpool and Whitechapel. In possession of the artist.

Mr. M’Clelland’s were the last photographs, and Mr. Severn’s and Mr. Collingwood’s the last portraits, made of Ruskin in his lifetime. Posthumous portraits were:—

(67.) 1900.—Medallion by Lucchesi on the Ruskin memorial at Friar’s Crag, Derwentwater: see II. 295 n.

Reproduced in Great Thoughts, February 1, 1892.

(68.) 1901.—Literature, August 24, p. 174. “Mr. Ruskin in his Study.” An outline sketch, with portrait of R. standing.

Probably based on Mr. Macdonald’s drawing of the study (XXIII. Plate A), with the addition of the figure.

(69.) 1902.—Bronze medallion by Onslow Ford, R.A., in Westminster Abbey.

Caricatures of Ruskin, in addition to those mentioned above, appeared in:—Judy, January 29, 1868; Punch, May 11, 1872; Once a Week, May 25, 1872; Fun, April 18, 1874; Punch, February 5, 1876; Fun, March 29, 1876; Cope’s Modern Pilgrims, 1878; The Hornet, March 20, 1878; Punch, December 7, 1878; Punch, January 10, 1880; London Figaro, March 24, 1880; Moonshine, October 23, 1880; Punch, December 12, 1880; Moonshine, May 6, 1882. The skit by F. Sandys on Millais’s “Sir Isumbras at the Ford,” entitled “The Nightmare,” and published by Smith & Elder, May 4, 1857 (see XIV. 106 n.), may also be mentioned.

A portrait of Ruskin, in stained glass, is introduced in a window of one of the halls at the Cork High School for Girls: see XXX. xxxix.

A long list of portraits of Ruskin, which have appeared in periodicals, etc., will be found in A. L. A. Portrait Index: Library of Congress, Washington, 1906, p. 1266. But this adds nothing to the roll of portraits, as all the reproductions indexed in that volume are founded on one or other of the portraits enumerated above.

PART II
CATALOGUE OF RUSKIN'S DRAWINGS
WITH INDEX REFERENCES

THIS Part of the Volume is divided into two sections:—(1) References to Ruskin's Drawings generally; (2) Catalogue of the Drawings, with references to particular pieces.

[Bibliographical Note.—This Part includes all particulars, notes, and information contained in any previous Catalogue, and adds a large amount of further information.

A Catalogue of some of R.'s drawings was given in the first edition of W. G. Collingwood's Life and Work of John Ruskin (1893), vol. i. 238–243, vol. ii. 272–275. Most of the drawings there enumerated appeared in subsequent exhibitions, or are otherwise known to the compilers of the present Catalogue. In a few cases, no particulars have been obtainable beyond the mere mention in Mr. Collingwood's Catalogue.

The Exhibition Catalogues are detailed below (p. 222), with references to the Bibliography where the pamphlets are described.

The Ruskin Exhibitions of 1901, 1904, and 1907 were widely noticed in the press. Among the notices in 1901 was one by M. H. Spielmann in St. George, vol. iv. 230–241; and among those in 1907, one in the Athenæum,] March 16, 327–328.

Ruskin's Drawings generally have been the subject of numerous articles in magazines, etc.: see, e.g., in the Bibliography, pp. 166, 167, 168, 176.

CATALOGUE OF RUSKIN'S DRAWINGS

THE DRAWINGS GENERALLY

Ruskin's references to his own handiwork may most conveniently be arranged under four heads:—(1) Principal passages; (2) his general estimate of his work; (3) account of his artistic development; (4) general references.

- (1) Principal passages:—In 1878 R. arranged “an autobiography of drawings” (Exhibition 5 on p. 222), with descriptive notes, 13, 502–528. At various times (1870–78), he printed notes on the examples in the Ruskin Drawing School, including 300 of his own drawings (21, passim). In Præterita, he described his artistic development, etc., 35, 76 seq., 261–2, 311, 313–4, 621–7. In epilogue to Modern Painters, vol. ii., he gave another general account, 4, 343 seq.
- (2) Ruskin's general estimate of his work, 35, 612, 37, 566, not a mere amateur, 5, 4, nor theorist, 3, 5.—R. claimed for himself such proficiency in drawing as proved his capacity to understand what good qualities are, 5, 10 (cf. 16, 182), and himself engraved as well as drew many of his illustrations, 16, 421–2, but disclaimed any equality with professional artists, 5, 10–11, 11, 311, 36, 211; not a painter, but a draughtsman capable of faithful studies, 11, 311; he sketched as a means of fixing his attention, 1, xli., and to learn the qualities of things, 13, 508, 525, 38, 347; seizing a few points, 22, 23; leaving a drawing unfinished because he had to learn something else, 13, 509, 35, 368, 37, 107, no time to do the “tailoring,” 37, 453 n.; drawing, the foundation of his literary work, 13, 501, 528; his work divided between writing and drawing, 36, 350; no gift for colour arrangement, 35, 216, 383; chiaroscurist rather than colourist, 20, 175; architectural drawings living from corner to corner, from acuteness of delight, 35, 296
- (3) Account of his artistic development:—a drawing (æt. 4), 3, 331; began by copying maps, 13, 502–3, 35, 74, and Cruikshank's Grimm, 13, 503–4, 35, 74; earliest sketch-books, 35, 77–8, 467
- 1830–31, first lessons, 1, xxxii. n., 35, 621
- 1833, foreign tour drawings, 13, 504–5; industry, 13, 505, in delicate line, 35, 120; energy thrown into it, 35, 141, Florentine minute touches, 22, 383
- 1835, lessons from Fielding, 35, 214–5, “cannot bear to paint in oils,” 1, xxxii. n.: drawings of the year, 35, 214, 617, 623; 1832–35, acicular precision of black line and dot, etc., 35, 621–3; Proutesque style, 35, 277, 622–3
- 1835–42, generally, 35, 621–7; Fielding processes found unsuitable for Alps, 35, 216; abandons colour for outline, 35, 216, 624, 625
- 1837, drawings characterised, 35, 623
- 1837–38, list of dated drawings, 1, xxxvi n.,
- Oxford vacation sketches, not in imitation of Turner, 13, 506–7
- 1840–41, imitating partly Prout, partly Roberts, 4, 343, 13, 507, 35, 262–3, 625; imitations of Turner's vignettes, 4, 343, 35, 304, 624; drawings characterised, 35, 295–6; early landscape convention, 35, 624
- 1842, first studies of leafage from nature, 1, 476, 4, 344, 13, 508, a turning-point at Fontainebleau, 35, 313–5, botanical drawing, 25, 204, drawings characterised, 35, 313; 1842–47, physical study, 35, 429
- 1844, botanical precision and delicate colour, 35, 328; drawing busily, 4, xxii.; hopes to paint a Madonna, 35, 339
- 1845, sketching with Harding, 4, 353–4, 35, 371
- 1847, 35, 632
- 1849 and earlier, catalogue of Chamouni drawings, 5, xxi n.
- 1856, 13, 502
- 1858 seq., projected illustrated work on Swiss towns, 5, xxxii., 7, xxii., 13, 521–2, 35, 483, 494, 36, 244; 1860–6–8, studies of figure and drapery, 17, xxxvi n., 18, l., 19, xxxvii.
- (4) General references:—accumulation of his old work, 37, 179, retouching and mounting (1886), 37, 560; an honest copyist (of pictures), 34, 637; architectural drawing, his methods of, 11, 311, 13, 499, 501–2, 35, 490; best drawings, most at Oxford, 14, 358 n., 37, 276; drawing-hand becoming shaky, 15, 366 n., 370; drawing of pines, 23, 398; earlier and later work compared, 31, 109; happy in drawing, 1, 453, 28, 206, 648, 33, 403, 35, 623; his early complacency in and later dissatisfaction, 22, 183–4; hopes for cataloguing, etc., of his work, 37, 179–80; intense love of form, 13, 507; landscape drawing, method of, 33, 532; liked drawing things without life, 15, xxii.; memoranda of skies, 20, 104; methods of reproducing his drawings, 11, 312; one of the chagrins of his life, that he did not draw more, 34, 668; onlookers interested in his work, 35, 356, 623; over-praised in his youth, 13, 505; power of delineation, 13, 508; thousands of days spent in, 33, 403; wash and grey tint drawings, 14, 406; what he might have done, instead of writing books, 8, 194 n.; years spent in Alpine drawing, 23, 398; zoological studies, 18, 245

The foregoing Index of R.'s own references to his drawing may be supplemented by a few further remarks.

A general estimate of R. as an artist was given by Professor Norton in his Introduction to the Boston Exhibition of 1879 (see below, p. 222). This estimate is quoted in 13, 583.

Mr. W. G. Collingwood has written two accounts of Ruskin's drawings: (1) as an introduction to the 1891 edition of the Poems; this is printed in 2, xxxix.–xliv. (2) As an introduction to the Ruskin Exhibition of 1901. This was summarised as an introduction to the Ruskin Exhibition of 1907, and is quoted below.

Another estimate is given by Mr. Arthur Pope in an Introduction to the Catalogue of the Ruskin Exhibition held in the Fogg Art Museum (Harvard), 1909–10. Mr. Pope remarks that "most of R.'s drawings are evidently the work of a man who had other things on his mind. Oftentimes he jumped restlessly from one medium to another, first working in pencil, then, becoming dissatisfied in this, putting in some touches with the pen, then perhaps a bit of wash or even colour in a few places—the drawing being left unfinished finally. The different bits are almost always effective, but the drawings are apt to be collections of bits, though often delightfully arranged, and not complete pictures. . . . Ruskin differed from the scientist on the other hand in that it is the visually appreciable order of the form that especially attracts him, and that he tries to point out and emphasise. . . . He had a wonderful feeling for the effective, and the lack of finish in places was undoubtedly often the designed suppression of the unessential. . . . Although he was not primarily an artist at all, yet of all the painters in England of the 19th century, there are strangely few whose work has the vital and lasting interest of Ruskin's." see also, for other estimates, 38, 128, 142, 162, 187.

The following summary describes the various phases and styles of Ruskin's work in drawing:—

(1) Childish efforts; maps, facsimiles of Cruikshank, etc., and boyish studies under the age of 13. see, e.g., Nos. 578, 607, 1098, 1522 in the following catalogue.

(2) Early sketches from nature during a foreign tour in 1833, many of them vignettted in the manner of the illustrations in Roger's Italy. see 2, xl., and in the Catalogue, e.g., Nos. 83, 301, 599.

(3) Adaptations of Prout's methods during his second foreign tour in 1835. The Catalogue includes a large number of examples under this head; both of the original sketches made on the spot, and of re-drawings from them. see 2, xl.–xli., and in the Catalogue, e.g., Nos. 1868, 1918, 2045.

(4) By 1837 "the outline style had become freer and larger." see 2, xli., and in the Catalogue, e.g., Nos. 62, 625.

A little later in date are experimental drawings in water-colour, influenced by Copley Fielding; e.g., in the Catalogue, Nos. 614, 2127, 2128

At Oxford, R.'s reputation as a draughtsman was considerable, 35, lxiv.

(5) Drawings of 1840–41, influenced by the hard pencil on grey paper, with lights in body colour, of David Roberts. see, e.g., Nos. 61, 1172–1180, 1398. On this foreign tour, R. notes that he "got 47 large size sketches and 34 small," 1, 453.

(6) A phase followed in which R. imitated Turner; either in elaborately "composed" vignettes (see 2, xli.–xlii., and in the Catalogue, e.g., Nos. 65, 386, 433, 773); or, later, in the method of Liber Studiorum (see, e.g., Nos. 106, 424, 1592, and cf. 4, xxiii.); or "in a variation of the same, which consisted in a slight pencil sketch, firm and emphatic quill-pen work to represent the etched line, and brush-work in brown, on paper usually grey." Examples of this latter method are Nos. 283, 416. These "Turnerian" methods were practised at times almost throughout R.'s life.

"As years went on," continues Mr. Collingwood, "the pen-work became finer and the colour more predominant: the solid white, used at first for high lights, invaded the tints and gave a mystery to the outline; and in ten years more he had found his central style, a manner quite his own, producing beautiful results, inimitable by any method of reproduction. That style in turn developed into the delicate and dainty water-colour painting of his late years; passing through a phase in which the pencil took the place of the pen, useful for getting notes of architectural detail and mountain form, and never quite abandoned."

(7) Returning to the chronological order, we may note 1842 as the year in which R. abandoned mere imitations and commenced the sincere study of nature; see the references given above to his own words in this sense, 2, xlii., and in the Catalogue, e.g., Nos. 125, 398, 466, 902.

(8) In 1845 he went to Italy, and drew from the Primitives (e.g. Nos. 797–9); he also went to Switzerland to look for Turner subjects (e.g. No. 644). With J. D. Harding, he sketched in Italian lakeland (e.g. Nos. 162, 894): see 2, xliii. With Harding he went to Venice, where he did much drawing (e.g. Nos. 1817, 1869).

(9) To 1846 and 1847 belong some serious mountain studies (e.g. No. 2101), and some Scotch drawings (e.g. Nos. 573–5).

(10) Following years were occupied with his studies for Seven Lamps and Stones of Venice. The Catalogue sufficiently shows, without detailed references, the large amount of drawing which went to the making of those books.

(11) "Drawings for the last two volumes of Modern Painters. The engravings of these, beautiful though they are, hardly show the originals; though from the book one knows that its author had dwelt upon the aspects of nature, and had struggled with the problems of art with more than an amateur's attention. His Aiguilles and Matterhorns, his mossy stones and his repeated studies from the Old Masters, tell all the same tale of passionate interest in the subject and penetrative insight into the situation."

(12) "Many succeeding summers (1854–63) were spent in obtaining materials for a projected History of Swiss Towns, the drawings for which were full of detail, handled with extremest fineness in some parts, and with a breadth extending into carelessness in others." see the references to R. above (p. 217), and in the Catalogue, e.g., Nos. 157, 1655.

(13) "It was not until 1866 that he emerged into a still more developed style in another visit to Switzerland." see, e.g., Nos. 293, 887, 1069.

(14) At home, at the same period, he devoted much time and care to various studies of flowers and still-life—of minerals, Egyptology, and Greek coins; of shells and birds, 18, l., 19, xxiii.–xxiv.; of studies at the Zoo, 18, 245.

(15) "In 1868 he was again attracted by his ancient love for French Gothic to Abbeville, where his work showed a great advance on that which he had previously done for the Seven Lamps. The same kind of work was repeated in 1869 at Verona." To this period belong many of his most accomplished pencil drawings (e.g. No. 16), and his most beautiful water-colours (e.g. Nos. 1422, 2035, 2036).

(16) In 1870 he entered on his duties as Slade Professor at Oxford. He sketched with his pupils afield; and he prepared a large number of drawing copies.

(17) Journeys abroad in 1870, 1872, 1874, 1876–77 did not show any material alterations in the methods and styles already described. The journey of 1882 was marked by some of his most beautiful coloured drawings of architecture: see, e.g., Nos. 1034, 1035.

(18) Ruskin's last drawings (1889) were the pencil notes, Nos. 315, 955.

Ruskin seldom painted in oils. "In his later years he used to say," as Mr. Collingwood records, "that the practical reason why he never went on with oil painting was that he had to draw, and to keep his drawings, among books and papers, and oils were messy and did not smell nice. But no doubt the rea fact was that his drawings were mainly meant for book illustration, done for the engraver, and intended, on a small scale, to get as much form as possible" (R. W. S. Catalogue, p. ii.). His early attempts in oil seem for the most part to have been suppressed; though the Catalogue includes one example (783).

Ruskin etched several plates, and took much trouble in supervising the work of the engravers of his drawings. For a mezzotint, he drew the outline separately for etching, and made another drawing with the tint for the engraving: several examples are included in the Catalogue. Mr. George Allen used to recall the fact that Ruskin made five distinct studies before etching the plate of the Pass of Faido, "Turnerian Typography."

Many proofs of the plates in Modern Painters, touched by Ruskin, are in existence. One collection of them is in the Library of Mr. B. B. Macgeorge, of Glasgow: see pp. 192-3 of his privately printed Catalogue (1906).

"He was not naturally a colourist. In later life he found out for himself the ways and means of producing bits of very sweet opalescent colour, but at any time was capable of relapsing into gaudiness, in hours of fatigue or ill health: and throughout his earlier life, he was much more at home in light and shade, or in work with the point" (R. W. S. Catalogue, pp. iv.-v.)

CATALOGUE OF RUSKIN'S DRAWINGS

(Mainly those published, exhibited, or referred to)

WITH INDEX REFERENCES

THIS is not a complete Catalogue of every drawing or sketch by Ruskin which is in existence. Such pieces number many thousands; to enumerate them all would be impossible and unprofitable.

It is a Catalogue of Drawings and Sketches which come within one or other of the following classes: (1) engraved or otherwise published; (2) exhibited; (3) referred to in this edition. (4) To these three definite classes a fourth is added. Some drawings are also included, of which particulars have been available and which it seemed desirable to add, either from their intrinsic interest or as supplementing R.'s range of subject and method.

Engraved or otherwise Published Drawings.—This edition includes, it is believed, a reproduction of every drawing by R. which has anywhere or at any time (up to the end of 1910) been published. It also includes 176 drawings not elsewhere published. Where a drawing reproduced in this edition has also been reproduced elsewhere, the first fact only is stated in this Catalogue; particulars of the other places of publication will be found at the end of the Lists of Illustrations in the several volumes of the Edition.

In the case of plates after Turner or other artists, it should be noted that in nearly every case the plates were either etched by R. himself, or engraved from drawings of his (see 5, 11–12, comparing, however, 7, 8 n.). Ruskin, in the former passage, speaks of his translation of Turner's colour into black and white; it may be doubted, however, whether in the case of reproductions from Liber Studiorum he made similar studies for the engravers. All Plates, for which he was certainly responsible in either of the senses mentioned above, are included in the Catalogue (generally under the name of the original artist).

Not every woodcut or minor illustration included in Ruskin's books is enumerated in this Catalogue. Every Plate is included, but in the case of the other illustrations selection has been made. The number of minor illustrations is very large (796); some of them, though elucidatory of the text, are in themselves quite unimportant; and it is not in all cases possible to know which of them were prepared by Ruskin himself. Among these woodcuts, etc., such drawings only are included in the Catalogue as are known to have been done by Ruskin, and as are of some interest or importance, or have been exhibited.

Exhibited Drawings and Sketches:—Ruskin's handiwork has been shown (i.) in temporary Exhibitions, and (ii.) in permanent Exhibitions.

The temporary Exhibitions are, in order of date:—

1. At exhibitions of the "Graphic Society," 1844 (see 4, xl.), and, 1869 onwards, at the "Hogarth Club." Catalogues of these Exhibitions are not available. Some particulars of the Hogarth Club (founded by D. G. Rossetti and others) may be found in W. M. Rossetti's Ruskin, Rossetti, and Pre-Raphaelitism. Ruskin was among the “Artistic Members.” The Rules, etc., of which a copy is in the British Museum, show that its Exhibitions (held at 6 Waterloo Place) were “strictly on private view, and not submitted to press criticism.”

2. In 1869 at the Royal Institution R. showed several drawings in illustration of his Lecture on “The Flamboyant Architecture of the Valley of the Somme” (19, 269 seq.). In the present Catalogue this Exhibition is referred to as “Somme.”

3. In 1870 at the Royal Institution drawings were similarly shown in illustration of the lecture on Verona (19, 449 seq.). This Exhibition is referred to as “Verona” in the Catalogue.

4. At the Annual Exhibitions of the Royal Society of Painters in Water Colours. R. was elected an Honorary Member of the Society in 1873. “Nothing ever pleased me more,” he said; “I have always been abusing the artists, and now they have complimented me. They always said I couldn’t draw, and it’s very nice to think they give me credit for knowing something about art” (Ruskin Relics, p. 131). R. after his election became an occasional exhibitor. In the Catalogue “R.W.S.,” with a date in brackets, refers to these Exhibitions. Drawings by him were sometimes shown in the rooms without being included in the catalogues.

5. In 1878 at the Fine Art Society, Ruskin had an exhibition of his drawings in illustration of, and connexion with, his collection of drawings by Turner (13, 395, 487 seq.). “F.A.S. (1878)” in the Catalogue.

6. In 1878–79 a few drawings by R. were included in the Prout and Hunt Exhibition (14, 435–436). “F.A.S. (1879)” in the Catalogue.

7. Boston and New York, 1879. An Exhibition largely the same as 5, but containing also other pieces (13, 582–588). “Boston” in the Catalogue.

8. At Coniston, July 21—Sept. 15, 1900, a Ruskin Exhibition was held. “Coniston” in the Catalogue.

9. In 1901, Feb. 4—March 2, a Ruskin Exhibition was held at the Royal Society of Painters in Water Colours. “R.W.S.” in the Catalogue. For bibliographical note on the Catalogue, see above, p. 119. The Exhibition contained 427 items.

10. In the autumn of 1901 an Exhibition of Drawings by Ruskin was held in the Ruskin Museum, Sheffield (see 30, 167). “Sheffield (1901)” in the Catalogue.

11. At Coniston in 1903, the “Fourth Annual Exhibition at the Coniston Institute” included several drawings by Ruskin. “Coniston (1903)” in the Catalogue.

12. In the spring of 1904 a Ruskin Exhibition was held in the Manchester City Art Gallery. “M.” in the Catalogue. For bibliographical note on the Catalogue, see above, p. 121.

13. In 1906 the “Catalogue of the Ruskin Museum, Coniston Institute” (above, p. 122) included several drawings by Ruskin. “Coniston (1906)” in the Catalogue; the R. drawings were not numbered.

14. In March and April 1907 a Ruskin Exhibition was held at the Fine Art Society. “F.A.S.” in the Catalogue. see above, p. 123.

15. At the Fogg Art Museum, Harvard College, 1909–10, a Ruskin Exhibition was held “in memory of Charles Eliot Norton.” The catalogue (above, p. 123) was compiled, with an introduction, by Mr. Arthur Pope. Fifty-four drawings by Ruskin were shown (Nos. 1–48, but some of the numbers included more than one piece). This Exhibition is referred to as “Fogg” in the Catalogue.

16. In addition to the foregoing Exhibitions, a few drawings by R. have been shown from time to time at various Exhibitions—at Brighton (above, p. 14), at the Dudley Gallery, at the “Old Masters,” at Bradford (May to Oct. 1904, Inaugural Exhibition at the Cartwright Memorial Hall), at Exhibitions of the Alpine Club, at the London County Council’s schools of art, and elsewhere

The permanent Exhibitions of drawings by Ruskin are:—

1. In the Ruskin Drawing School at Oxford (see Vol. 21). "Oxford" in the Catalogue. This is the largest and most representative of all collections of R.'s drawings. For a general account of it, see 21, xxix. seq.; for index of R.'s drawings in it, 21, 325–326. It should be remembered that many of the drawings were for use as exercises, etc., see 21, xxx.–xxx1.

("St." □ Standard Series, "Ref." □ Reference Series, "Ed." □ Educational, and "Rud." □ Rudimentary Series.)

2. The British Museum has a small but characteristic collection of R.'s handiwork. Several of the examples were in 1901 included in "An Exhibition of Drawings and Sketches by Old Masters and Deceased Artists of the English School, principally acquired between 1895 and 1901." Of this Exhibition, held at the Museum in 1901, a Guide was issued; referred to in the Catalogue as "Brit. Mus. Guide."

3. The Victoria and Albert (South Kensington) Museum has two examples by Ruskin in its "National Gallery of British Art": see its Catalogue of Water Colour Paintings, 1908, p. 313.

4. It may be useful to state that the Tate Gallery has as yet (October 1911) only one slight example of Ruskin (No. 1241, below).

5. The Ruskin Museum at Sheffield contains a few examples: see 30, 293.

6. Various Municipal and similar Galleries contain drawings by Ruskin. Among them may be mentioned the Birmingham City Art Gallery, the Manchester Art Museum, and the South London Art Gallery.

7. The Ruskin Museum at the Coniston Institute owns several; and many more are generally placed there on loan from Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Severn.

Two drawings were mistakenly included in some of these Exhibitions which were not by Ruskin, and there are some of which the attribution to him must be considered doubtful. Those which are excluded from the following Catalogue as now known not to be by Ruskin are:—

An Australian Opal, exh. at Coniston, 163; R.W.S., 391; M., 416. The drawing was reproduced, in the belief that it was Ruskin's, as frontispiece to Vol. 26. Mr. A. Macdonald, who had not noticed the drawing in the three Exhibitions above named, on seeing the reproduction, at once identified it as a study which he had made for Ruskin.

"Bridge of Kaiser's Thal [Kaiserstuhl], Rhine, in 1862," exh. F.A.S. 87. This drawing was included in the Exhibition by inadvertence. It is by R.'s assistant, J. W. Bunney, and was exhibited as his at Coniston (1903), 115.

The doubtful drawings are Nos. 297 (Bristol) and 2093, 2094 (Vesuvius) in the following Catalogue; notes discussing the attribution will be found under those numbers.

Similarly, there are published drawings which have been ascribed to Ruskin but are really the work of his assistants. An instance is noted at 35, lxxix.–lxxx.

Ruskin's work has not escaped the attention of forgers. Mr. Spielmann mentions "a large, highly finished, architecturally drawn, photographic sort of oil picture, representing the Houses of Parliament at Westminster seen from the Thames, evidently done from a photograph, not unskilfully, and signed at length 'John Ruskin!'" ("Art Forgeries and Counterfeits," in the Magazine of Art, n.S., vol. ii., 1904, pp. 77–78).

Many of Ruskin's drawings have been sold. He himself occasionally sold them, through Mr. George Allen (see 37, 309); many of the examples in the collection of Mr. Macgeorge were thus acquired. Several of those exhibited in 1907 were sold, at prices ranging from 200 guineas to 5. The prices of drawings sold at auctions are in several cases given in the Catalogue

The dating of the Drawings in the Catalogue is fixed either by Ruskin's own hand, or by incidental references in his books and letters, or by internal evidence. Where no certain evidence was available, no date is given. It should be noted that his drawings often bear a date which is not that of the year in which they were made. Thus in 1879 he spent some time in going through his portfolios, and signed a large number of the pieces "J. R., 1879" (cf. 37, 276). In that year and at other times he sometimes added the year in which he believed the drawing to have been made, but these added dates were not always accurate.

In the Pall Mall Gazette (July 8, 1889) it was stated, in an account of Ruskin's gifts to the Cork High School for Girls (see 26, 530), that he had "presented eighteen of his original drawings to illustrate Stones of Venice." The drawings, however, were only lent, and were subsequently returned to Brantwood. Most of them doubtless appear in the following Catalogue.

Arrangement of the Catalogue.—The drawings and sketches are placed alphabetically, according to subject.

The date, when definitely known, follows in brackets.

The medium and size, where ascertainable, are next given; the figures mean inches (except where otherwise stated), and the height is given first.

The name of an individual, or institution, or "Brantwood" (meaning Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Severn), which then follows, is that of the owner of the drawing. In many cases, it is probable that the ownership may have changed since the particulars were ascertained. Of private collections of Ruskin's drawings, the choicest and most representative is that of Mrs. Cunliffe, at Ambleside.

Particulars of Exhibition ("Exh.") follow; the abbreviations used have already been explained. References added to the place of Exhibition are to the volume and page in this edition where the drawing is described, noted, or alluded to.

References are next given to reproduction in the present edition, and to allusions in it to the drawing.

Consecutive numbers are appended in square brackets, for convenience of reference.

A few notes are added, here and there, mainly from the Catalogues of various Ruskin Exhibitions. R.'s own remarks are not detailed; the reader can find them by turning up the references.

It is probable that in some few cases the same drawing may be twice entered. Unfortunately, many compilers of catalogues do not give the sizes of the drawings; and as it has been impossible to inspect all the drawings, means of verification are necessarily absent.

“Made at the time when he saw the glowing vision of colour described in Mod. P. (3, 279). Of all this colour there is nothing in his sketch; but in the diary posted up at night it is described in much the same words as those of his book. He had not then learnt to paint colour, but he saw it; and while seeing it, was still able to give the attention to form which is so carefully and steadily carried out in this remarkable drawing.”—Coniston Catal. Compare R.’s own remarks, 35, 625.

Sketch at. see Alpine Chapel.

CHAMOUNI, MONT BLANC AND NEIGHBOURHOOD. [In 1854 R. made a list of most of his earlier sketches of Chamouni: see 6, xxi. This is referred to in the following entries as "R.'s list." R. does not give the sizes, or other detailed particulars; and it is possible, therefore, that some of the items in his list may be identical with drawings otherwise described here]:—

Aiguille d'Argentière, from flank of the Buet (1844). No. 52 in R.'s list. [366]

Aiguille Blaitière, from near its base (1849). No. 40 in R.'s list. [367]

Aiguille Blaitière, view of the spur of, three sketches (1849). Nos. 41–43 in R.'s list. [368–370]

Aiguille Blaitière (1849); w. c. (9½ x 13¾). J. R. Holliday. Exh.—F.A.S. (1878) 48 (13, 524), Coniston 72, R.W.S. 228, M. 333, F.A.S. 36. The centre, engraved by Armytage, 6, Pl. 31. [372]

Inscribed: "Showing finest conchoidal riband-structure. J. R. on the spot, 1849." This drawing is doubtless one or other of the foregoing.

Aiguille Blaitière. The centre of the foregoing, drawn on wood (see 6, xxvii.). Exh.—M. 528. [373]

Aiguille Bouchard, from valley (1849). No. 31 in R.'s list; pencil and brush (8 x 13). Brantwood. Exh.—Boston 53, R.W.S. 190. Engraved by Cuff, 6, Pl. 33. [374]

Aiguille Bouchard and Glacier des Bois (1849); pen (8¼ x 12¼). No. 32 in R.'s list. H. S. Severn. Exh.—Coniston 99, R.W.S. 3, M. 237. Engraved by R., 6, Pl. 34. Ref. to, 37, 145. [375]

Inscribed: "Cleavages of Aiguille Bouchard, and mass of Glacier du Bois, 1856, J. R." But R.'s memory was here at fault, as the inclusion of the drawing in Mod. P. iv. and his own earlier list show.

Aiguille Charmoz, shoulders of, from Chamouni (1849). No. 27 in R.'s list. [376]

Aiguille Charmoz, from bottom of valley, beneath it (1849). No. 29 in R.'s list. [377]

“For expression of the essential character of mountain scenery, we shall find it hard to match some of R.’s Alpine drawings in the work of any other painter. These are usually more or less abstract in colour, often on tinted paper untouched in many places, but they are wonderfully convincing in expression of space, and unequalled in subtlety of drawing of distant mountain peaks. One of the finest is the drawing called ‘Dawn at Neuchâtel,’ done with simple washes on tinted paper: we pass in successive planes from lake foreground, suggested with slightest possible touches, under broad level fields of low stratus clouds, to dark wooded shore and low mountain ranges beyond, and finally to snow-covered peaks, brought out sharply and clearly by the light of the morning sun in the extreme distance, miles and miles away.”—Catal of Fogg Museum Exhibition.

“His most elaborate study, one among many, of this favourite jewel of architecture, before the ‘restoration’ which he witnessed with bitterness and regret. In the Ruskin Museum at Coniston is one of the marble pillars, quite sound, which he acquired and brought away, after it had been torn down with others and thrown aside to make place for the modern masons’ work. This drawing was given by him to his father, who signed it.”—Manchester Catal.

“Placed here to show the care with which preparations were made, by previous studies, for a larger drawing like the following.”—Manchester Catal.

View with plain and mountains (1854); w. c. on grey (13 x 18½). Mrs. Cunliffe. Exh.—Coniston 129, R.W.S. 212, M. 101. Chromo-lithographed, but not published. [1655]

“In 1854, R. undertook a history of Swiss towns, beginning, as was usual with him, by drawing them. This, the first attempted, he says, took up the whole of the summer, and was only half done then. It is, nevertheless, one of his finest, in the combination of breadth in colour-effect with extreme delicacy of execution. You can follow out all the details of castle and church, bourg below and faubourg across the river, and trace the whole history of a mediæval town—not without help of a lens—in this subtlydrawn view. An attempt was made to photogravure it, but the tones were too evasive.”—Manchester Catal.

Decoration on central buttress. All done with one moulding; m no subordination, but the foliations cut smaller than the rest.
No capitals of course

Plan of east end from the transepts. d, e, f are the perfect windows. c has the triangle space carved but has no flamboyant tracery above it and the crockets are poorer and heavier, while d and e have no Δ work, only crockets and animals
-and these much poorer.
The band of arabesque
fancy, but clumsy and debased.

- “Solomon and the Queen of Sheba,” at Turin (1858). For R.’s account of his studies, and Hare’s reminiscences of his work on them, see 16, xxxvii.–xli., 185–186, 35, 495–496, 497. The more important of the studies there described have not been exhibited, nor have they been available in the preparation of this catalogue. It seems that R. made two finished drawings of portions of the picture (which is photographed, 16, 186), and several studies, some subsidiary to the foregoing and some of other portions of the picture; thus:—
- (1) The Queen’s attendants, etc., the lower r. hand portion of the picture; w.c. (4½ ft. x 2 ft.). [2085]
- There was exhibited (Fogg 45) a w.c. study (22 1/8 x 17½) of the negress only; this may have been a piece of the larger study.
- (2) A large chiaroscuro sketch of the negress’s mistress, a maid of honour. see 16, xxxviii. [2086]
 - (3) Solomon; w. c. (5¾ x 3¾). Brantwood. Exh.—R.W.S. 87, F.A.S. 112. Ref. to 36, 287. There is another more finished study of this. [2087]
 - (4) A White Hawk; w. c. (5½ x 3½). C.G. Montefiore. Exh.—R.W.S. 77. F.A.S. 112. [2088]
 - (5) The Queen’s dog. see 16, xxxviii. [2089]

Veronica Officinalis (1883):—

Lamp-black (6 x 5). F.P. Osmaston. Exh.—F.A.S. 166. Engraved by G. Allen, 25, 498. Ref. to, 37, 464. [2090]

Another study of the same; lamp-black (5¼ x 4). Oxford. Rud. 295 (21, 234 n.). [2091]

Vesuvius in Eruption (1840); w. c. (9 x 5). Miss Harrison. Ref. to, 36, 29 [2092]Vesuvius (?). Two drawings; w. c. Exh.—F.A.S. 153, 160. [2093, 2094]

Attributed in the F.A.S. Catalogue to R. in "1840." The style and workmanship are unlike R.'s, and quite remote from his handiwork in 1840–41. It is difficult to believe that they were done by the artist of the preceding drawing. On the other hand, Mrs. Arthur Severn, in reply to criticism to like effect in the press, wrote as follows (Daily Telegraph, March 18, 1907):—

SIR,—I read with deep interest the article in The Daily Telegraph of March 12, and feel grateful for so full, sound, and appreciative an account of the Ruskin exhibition now being held at the Fine Art Society (148 New Bond Street). The writer, however, speaks with doubt about the Vesuvius drawings in 1840 (my husband, Arthur Severn, did so also!), and I shall be glad if you will allow me space in your columns to explain that these drawings were given to me by my cousin (John Ruskin) a good many years ago, and once here, when some friend said they were unlike his style, I took them to him, with other drawings, for their history. He turned them over, dictating as he handed them to me, what I was to put on the back. On seeing these particular drawings he at once said, "That's me, in 1840!" and got me to write these words at the back of each. His valet (Baxter) was present at the time, and well remembers this incident, at which we all three laughed, for Ruskin himself evidently thought some people might be mystified about these drawings not being in his usual style of that period. But it is a fact that he was at Vesuvius in 1840, as may be seen from dated drawings in the exhibition, and there are none there not by his own hand.—Believe me, Sir, faithfully yours,
JOAN RUSKIN SEVERN.

ADDENDA ET CORRIGENDA

- II. ADDITIONAL MATTER:—
NOTES IN MURRAY'S "HANDBOOK FOR NORTHERN ITALY"
LETTERS
- III. CORRECTIONS IN THE TEXT AND NOTES, AND

- IV. TURNER DRAWINGS AT THE NATIONAL AND TATE GALLERIES: REVISED NUMBER

THIS section supplements the Bibliographical Notes in previous volumes by particulars of reprints, translations, new editions, etc., which appeared after the several Notes had gone to press.

A few editions, etc., of earlier date, which had escaped previous notice, are also included.

Full details are given in the case of authorised and copyright editions only. In 1907 (seven years after the author's death) the copyright of many of Ruskin's books in their original form expired, and numerous non-copyright editions began to appear. The publishers of these, in order to keep on the safe side of the law, issued Ruskin's books without his later revisions. These, as the Bibliographical Notes, etc., in the present Edition have shown, were often very numerous and important. A controversy thereupon took place in the public press upon the literary morality of this proceeding; the Saturday Review, on Feb. 9, 1907, and in subsequent articles, calling attention to the fact that under the existing law "authors who have become English classics and a great national possession have no protection in what was most precious to them—their literary reputation. Any one can print and sell them, and the law is indifferent whether the flaws and faults in their work, which they discovered and removed, are reproduced or not." The controversy was summarised in a pamphlet (pp. 60) bearing the following title-page:—

Copyright and | Copy-Wrong | The Authentic | and | The Unauthentic | Ruskin
| London George Allen, Ruskin House | 1907

The matter was the subject of a question (by Mr. Beckett) in the House of Commons on Feb. 27, 1907, and the President of the Board of Trade replied that when copyright legislation was introduced "the question of finding a remedy for the evil referred to should not be overlooked." This promise was redeemed in the Copyright Bill of 1911, whereby the term of copyright would be extended to the life of the author and fifty years afterwards; and by this Bill the whole of an author's work (in whatever edition) would pass into the public domain at the same time.

ADDENDA

I. BIBLIOGRAPHICAL THE POETRY OF ARCHITECTURE

(Supplementary to I. 2.)

In 1905 a Small Edition was issued, with the following title-page:—

The | Poetry of Architecture: | or, | The Architecture of the Nations of Europe | Considered in its association with Natural | Scenery and National Character. | By | John Ruskin, LL.D.,
D.C.L., | Honorary Student of Christ Church, and Honorary Fellow | of Corpus Christi
College, Oxford. | With Illustrations drawn by the Author. | London | George Allen, 156,
Charing Cross Road | 1905 | [All rights reserved.]

Issued Feb. 15, 1905, in green cloth, with top-edges gilt; lettered on the back “Ruskin | The | Poetry | of | Architecture.” Price 6s. 1000 copies.

The edition was reprinted from that of 1893, the illustrations being, where necessary, reduced in size.

From electrotype plates of it, a Pocket Edition was issued in 1905, uniform with other volumes in the same ed. (see XV. 6), the title-page being

The Poetry of | Architecture || By | John Ruskin | London: George Allen.

On the reverse of the title-page, “June 1905. All rights reserved.” Price 3s. 6d., reduced in Jan. 1907 to 2s. 6d. 4000 copies.

NOTES ON THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF PERSPECTIVE, ETC.

(Supplementary to I. 214.)

The articles from the Architectural Magazine, printed in Vol. I. pp. 215–245, were reprinted in 1910 in a Pocket and in a Popular Edition of The Elements of Perspective; see below, p. 315.

THE KING OF THE GOLDEN RIVER

(Supplementary to I. 354.)

This book has continued to be reprinted; the last issue (1909), “Thirty-Eighth Thousand,” having the cover and frontispiece printed in colours.

The original edition, with Doyle’s illustrations, was reproduced in Canada in 1905—published at Toronto by Morang & Co. (“Canadian Copyright Edition”).

The copyright of the book expired in 1907, and it was printed, with new illustrations by T. H. Robinson, in “Collins’ Penny Library” (London and Glasgow: Collins’ Clear-Type Press). Octavo, pp. 46, in paper covers, with a coloured illustration on the front.

It was also printed in a volume of stories entitled “The King of the Golden River and other Stories, by John Ruskin, etc., etc.” (Thomas Nelson & Sons, 1907). Ruskin’s story occupies pp. 1–67. Three coloured illustrations by H. Rowntree were inserted.

It was also included in a volume of Everyman’s Library: see below, “The Two Paths”; and in “The Ruskin Series” (Chatto & Windus), 1907, reprinted 1909.

Among numerous unauthorised American editions are the following:—

Curious Stories | about | Fairies, and | other Funny People. | With illustrations by Billings. | Boston: | Ticknor and Fields. | MDCCCLVI.

Ruskin’s story occupies pp. 1–38, but not so much as the author’s name is given.

The King of the Golden River is also included (pp. 56–88) in Childhood, vol. x. of Little Classics, edited by Rossiter Johnson (Boston: Osgood, 1875).

See also under “Seven Lamps.”

The following German translations were printed in 1861:—

Der König des Goldflusses, oder die Schwarzen Brüder: aus dem Engl. von A. Benson mit 2 Bildern. Dresden, Kuntze, 1861.

Der König des Goldenen Stromes, oder die Schwarzen Brüder. Slavische Märchensage. Aus dem Engl. von Henriette Tuwald. Stuttgart, 1861.

An Italian translation was printed in 1891. The title-page is as follows:—

Il Re Del Fiume d’Oro | od | I Fratelli Neri. | Leggenda della Stiria | del | Signor J. Ruskin. | Tradotta dall’ Inglese | per | La Signora Barbara Charlton. | Londra: | 1891.

Crown 8vo, pp. viii. + 46. Half-title (with blank reverse), pp. i., ii.; title-page (with blank reverse), pp. iii., iv.; dedicatory letter (“Ad Adrianno Dingli”), pp. v., vi.; contents, p. vii.; text, pp. 1–46. The headlines are “Il Re del Fiume d’Oro” (on left-hand pages) and “Od I Fratelli Neri” (on right-hand pages). The illustrations are not reproduced, except that a version of the one on I. 394 is given (“Il Signor Libeccio”). There is no imprint.

Issued in blue paper boards, lettered on the front cover “Il Re del Fiume d’Oro.” A copy is in Mr. Cook’s collection; probably the Italian translation was printed for private circulation only.

A Welsh translation, with a preface and glossary by H. Brython Hughes, was issued in 1909:—

Brenin yr Afon Aur; neu Y Brodyr Duon. Stori Tylwyth Teg .|.|. Diubych [1909].

POEMS

(Supplementary to II. xlv., 2.)

In 1906 the Poems appeared in Routledge’s “Muses Library,” with an Essay on Ruskin by G. K. Chesterton, who remarks (ix.–x.) that “R.’s long rolling sentences, with their triumphant rise and fall, were themselves expressions of his belief in continuity, and the sublime curves of history.”

A Selection of Ruskin’s Poems appeared in the volume entitled “Frederick Tennyson to Arthur Henry Clough,” comprised in A. H. Miles’s The Poets and the Poetry of the Century (London: Hutchinson & Co.).

The section devoted to Ruskin contains a Prefatory Note by W. G. Collingwood (pp. 581–588), and then “The Destruction of Pharaoh” (II. 336), p. 589; “The Avalanche” (II. 7), pp. 590–1; “The Wreck” (II. 73), pp. 591–2; “Mont Blanc Revisited” (II. 233), pp. 592–3; “Mont Blanc” (II. 237), pp. 593–4; “Awake, Awake” (II. 245), pp. 594–5; and “Trust thou thy love” (II. 250), p. 596

Another selection appeared, in 1908, in the following publication: The Hull Booklets. I. A. Walk in Chamouni and other Poems by John Ruskin (Hull: J. R. Tutin). Price Twopence Net. Pp. 32, paper wrappers.

The pieces included are, besides the "Walk," "The Hills of Carrara," "Saltzburg," "The Glacier," "A Morning Picture on the Loire" (being an extract from "The Broken Chain"), "The Water Wheel," "Montenotte," "Christ Church," "The Months," "The Old Seaman," "Agonia," "The Last Smile," and "Charitie."

The inclusion of single poems in Anthologies of English Verse has been noted in the bibliographical notes appended to the several poems (see, e.g., II. 227 n., 250 n.)

MODERN PAINTERS

(Supplementary to III. lxi.)

Pocket Edition (1904).—From electrotype plates of the Small Edition of Modern Painters, a Pocket Edition was issued in 1904, in 6 vols., similar to other volumes in the same ed., the title-page being Modern Painters | Vol. I. [II.–VI.] | By | John Ruskin | London: George Allen.

The quotation from Wordsworth appears on the reverse of the half-title in vols. ii., iv., v., and vi. (not in vols. i., iii.); on the reverse of the title-page, "All rights reserved" and the date "October 1904" (vols. i.–iii.), "November 1904" (vols. iv., vi.). Price 2s. 6d. each vol. (vols. i., ii., and vi.); 3s. 6d. (vols. iii.–v.). Price reduced to 2s. 6d. in Jan. 1907; and that of each vol. to ls. 6d. in Jan. 1908. 5000 copies. Reprinted, vol. i. (1908), 1000 copies; vol. ii. (1909), 1000 copies.

Popular Edition (1906).—Again from electrotype plates, the book was printed in a cheaper form; Pott, 8vo, with gilt tops, and monogram on side. Price (vols. i., ii., and vi.) 1s. (in leather 1s. 6d.); (vols. iii.–v.), 1s. 6d. (in leather 2s.). Reduced in Jan. 1907 to 1s. and 1s. 6d.

The copyright of the earlier editions of Modern Painters expired in 1907, and unauthorised editions were issued in

THE SEVEN LAMPS OF ARCHITECTURE

(Supplementary to VIII. liii.)

It may be added that of the large-paper copies of the 1880 ed., two were distinguished from the rest by having the plates pulled on India paper. One of these, presented to him by Ruskin, is in Mr. Wedderburn's collection.

For the first edition an additional plate (etched by Ruskin) was prepared, but not used. As some few copies of it are in private collections, a reproduction of it is included in this volume (Plate vii.)

(Supplementary to VIII. liv.)

In 1904, from electrotype plates of the preceding Small Edition, a Pocket Edition was issued, uniform with other volumes in the same ed. (see XV. 6), the title-page being

The Seven Lamps of | Architecture | By | John Ruskin | London: George Allen.

On the reverse, "September 1904. All rights reserved." Price 3s. 6d.; reduced in Jan. 1907 to 2s. 6d., and in Jan. 1908 to 1s. 6d. 8000 copies. Reprinted (1907) 500; (1908) 1000.

Popular Edition (1906).—On the title-page (otherwise the same as in the Small Ed.), "Popular Edition. | London: George Allen | 1906 | [All rights reserved]." Price 1s. net, cloth; 1s. 6d., leather.

1907. Tauchnitz Edition (No. 3951), pp. 335. There is the following note by the publisher:—

"This volume is reprinted from the English edition of 1880, which was revised by the author's own hand. The copyright has been acquired for the Tauchnitz Edition in due legal manner from Mr. George Allen, Mr. Ruskin's own publisher. All other editions are necessarily based on the early and unrevised text, the copyright of which has expired; they are therefore incomplete, out of date, and not in accordance with the author's later wishes.

"LEIPZIG, March 6th, 1907."

The copyright of the earlier editions of this book expired in 1907, and unauthorised editions were issued in:—

Everyman's Library London: J. M. Dent & Co.), No. 207. With introduction by Selwyn Image.

II. ADDITIONAL MATTER

NOTES CONTRIBUTED TO THE THIRD EDITION OF MURRAY'S "HANDBOOK FOR TRAVELLERS IN NORTHERN ITALY" (1847)

[Bibliographical Note.—The Notes here collected have hitherto escaped the attention of Ruskin's editors and bibliographers. They are taken (with revision and curtailment) from a note-book, preserved at Brantwood, which Ruskin filled during his Italian journey in 1845, and which has often been quoted from in this edition (see above, p. 85). At p. x. of the Handbook it is explained that "The observations between inverted commas to which the letter R. is appended, are by the author of Modern Painters."

The Notes were repeated in the fourth (1852), fifth (1854), and sixth (1856) editions. They then gradually disappeared—some for a while surviving intact, others having the inverted commas removed and being paraphrased.]

On the church of St. Andrea at Carrara (p. 406):—

"It corresponds in age and style with the Duomo of Monza. These two buildings afford examples of a peculiar and most graceful Gothic.¹ Fragments of a similar style occur at Sarzana; but this church at Carrara is decidedly the most perfect gem of its kind. I prefer it to that at Monza."

On the churches of S. Martino and S. Michele at Lucca² (p. 409):—

"The rich inlaid work of the fronts of this church and S. Michele are altogether unique. Both represent hunting-pieces, lions, wild boars, wolves, foxes, and deer pursued by hounds and men, with lance and horn, constantly repeated."

On the monument of Ilaria at Lucca² (p. 410):—

"The couched figure is deserving of great praise: the head-dress is singular, and consists of a turban-like fillet round the brow, divided by bands of stars. The same head-dress in every respect occurs in a picture by Gentile Bellini in the collection of Professor Rosini, at Pisa."

On the Volto Santo at Lucca (p. 411):—

"The face of the original is fine."

On the pulpit in San Bartolommeo in Pantano at Pistoia (p. 435):—

"Very archaic in manner and very barbarous; though quaint and interesting. It is supported by a figure with its hands on its knees, in a skull cap, and of ignoble features, like a black slave: and by two beasts, one a lioness suckling a cub, the other a lion standing over a winged dragon, who bites his lip—a frequent incident occurring at Parma, Lucca, and in other Romanesque buildings. All the figures have the iris of the eye painted black."

² [See the Index for numerous references.]

On the fresco of "Job visited by his friends" in the Campo Santo at Pisa (p. 451):—
 "It is singular that Elihu is absent from the whole composition."¹

On pictures in the Accademia at Pisa (p. 459):—

"An exquisite Pinturicchio; 4 figures, with a flat landscape behind. His works are rare in North Italy. The picture is hung up over a door out of the way.

"A valuable Filippo Lippi;—Madonna, St. Matthew, St. James the Great, and St. Augustine. The principal figure is poor, but the rest is noble.² The collection is otherwise of some interest, as exhibiting the relation which Giunta da Pisa bore to Giotto. Several works of the former are of higher merit here than is usually attributed to them."

On a statue³ in S. Maria della Spina at Pisa (p. 460):—

"This exquisite work seems to have been richly painted, and the hair gilt."

On a picture⁴ in the same church (p. 460):—

"It is a very noble picture, and has much sentiment and feeling."

On works of art in Sta. Caterina at Pisa (pp. 462–463):—

"On the left-hand side of the door, at the bottom of the nave, is the monument of Simone Saltarelli, Bishop of Parma, and afterwards Archbishop of Pisa (died 1352). It is composed of an altar tomb with bas-reliefs; the canopy above is supported by ill-shaped arches; it has marble draperies which angels draw back, exhibiting the effigy below, which is hardly to be seen in the darkness. It is fine, though cut on the outside only for effect. Above this rises a tall, disproportionate, and inelegant tabernacle, under which is a villainous copy of the Madonna of Nino in Sa. Maria della Spina. The bas-reliefs below have character and expression, but the rest is of rude and clumsy workmanship.

"On the left-hand side of the nave, half-way up, is a curious picture by Francesco Traini, a pupil of Orcagna. Christ from his lips sends rays of light to the heads of the four evangelists, from whom they are reflected to the head of St. Thomas, who then illuminates, first Plato and Aristotle, and then all the doctors of the church. The figures of the Greek philosophers are the finest.⁵ Just beyond this picture is St. Thomas' pulpit.

² [The Note-book gives a longer description:—

"The first figure on the left, St. James the Great, is singularly grand, and the next, St. Matthew, stooping forward to write is almost as sweet as Fra Angelico. St. John and St. Augustine, opposite,—the latter in episcopal robes with miniatures of saints full length all down the hem, in square pictures of seven or eight inches high—are also very grand, only a little pinching and hardness is perceptible about all the mouths. The heads all come dark against the light, even that of St. Matthew, which is all sunshine. That of St. James is very dark against an exquisitely pure, bright, retiring sky, graduated with delicious refinement. It is curious that this light behind seems to put light into the flesh, which, if the sky be removed with the hand, looks heavy. (I was struck by the same thing in the John Bellini of the Louvre.) Altogether this picture is of a high standard in colour and everything else."

³ [Of the Madonna offering a flower to the infant Saviour, by Nino Pisano. See his name in the Index.]

⁴ [Of the Madonna and Saints, by Sodoma.]

⁵ [In his Note-book from which this passage is taken (with some revision), Ruskin says "It is very singular that Rio, who speaks so depreciatingly of the noble Perugino at the Annunciata at Florence, should praise this picture so highly. It is hard and lifeless, the Christ an entire failure, the Thomas a piece of wood, in expression as well as in colour. Only the two Philosophers are fine." For the reference to Rio, see his Poetry of Christian Art, 1854, p. 67.]

“In a chapel of the south transept is an altar-piece, attributed to Fra Bartolommeo; it has been entirely repainted, and is good for nothing.

“In a chapel beside it, in the same transept, are two most interesting statues by Nino Pisano, called ‘Faith and Charity,’ but the subject is doubtful; they are admirable for grace, purity, and animation, and remarkable for bearing evidence of the rich painting which all Nino’s work seems to have undergone. The iris of the eye has been painted dark, the inside of the dresses blue, and their fringes as well as the hair have been gilt.”¹

On frescoes in San Francesco at Pisa (p. 464):—

“On the roof of the choir are some interesting frescoes, probably by Taddeo Gaddi. The cloisters are remarkable for the richness of the foliage within their enclosure, and for the grace of their columns. The chapter-hall contains good frescoes of Niccola di Pietro: the most important in Pisa after the Campo Santo.”

On Orcagna’s shrine in Or’ San Michele at Florence (p. 495):—

(In front of the shrine two bas-reliefs, the Marriage of the Virgin and the Annunciation)—“the first exquisite and like Angelico.”

(At the north side .|.|. Christ teaching in the Temple.) “The story is told most marvellously. The head of the principal figure is broken, but the body is full of expression: some small figures lean forward most earnestly to listen; one, curiously enough, playing on a psaltery.”

On works of art in Santa Croce at Florence (p. 498):—

(The Cappella Aldobrandini corresponds in style of architecture with that of the Silvestro chapel.) “The bold spring of the lowest part of the canopies of both, and the diminishing proportion of the upper part, gives them a peculiar lightness.”

(A Madonna and a Child, over a door, attributed to Giotto.) “They seem to have been painted for this place, which they fit exactly; if they had been so placed by Giotto, Vasari would have mentioned them.”

(A damaged fresco in the Cappella S. Silvestro. Nothing remains but the single figure of Ubertino, and this is solemn and expressive .|.|. but in point of art decidedly inferior to Giotto.) “The outline is harder, and the realisation less complete.”

(In the same chapel is Christ laid in the sepulchre)—“given by some to Giottino, but there is internal evidence that it is not his. It has, however, been dreadfully repainted, which makes it more difficult to judge, but it is more like Taddeo Gaddi than any one else. It particularly resembles the picture of the same subject attributed to him in the Accademia, both in conception and details, especially in the tomb, which in both is inlaid with marble panels of various colours, painted with great brilliancy and little success. In the centre of the tomb is a medallion with a female head, in the peculiar white head-dress, bound under the chin, of which Taddeo Gaddi is so fond.”

(In the same chapel are three frescoes by Giottino, from the life of S. Silvestro.) “They are half effaced, and difficult to make out: in the highest, he is either baptizing, or boiling somebody in a great cauldron. I think the former. In the next, which is more important, an ox is kneeling to him, while a Madonna (?) looks on from a throne, with a saint on each side. In the lowest he takes a dragon by the nose, in the midst of a ruined city, and blesses the people. The plants which grow in the fissures*mjcont of the rent walls, and these fissures themselves are a very pretty bit of naturalism, as near the thing as can be found of this period. These frescoes are agreeably grouped, and remind one of Giotto, in a way most disadvantageous to Giotto, whose heads are at once more finished, and have less life. He has, however, much power, and the expression of death in one or two of the bodies is true and fine."

(In the Cappella dei Pulci, over the altar, is a Luca della Robbia)—"which may, perhaps, be taken as the fairest, because the most finished, example of the entire impropriety of this mode of working. It is in high relief, and completely coloured, the prevalent colours being a blue verditer, pale, raw, and yet dead; and an equally valueless and intrusive green. The flesh is clay colour. The design is not equal to Robbia's usual work, but the Madonna is very sweet, and by a great effort of imagination, in getting rid of the colour, fine qualities show throughout. There is a nasty brown colour, also, in large spaces."

(Cappella dei Bardi.) "Behind the altar is a most interesting picture, always kept covered and in a dark place. It is Cimabue's portrait of St. Francis,¹ of which Vasari says, 'Lo ritrasse (il che fu cosa nuova in que' tempi) di naturale come seppe il meglio.' The saint is standing, the face drawn full front, and very much in the Greek manner; it is much harder and more rude in drawing than the Madonnas of the Academy and Sta. Maria Novella, and more rigid yet with greater power and expression. The face is emaciated and severe, the corners of the mouth drawn down, the stigmata round and dark. Round the picture is a most interesting series of twenty small paintings, treated in a quaint, forcible, and delightful way, and rich in movement and composition. They, however, appear more archaic than those of the Uffizi picture, though, on the other hand, the central figure is, there, far more rude than the St. Francis. His receiving the stigmata is not here, unless it be at the top, which is concealed by the curtain; or unless, indeed, it be one on the left, in which a crucified figure is extended on the ground, and the saint standing seems touching it with a rod. On the other side he is driving out the devils from a number of possessed persons, the former flying away in little black spider-like shapes, as represented by F. Bartolommeo. The other histories seem highly mystical."

(In the Cappella Peruzzi is Giotto's fresco of the Death of St. John.) "Herod and two other persons are sitting at table under a canopy, of which the form is the same with Giotto, whether it be the roof of a manger, or the palace of Herod the king. A musician on the left, playing on the violin, is a beautiful figure, very like Perugino's treatment of similar subjects, and full of the same subdued feeling. The Herod, also, is very grand, though perhaps not a good ideal of Herod, for he is calm, kingly, and free from appearance of evil passion. Herodias sits on the extreme right; the face is nearly gone, but seems to have been made wicked and sensual. Her daughter kneeling presents her with the head. In the centre of the picture the daughter is dancing, or at least moving softly, while she plays the lyre, and a soldier brings in the head of St. John. The two actions are thus curiously involved—the soldier comes in between the musician and the dancing maiden, who is immediately repeated on the right giving the head to her mother. The second figure of her is exceedingly ugly, and the likeness of her mother wonderfully kept; but the figure with the lyre is fine, and would have been beautiful, but that the shaded side of it is in colour so nearly the same as the background, that it is lost in it, and hence half of the face looks like a badly drawn profile. The faces of the musician and of Herod are worthy of any period of art. The draperies are, however, somewhat clumsier, rounder, and less felt, than those of the Campo Santo at Pisa.”¹

(In the passage leading to the sacristy are many works of the Giotto School)—“but none to be depended upon, as either his or of anybody else of his school in particular; but many of them are good, and all traditionally valuable. The most interesting is the Crucifix, asserted to be that sent by Margheritone to Farinata degli Uberti, after his defence of Florence. The honour is disputed by a Crucifix in the sacristy. There are two inferior works of Angelico in this passage.”

On a picture in Sta. Maria Novella, Florence (p. 505):—

On Angelico’s “Crucifixion” in San Marco, Florence (p. 518):—

“This is by no means a first-rate work of Angelico, and shows all his faults, though many of his beauties.”

On a fresco in Sta. Maria Maddalena, Florence (p. 529):—

“This chapel contains a grand and well-preserved fresco by P. Perugino, a Crucifixion. It consists of six figures in three compartments. In the centre is Christ crucified, with the Magdalen at the foot of the Cross. The Christ is a failure; the Magdalen is very fine. On the left is the Madonna and St. Bernard, on the right St. John and St. Peter. The whole of the sky is now nearly white, the blue having perished; but in the left-hand compartment the whole of the upper part of the sky and the tops of the trees have been villainously repainted, leaving a sharp line where Perugino’s work begins. The landscape in the central division is exquisite—a river flowing at the base of rocky hills among trees, and a village with a Gothic spire in the distance.”³

TO WILLIAM ALLINGHAM

Letters to William Allingham. Edited by H. Allingham and E. Baumer Williams. Longmans & Co., 1911.—This volume contains the following letters from Ruskin:—

1 (pp. 260–1). “TUNBRIDGE WELLS, 25th May 1855.—MY DEAR SIR,—I do not know if you are liable to the weakness which I find occasionally manifested by many of my very good friends—to my great comfort and consolation as I suffer grievously from it myself—of delaying the letters one most wishes to write to some ‘quiet’ moment which never comes: but so it is that your little volume of Poems has lain with a reproachful air in my shelf of poetry—projecting a little over the top of Tennyson in a scowling manner like a cornice—till I am verily ashamed to look at its edge—or to touch it—and dare not take the pleasure of reading a word of it—all on account of my woful procrastination.

“But the fact is, I got the Poems just as I was leaving for the Continent, by no means then able for any examination of them, and when I came back I had hardly time, for some months, for poetry or anything else, but daily business.

“I can only say I like the Poems much—and am sincerely obliged to you for sending me them. They seem to me to show real power—though of course you must do much more than these before you will have the right to rest in work done.

“Meantime with best thanks and best wishes, believe me, faithfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

2 (p. 261). “[February 1860.]—MY DEAR ALLINGHAM,—Thank you for nice long chat, and for telling me what you think.

“I quite agree with you that neither Lowell nor Longfellow wrote finished—or even good poetry. Both of them are hard workers—to whom versemaking is a recreation—nevertheless I believe the ‘Psalm of Life’ to have had more beneficial influence on this generation of English than any other modern composition whatever,¹ except Hood’s ‘Song of the Shirt.’

“I delight in ‘Hiawatha,’ and in bits of the ‘Golden Legend.’

“From Lowell I have myself received more help than from any other writer whatsoever. I have not learned so much—but I have got help and heart from single lines, at critical times.

“For real utility, I think his shrewd sense and stern moral purpose worth all Keats and Shelley put together. I don’t compare him with Keats, but I go to him for other articles—which I can’t get from Keats—namely Conscience—Cheerfulness and Faith.

“You might as well criticise one of Keats’ idle rhymes in his letters, as ‘Excelsior.’—Ever, in haste, most truly yours,

XXXVIII.

3 (p. 262). “[About 1863.]—MY DEAR ALLINGHAM,—Thanks for not being angry with me.¹

“I’ll look at the Fraser poem,² but I answer your note at once lest anything should hinder me—though I can’t enter on the question of the right way to pay poets and painters: except only thus far, that I once thought regular pay the best, for all meditative work—and by examining the facts of old bargains—and making some practical experiments—have had to change my mind.

“I trust your present discouragement will pass away when you get out of the vile air and scenes of London. I can’t live—think—eat—or sleep among them myself.

“I’m sure my face isn’t worth seeing. What should you or anybody want to see it for?—Ever most truly yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

4 (p. 262). “[LONDON, July 13, 1864.]—MY DEAR ALLINGHAM,—I am in a sulky fit just now, and hate alike talking and writing.

“I’m in a state of puzzled collapse, and not fit to see any one. I have not seen Browning for a year! So you may fancy I can’t talk, but try me again please—for, from what I saw of your knowledge and feelings in those verses in Fraser, there is no one I shall like more to talk to, when I find words again.—Faithfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

5 (p. 263). “[1874–5.]—DEAR ALLINGHAM,—Thanks for your letter and Lake Signatures and for Fraser. But I never write in magazines now.³ I more and more perceive all such work to be wasted. You people who can write should write solemnly and separately what you have to say, and keep it together for your own and whom it may concern in due time.—Ever heartily yours and Mrs. Allingham’s,

J. RUSKIN.”

6 (p. 263). “BRANTWOOD, 7th August 1875.—DEAR ALLINGHAM,—I’ve never thanked you for your kind letter and clear map. Of course I’ll come joyfully when next in London, sending line beforehand.

“Tell me when there’s anything in Fraser that you would like me to see.

“With best compliments to that wonderful wife of yours (she’ll be in September Fors again),⁴—always faithfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

TO AN AMERICAN FRIEND

Harper’s Weekly, February 3, 1900, p. 98 (see Bibliography, above, p. 173), contains a piece of the letter to W. J. Stillman which is printed in Vol. XXXVI. p. 125.

² [“Laurence Bloomfield,” which appeared in Fraser in 1863.]

³ [“Allingham became editor of Fraser’s Magazine in 1874, and asked Ruskin to contribute something.”]

⁴ [The previous reference to Mrs. Allingham’s pictures had been in Academy Notes for 1875: see Vol. XIV. p. 264. The passage referring to her in “September Fors” was ultimately crowded out, but has been added in this edition: see Vol. XXIX. p. 560.

TO THE REV. C. CHAPMAN

The Sunday Magazine, March 1900, contained Reminiscences (see above, p. 175) and the following letters:—

1 (p. 200). “BRANTWOOD, Good Friday, '73.—DEAR MR. CHAPMAN,—I send you the five pounds of which your people are in immediate need, and twenty more for your Easter charities, feeling quite sure that you will know how to use it so as to give the best relief to the most deserving people; and, if you would kindly so arrange it, about the fourth of it, four or five pounds, in little festivities and pleasantries, for those who can enjoy.—Ever most truly yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

2 (p. 201). “BRANTWOOD, February 18, '85.—Here are five pounds with true pleasure. Always ask me when you need.—Ever affectly. yrs.,

“J. RUSKIN.”

3 (p. 201). “Shortest day, '86.—It looks like meaning it—the winter beginning, and I send you a little more, therefore, than usual, for your Christmas charities, with good confidence in your laying it out to the best purpose.—With all good Christmas wishes, aff. yrs.,

J. RUSKIN.”

4 (p. 201). For a child under 7.—“February 3, 1883. As it will be a few days before I can get the arch bricks cut for Willy, which need a good deal of Coward’s best care, I’ve sent him to begin with a box of ‘walling,’ with which I have no doubt he will devise some extremely practical and convenient structures, which may properly be incorporated in the railroad system. I hope you won’t object, however, to his being introduced, by my next box, to the to my mind much preferable monastic system.”

5 (pp. 201–2). “March 7, '83.—There is much more difficulty than I thought in getting any pretty bit of architecture modelled; but I send you for Willy the best that Coward can do till I give him more detailed drawings. He has very ingeniously got the pieces to fit of this, which is a literal copy of an arch at Assisi. You will find the number of the stones on their inner sides next the arch or under the arch according to the enclosed sketch.”

For another letter to the same correspondent, see below, p. 349.

TO A COMPANION OF ST. GEORGE’S GUILD

The Christian World, January 22, 1900, in some reminiscences of Ruskin “by a Lady Disciple,” contained two letters. She had sent him a tithe of her pocket-money for St. George’s Guild, to which he replied:—

(1873.) “I am greatly pleased with your letter, and like the three as well as 3000. .|. The thing that pleases me most in your letter is your saying that I go at my point in a downright way. It is quite true; but most people don’t understand me a bit—and yet I don’t see how one could speak plainer—on the particular point of business. On theology or morality I don’t expect—nor always desire—to be understood, but only to say what is true.”

(No date.) “What do I mean by Christianity? Obeying the words of Christ, as you would obey those of Socrates.

TO A CORRESPONDENT

In the Cambridge Review, May 20, 1909, a reviewer of Vols. XXXVI. and XXXVII. of this edition prints a letter written by Ruskin to himself on the 21st February 1886; it was the third so written—the other two had been unsympathetic:—

“I am entirely grateful for this letter—the first that has ever explained to me the otherwise to me unfathomable mystery of Mill’s influence on really sensible and good people. Please tell me all that you can more about him.”

In a postscript he added:—

“Yes, I admit Mill means to be fair—but is it so rare then that people should—when they’re not Ministers?”

TO F. J. FURNIVALL

A book entitled F.J. Furnivall: a Volume of Personal Record (Oxford University Press, 1911) contains (p. xxiii. of the Memoir by John Munro) the following additional letter. It must have been written at some date between 1856, when Trench became Dean of Westminster, and 1864, when he was appointed Archbishop of Dublin:—

“DENMARK HILL, March 22.—DEAR FURNIVALL,—You could hardly have given me greater pleasure than by asking me for this testimonial; for, as it happens, I am just now profiting not a little by help you gave me long ago; you know how you used to find fault with me for speaking ill of philology, and how you, in alliance with the Dean of Westminster, first showed me the true vital interest of language.¹ While I have not one whit slacked in my old hatred of all science which dwelt or dwells in words instead of things, I have been led by you to investigations of words as interpreters of things, which have been very fruitful to me; and so amusing, that now a word-hunt is to me as exciting as, I suppose, a fox-hunt could be to anybody else. As for grammar—you know it is very satirical of you to ask me for a testimonial—all I can say is, you know much more about it than I do. I heartily wish that you may obtain this office; good examining being no less influential than good teaching, in its outcome.—Believe me, my dear Furnivall, always affectionately yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

TO RICHARD GRAY

For Mr. and Mrs. R. Gray, see Præterita, Vol. XXXV. p. 100. A copy of Turner’s Rivers of France (1837), now in the library of Mr. Henry Yates Thompson, has inserted a letter from Ruskin dated July 10, 1865, which accompanied the gift of the book. The book itself contains some notes by R. In the letter R. says:—

“They are the best engravings ever done from Turner except a few vignettes to Rogers’ Poems. The Rouen² is still mine, and as long as I have eyes or brains will remain so.”

² [No. 56 in the Exhibition of Ruskin’s Turners, XIII. 541. It is now in Mr. Thompson’s collection.]

TO R. B. LITCHFIELD

Richard Buckley Litchfield: a Memoir written for his friends by his Wife. Cambridge: Printed privately at the University Press, 1910.—Mr. Litchfield was one of the founders of the Working Men's College; Mrs. Litchfield was a daughter of Charles Darwin. The volume contains the following letters from Ruskin:—

1 (pp. 66–68). “THUN, August 11 [1859].—MY DEAR LITCHFIELD,—I have just got your kind letter: I had seen the death of Hughes' boy in the Times, and was more grieved about it than I have been about any private matter for a long time. Give him my love when you see him.

“We are just (in three days) going to Interlachen—thence to Vevay. I think it probable that about the 20th–25th you might hear of us at Vevay, but I have formed no plans, for I am travelling with my father and mother, and where they find themselves comfortable I stay, or if I don't at all like the place, go away into the hills near; but I don't know where they will stay at present, for the railroads have changed the nature of all places—the anciently quiet ones are often now the noisiest, and vice versâ. I should like to see you and Lushington—but do not alter any plans in order to find me, for I could not go on travelling with you, as the more pleasant companions are, the more sure they are to take me off my business. I can't talk, and think, and rest at once, and I can't make slaves of you just now, for I am not at any work requiring practical help, but only dreaming out some few things that must be dreamed out, some day or other—rather sadly, for I am as much interested in Italy as most people, and am moreover tormented, which you are not, by having some faith in Louis Napoleon, who I believe has been stopped wholly by the Prussians, the English, and the Pope. Still my faith in him is shaken—and that is one of the additional sorrows. I have moreover been disgusted to such an extent with German high art¹ that it has depressed me in all hopes and plans, and I am good for nothing but to shake hands and hear how you are going on, which I wish you could manage to let me do. I will leave a line for you at any rate at Poste Restante, Vevay, saying whereabouts I am likely to be, and believe me always faithfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.

“I really will send you some travelling letters if I am spared next year—but can't this, being out of heart.”

2 (pp. 45–46). [1860.]—“DEAR LITCHFIELD,—I send you the index at last and the four volumes to compare it by, and very grateful am I to you for allowing me to do so. The index is in its first proof with type errors and everything. Please examine some of the articles, and tell me what you would like to do to it; if possible, I want my schoolgirls, who are marvellously happy about it after working all through Christmas and Easter Holidays at nothing else, to be able to say they ‘did it all,’ so that I don't want articles added, if it will do at all; but you will see that it wants packing, and putting of two or three heads in one: please also to alter any ungraceful or unintelligible expressions, and verify as much as will enable you to trust the rest, if trustworthy.—I shall leave you to see it through press. I hope to see you to-morrow, but there's no need, as I am in town till Tuesday. I've finished my book this morning, but have still heavy press work to do.—Yours most gratefully, J. R.”²

² [The book is the fifth vol. of Modern Painters (issued, June 1860). The original Index to M. P. (superseded in 1888, see Vol. III. p. lx.) was compiled by the girls of Winnington School: see Vol. XXXVI. p. 362.]

With regard to the next two letters, Mrs. Litchfield explains (pp. 153–154, 156) that she and her husband were staying with Mr. and Mrs. Darwin at the Waterhead Hotel, Coniston. “One day we rowed across the lake to see Mr. Ruskin and set off back again at the beginning of a thunderstorm. This grieved his courteous nature and he wrote the following letters, and sent me, as a sort of peace offering, a minute, exquisitely finished painting of one barb of a peacock’s feather magnified. Ruskin was charming in his intercourse with my father, at first calling him ‘Sir Charles,’ and showing a delicate courtesy and respect.”

3 (p. 154). “BRANTWOOD [August 1879].—DEAR LITCHFIELD,—I am very anxious to be assured that neither Mrs. Litchfield nor you have suffered from the exposure to storm—which would not have been, in old times, when I knew the clouds; but now everything is changed—Alpine snow and moorland rain—and the vacillations of the reckless and useless clouds are not to be foreseen hour by hour, whatever they may be in the great currents. At this moment the wind on the lake is south, and in the middle clouds north-east.

“Please thank Mr. Darwin for his kind note and say I’m very glad he does not like the Titian.—Always affectionately yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

4 (pp. 155–156). “BRANTWOOD [August 1879].—DEAR LITCHFIELD,—It has indeed been a great pleasure to me to be brought into some nearer and kinder relations with Mr. Darwin; but you must not think I did not before recognize in him all that you speak of so affectionately. There is no word in any of my books of disrespect towards him, though I profoundly regret that the very simplicity and humility of his character prevents his separating what of accurately observed truth he has taught us from the wild and impious foolishness of the popular views of our day.

“I have just received a photograph¹ which may perhaps interest him; the globe in true perspective, placed in the position analysed by perspective law in the fourth number of Fésolle—the substitution of this perspective and true projection for the distortions of vulgar map-making is one of the points in the system of drawing arranged for Oxford to which I look for most useful results. I have sent two numbers of Fésolle with it; the second, containing another study of peacock’s feathers from the bronze armoury of the back,² and some talk about feathers generally, will show at least how much sympathy I have with Mr. Darwin in work of this kind. Please thank Mrs. Litchfield for her kind little note, and believe me always, affectionately yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

TO H. S. MARKS

(Supplementary to XXXVII. 681.) A series of thirty-eight Autograph Letters from Ruskin to H. S. Marks was No. 1062 in a Catalogue (No. 255) issued by Maggs Brothers in 1910 (previously, less fully described, No. 38 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, July 22, 1909). The series, together with the Blue Crane, mentioned in XXXVII. p. 232 and n., was priced at £68. Extracts from some of the letters were given; the following are scraps not previously printed:—

Dec. 31, ’77. “.|.|. I’ve just been framing the black crane with the red eyes, with Turner and Bewick.”

Dec. 27, ’78. “.|.|. Edith is greatly delighted at the R.A. But I only care about you being—what you were and will be—a good painter.”

Ap. 23, ’84. “I’ve been buying Japanese Books of Birds myself, but only to study their way of extracting the ugliness of things with vicious veracity, and the way they gloat over black, as if it was blue and gold.”

TO WILLIAM MORRIS

The Life of William Morris, by J. W. Mackail, contains (vol. ii. p. 201) an extract from a letter to Morris (Dec. 3, 1878), in which Ruskin, after thanking him for being the only person who went "straight to the accurate point of the craftsman's question," added:—

"How much good might be done by the establishment of an exhibition anywhere, in which the Right doing, instead of the Clever doing, of all that men know how to do, should be the test of acceptance!"

A suggestion, says Mr. Mackail, which was carried out ten years afterwards by the Arts and Crafts Society.

TO SAMUEL PROUT

A Life of Prout, now forthcoming (1911), contains the following additional letters:—

1. "Dec. 7, 1843.—MY DEAR SIR,—You know if you write such kind letters, you must be prepared for the sufferance of formidable lengths of reply, and if it fatigues you to read them you must be prepared also to throw them into the fire, otherwise I shall not indulge myself in the privilege of addressing you; but your kind interest and gentle expression of regret with respect to the work of my Oxford friend¹ have so much touched him that he begs me, so far as may be in my power, to justify him to you. He is very inconsiderate in what he writes, but I don't think it is from want of feeling—it appears to me to be rather from having too much—and from having been put in a rage by people's admiring the old masters who actually do not see the very qualities which constitute their excellence; while their habit of looking at them exclusively prevents them from forming any idea of that of others. My friend has been much cramped in his work by the fear of injuring living painters. I know that the really sore point with him is not that Claude should be put above Turner, but that Stanfield and Creswick should. But deliberately to sit down in order to prove the superiority of a man who has made his 100,000, over those who are struggling up the hill, however much he might wish to do so, would have been, I think, an ungenerous step. Had Turner been poor and despised, I feel sure that my friend would have left the old masters alone, whatever he may think of them, and endeavoured only to show Turner's superiority to living men. But he feared to do injury in many quarters where much misery or happiness might depend on the sale of a picture, and even under this feeling his book would have had a very different tone from that which it has, had it not been for interference on the part of his friends, who feared the result of attacks on living men. Had it not been for them, I am pretty sure that Martin, Maclise, and Lee would have been the victims; and that faults, instead of beauties, would have been pointed out in Stanfield and Harding.

"Not that you are to suppose for a moment that my friend has said what he does not think. He does think Turner as superior to the old masters as he has said, but he certainly would not have said this so boldly, until he had gained more experience, or perhaps until he was generally acknowledged to be a first-rate judge of the old masters themselves. But no other way was open to him; and he preferred plunging into the fore front of the battle at once, to the safer line of argument which might have done heavy injury to industrious, earnest, and deserving men. But even with this feeling, the book would, I am nearly certain, have been very different from what it is, but for the persuasion of friends in whose judgment he trusted, and who, indeed, cut out of the MS. many passages condemnatory of modern masters, and so destroyed, much against his will, the balance of the book.

“You ought to consider further, what most of the critics of the work seem altogether to have overlooked, that it is only the beginning of a treatise, that the author hints that he has respect for the feeling of the old masters, but has strictly confined himself in the present volume, to matters of fact. Not one question of art, properly so called, of beauty, composition, meaning, expression, selection, is touched on in the whole volume. How can you possibly tell what the Author may think, or say, of Claude when he comes to these questions? Does his language respecting Giotto, Perugino, or Raffaele, look like that of a man who has no perception of Ideal qualities?

“If, however, you refer not to the matter, but the style of the work, I will not justify it, nor, I think, would the author.¹ It was the hurried writing of a man in a rage, and a man who considered himself addressing rather the newspaper critics than the high judges. The book is not intended for the reading of Mr. Rogers or Edwin Landseer; they know what Turner is. It was written for the class of people who admire Maclise; for the paid novices of the Times and of Blackwood, not for you, or for any like you. That it was ill-judged to let it be so, cannot be disputed, but alas, the utter ignorance of the critics of the day is something which is at once so dangerous and so despicable, that it puts my friend in a double rage, first with the creatures who mislead the public, and secondly with himself, for doing them the honour of to let them annoy him. And finally, I know the book to have been written fast; my friend desired to be employed in other matters, and the work swelled to double its size even as it passed to the printer. Many mistakes exist in it, much looseness and petulance of style, but I think that when the following parts appear, its real drift will be better seen, and that possibly hereafter, the Author will correct, soften and amalgamate all. Yet he was surprised at hearing that any part of it had hurt you. Had the word been disgusted, he would not have been surprised, but are you so fond of the old masters as to be seriously hurt by attacks upon them? I know, by the way, and this I say not because I think that your quiet and finely-toned mind could have been wounded by anything of what he said of yourself, but because it may perhaps give you some pleasure to know the simple fact, that the author does regret that he has not said more in praise of your works, and that, after going the round of Nash, Roberts, and many other architectural painters, he has come to the conclusion that there is more genuineness, more pure and impressive truth in your finest works, than in any of them, perhaps than in all of them. I know he does not like your brown works, nor the red little bits that appear sometimes in the water-colour rooms, but your grey and cool works he says are the finest things, the most characteristic and impressive existing.

“Now, my dear Sir, let me beg you never to think of writing to me as a matter of obligation. If you ever let fall one single word of apology for not having written before, or not having written at more length, or not having done anything else, I won't answer the letter, and so shall take care that the apology shall not be on your side. If you ever find time, when perfectly comfortable and having nothing else to do, to tell me how you are, or to let me know some of your feelings or opinions on matters of art disputed by my friend, or if you ever want anything done in town that I can do, then I need scarcely say how delighted I shall be to hear from you, or to be of the slightest service to you, down to choosing a cheese or blowing up Windsor and Newton; but if ever I find you writing when you are wearied, hurried, or when in any way you had rather not—I won't write again; so if you find me too tiresome, you know what to do. By the by, on these conditions, i.e. when you are at tolerable leisure, I should be very glad to hear something of the family of the late Bishop of Chichester. I knew them at Oxford, when Miss Shuttleworth used to be to me, as I believe to everybody else, what Dickens calls 'an addition to that small family, the seven Wonders of the World.' I hope she is well, and drawing, and not working much at anything else, or she will do herself harm. She has too much mind to be allowed to use it. I wish it had been left her under guard of trustees, not to be come into till she was of age.—Ever, my dear Sir, believe me, most sincerely and respectfully yours,

J. RUSKIN."

2. "Feb. 9, 1844.—MY DEAR SIR,—A thousand thanks for your kind letter. I have written instantly to Mrs. Shuttleworth, and shall begin my search this afternoon. I have but just time to tell you that I am quite shocked at an omission in my last letter to you, in not telling you that a copy of the Graduate should have been forwarded to you instantly, but a new edition is coming out, with important additional matter, and several gross and fatal errors corrected. This I hope will be better worth a place in your library, and I should wish no one who has not yet read the first edition to do so, as the new introductory chapter will set the whole book in a clearer light. I am tired of keeping up forms with you, in fact there are many who must know me and my doings with whom I do so long as it is possible, in order that they may be able to deny knowledge of the matter when questioned, and it is very important that the book should not be generally known to be written by a young man. I must intreat the favour of your keeping the secret. You may perhaps imagine it is pretty generally known—not so. You see the Athenæum regrets that my age is not as green as my judgment.¹ I know its editor, and several others are quite on a wrong scent; so pray be cautious. Don't tell even best friends. I wouldn't you if I could help it, but I cannot receive your advice and ask for it comfortably in a third name. Every new clue given must take away from my power of doing good. And now I may tell you that I am not resting on my oars, but working noon and night; the only difference in plan being that the book will come out in one volume, I hope in the spring of 45, instead of in 12 detached numbers.² I shall be able to digest it better, and I think, so reserved, the broadside will be felt.

"I must answer the other parts of your letter more at leisure.³ Many mistakes I made in speaking of our artists generally. The fact was, I had for a year or two before writing the book been looking chiefly at M. Angelo and Turner, and had quite lost sight of Messrs. Stanfield, etc., so that I wrote the opinions of past time, and was horror-struck in the Academy and the Water-colour, by the deeds of some whom I had praised. My neglect of your works was owing to the same cause. You may depend upon it I will make amends for it, as far as is in my power.—Ever most gratefully and respectfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.

"On reading over this I feel thoroughly ashamed of its appearance of carelessness and disrespect. I have not time to rewrite, or I would, but

³ [See the letter of Feb. 21, 1844, Vol. III. pp. 662–664.]

I believe it is very wrong not to have time for everything. I have not half thanked you for your letter, and I had nearly made another omission of a principal matter. Would you favour me so far as, at your perfect leisure, to let me know the passages in the present volume which hurt your feelings, and how they do so, in order that I may avoid things of the same kind in future. I cannot retract or alter in the new edition, for that would look as though I had been frightened, or had altered my opinions, but I can avoid such passages in the next book, which will be, in fact, the book, for the present is only an introduction to it. Forgive me for venturing to ask you to give yourself this trouble, but I know no person whose feelings I should so much wish to be my guide."

3. "DENMARK HILL, March 20, 1844.—MY DEAR SIR,—I was much grieved by the contents of your last kind letter, especially that you had thought it necessary to make the exertion of writing under such circumstances. Your letter found me correcting sheets for the 'second edition,' or it should have been answered at once; but I have been plagued by printers, and laid up, or nearly so, by a violent cold, which at this moment almost prevents me from seeing what I write. I am sure there is something peculiar in the season which you may charge with your illness, for all whom I meet are suffering in one way or another. I have received two very kind letters from Mrs. Shuttleworth, but, hitherto, I am sorry to say I have not been able to forward her views in any way. I am glad she is going to leave St. Leonards. I never saw a place I thought so in every way unfit for human domicile, a whitewashed brickfield, a symmetrical desolation, a Babylonish abortion of rectilinear solitude, the melancholy of the wilderness without its liberty. I have lived in many horrible places, in Leamington, Bath and Cheltenham, not to speak of sundry weeks of headache and gaslight in London. But I think I could not live in St. Leonards. I had rather get into a tarred section of a herring-boat on your Hastings beach, and pay a heavy ground rent on shingles.

"I have no doubt when the weather betters, you will recover your strength,—perhaps meet me at Milan. I would carry you so carefully up among the marble frostwork;—would not you like to be there again?—Ever, my dear Sir, believe me, gratefully and respectfully yours,

"J. RUSKIN."

4. "April 29, 1844.—MY DEAR SIR,—I received your most kind letter the day before yesterday, on my return from Liverpool, where I had been learning navigation—(by way of variety)—and it relieved me from some anxiety which I had begun to feel respecting your health; relieved me partially at least, though I was grieved at the desponding tone in which you speak of the places you best love. Why should this be? If travelling is not now consistent with your comfort or health, why not establish yourself within the shadow of some glorious old grey spire, or in the reflected light of some façade of marble, with all around you which is to you, and must be to all men of feeling and intellect like yours, more than life. If indeed your health allowed of your residing in London, I could understand the ties upon you of society and art, but among the sand-hills of Hastings you surely are as far removed, or nearly so, from such influence, as you would be by the shore of Como or Maggiore; incomparably more so than you would be at Venice or Florence. I get in a rage when I hear of people such as the English who commonly haunt these lovely places—ruined spend-thrifts, detected swindlers, abandoned roués,—while men like you, for whom God made these glories, are vegetating like sand grass on an English beach. I don't understand it. I can't conceive how it should be possible; as far as regards income, surely there is as much difference between the expense of Italy and of England as between the width of a gondola and the tunbellied capacity of a Hastings herring-boat, and if something were sacrificed in being out of hearing of one's native language, which all men must feel after a time, there is a language of Nature of which you are out of hearing here, which is the greater loss of the two. It is all very well for farmers and landholders and merchants to be patriotic, but an artist ought to be a citizen of the world. What would have become of Poussin, had he lived in Paris instead of on the Trinità dei Monti; or of Claude, if he had staid where he was born, and grown Champagne (I wish he had—by the by). Not that I don't know what a home feeling is. I have feelings connected with the Cumberland hills, among which I was born again, at three years old, which no Alpine torrent nor Lombard sky can excite for a moment; but they are peppering Cumberland out of an architectural castor with white boxes, and this will soon make an end of all old associations, so that if ever I have to choose a house for myself, I shall infallibly and beyond all doubt or alteration of purpose—God willing—get me one somewhere near Mont Blanc, and live in the winter at Milan or Verona, and yet love England and the English as my own land and people still; but I am not going to leave the love of God's works, which He has given me, unfed, because I happened to be born in a flat.

"I was at the private view of the Water-colour yesterday, and was much disappointed at seeing so little there from your hand,—nor was there anything else to console me, except some grand rock bits from Cox, which did my heart good, but the exhibition is full of artificialnesses and crudities from mindless draughtsmen,—T.M. Richardson, Callow, Bentley, etc.—people who are made up of nothing but fingers' ends—and those blunt. Cattermole has made a splash, and gone over head and ears,—a vast piece of paper covered with clever drawing, but I don't know where to look in it,—some people are fighting for a bridge, and two trunks of trees are fighting for your attention.¹ There is no art in it, but there is a nice feeling for costume, and good bending of legs and bodies and whiskers, and it forms a feature in the room. F. Tayler has some fine things,—some cabbages, and a homeless wanderer, in particular.² Copley Fielding as good as usual, better than last year. Harding only two little bits; if that man had but a soul, he would make a noble painter. Hunt ineffective except in fruit, and a bird's nest, and a very original portrait of an expressive piece of—firewood—King Log.³ The less we say about the rest, the better. The only two men from whom I now receive pleasure in that room are yourself and David Cox, and the latter has this year excelled himself.⁴ I like everything of yours that I saw, especially for their fine grey qualities, only it struck me that they were a little thinner than usual, but I must go and look again. My favourite little bit is the 'À la Barbe Blanc, Tours.' I like the subject so much, it is so full of continental character, but there are none that I liked so well as the little Martigny bit I was fortunate enough to secure last year, and which I enjoy—more than I can tell you. But, considering your recent illness, and the little time you have had, I only wonder at the beautiful composition of the pieces you have produced. Shall I have—or may I hope to have—the pleasure of seeing you in London before I leave for the Alps, which we hope to do on the 14th of May. My address for the week previous will be—(from 10 to 4) the bench before some one of the Turners in the Royal Academy,—so you know where to find me. Turner tells me he has been fagging very hard, but will not tell me on what.¹ Roberts says there is a Stanfield by far the finest thing—not only of his—but of its kind—yet seen,² and that the exhibition is very strong.

“I hope to run south, by your favourite Cathedral—Chartres. I have been there twice, but never can see enough of it; and I want to get a sketch of an old house I fished out in an alley where the horses were put to—this sort of thing [a drawing here]; did you ever come across it?—a wooden spiral staircase, with plaster between—black beams and bricks and all that’s nice—carved like the cathedral screen—delicate as cobwebs. Then I hope to get on to Orleans, and up the Loire, and across to Dijon. I wouldn’t tell you all this, if it weren’t that I want to draw you over the water and make you happy again. I shall write again, if I do not see you, before I go.—Believe me ever, my dear Sir, most sincerely and respectfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

5. “BEAUVAIS, 1st October, 1846.—MY DEAR SIR,—I cannot look you in the face without having acknowledged your kind letter—which I should have done before, but that I heard from Edmund Oldfield, about a month or six weeks ago, that you were about to start on a tour in Brittany, so that I thought it useless to write until there was some chance of your being returned, which however, I hope, you have not yet, but that you may be still enjoying yourself among the green stone carvings, and preparing enjoyment for everybody in general and me in particular. I am especially glad to hear of your being in Brittany, which I doubt not is the most interesting province of France, and no one has been there of any feeling. Stanfield did nothing better there than in other places, and of the architecture we—at least I—have not the slightest notion. I read descriptions of it which make my mouth water—no—not my mouth—but eyes—with vexation that I can’t see everything. But architecture cannot be described, and I look with vaguely vivid expectations to your sketch-book—or note-book—or hand-book (I don’t like any of those names for a book that is in the hands of a good artist—they are not dignified enough—but ‘portfolio’ is worse than all—que faire?)—and I shall hope to be indulged with many looks at those filled last year at Brussels, which I only got a glance at, they will comfort me a little for the losses I sustain daily in realities. They are repairing, that is to say, knocking down carved stones and putting up plain ones, here and at Paris (Notre Dame and Sainte Chapelle, the latter however, in fairness, I must say, very well, keeping close to the original and sparing no expense), and at Sens, and at Troyes, and at Dijon, and everywhere in fact. What vexes me is that they put a handful of workmen all over the cathedrals, working in twenty places at once, and spoiling everything for ten years together, instead of doing it quickly a little bit at a time; I do not recollect any drawings of yours at Troyes, where indeed the cathedral is not good for much, but there are some wonderfully quaint bits about the minor churches. I could draw nothing myself, and was obliged to abandon my bit at Dijon, having severely hurt my eyes this summer with work in Italy and Switzerland.

“I am a little disappointed in revisiting the real Gothic cathedrals here after drawing architecture in Italy. The mouldings and details are all so much less skilful, finished, and mental, and the want of colour so remarkable after the variegated marbles and glittering mosaics of the south that I feel at first a little blank, and I rather think, as I know more of architecture, I shall feel more and more respectful towards the grand Romanesque and Lombard churches of Italy, and less and less so towards the northern flamboyant Gothic—always excepting Rouen cathedral, outside, which I mean to championize as long as any of it is left. Half is gone already and white plain stones put up instead. But after the noble mouldings of Venice, I find these look frittered, and this sort of thing [a drawing here] does not do after that [another drawing]. What glorious lines of cusp there are among the windows and tombs of Verona—at Padua and Vicenza too there are some superb varieties—and yet all so like as to be a perfect national manner. Some of the balcony foliage at Vicenza especially are altogether inimitable in their adaptations to sunlight, their salient parts so wisely distributed. For tabernacle work, certainly, we must come here, the Italians don't understand it, but their mouldings and capitals are divine. I have got some Daguerreotypes which I think will interest you, and expect some more. I am quite insatiable in that way, for they are of course more valuable than any sketch can be in the way of information, and on this journey I have considered all my sketches merely as memorandums.

“I fear I shall not have time to finish my letter—at least if it is to reach Denmark Hill before myself—for we trust to get home on Tuesday and to find you all well. My Father and Mother desire their sincerest regards to yourself and Miss Prout, to whom pray remember me most kindly, and believe me, my dear Sir, ever most respectfully yours,

“J. RUSKIN.

“I have not thanked you for your kind mention of what Eastlake said of my book, for which I was indeed very grateful, but not more so than for your own encouraging opinion.”

7. “Tuesday, 6th Jan.—MY DEAR SIR,—I am desperately ashamed of not having returned you the enclosed before, but I wanted to look at some other points in it which seemed interesting beside the uninterpreted hieroglyphics—and then I am ashamed to say I forgot it until to-day's rummage of my bookcase revealed it to my aching eyes. Your Spanish book I shall not forget, but I want to keep it yet a day or two; it is very interesting and wonderful. Remember me kindly to my fair antagonist. Ask her if she doesn't believe the 65th Psalm, as she doesn't Mr. Wordsworth nor me.—Ever, my dear Sir, faithfully and respectfully yours,

“J. RUSKIN.”

8. “MY DEAR SIR,—I was truly grieved to hear on calling just now that you were suffering from your trying complaint. I sincerely trust the attack will be a slight one.

“I came to ask if Miss Prout would not mind passing a dull evening with my Mother. I believe we shall have few parties now to ask her to, and if she would come up to-night and bring her work with her and take tea at six o'clock, we should be very grateful,—but you know we are quite alone, my Father being on his journey. Miss Anderson will be with us, I believe, only. I shall hope to see you soon in a state of convalescence.—Believe me ever, my dear Sir, faithfully and respectfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.

“Mind you don't write, nor let Miss Prout say anything but Yes to the bearer.”

9. “MY DEAR SIR,—Your kind loan would have been returned earlier this morning, but that lying wickedly in bed till after breakfast I could not avail myself till now of daylight to examine it properly. I am more and more amazed at the elaboration and refinement of these works—so is my father—especially keeping in mind what you told us of the circumstances under which most of the sketches—drawings—I should say—were made. For patience and quietness of realisation I have never seen them*~mjcont equalled. I think my favourite—of the many I delight in—yet remains the old Croix de Pierre, but, my dear Sir, was the book in the right hand one of the three big arches—there in reality? I trust I shall have a good report by the bearer of your toothache.—Ever, my dear Sir, most faithfully and gratefully yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

10. “PARK STREET, December 9, 1848.—DEAR MR. PROUT,—It will indeed give me the greatest possible pleasure to take advantage of the opportunity afforded me in the Art Journal,¹ and to say all that I feel, if indeed I can express it, of your works and the effect they have had on recent Art; and it adds to the pleasure I should have had in doing so at any rate, that you yourself have so kindly and frankly expressed your confidence in my power of appreciating them. You will, I know, acquit me of vanity when I say that the much happiness which your works have given me, and the constant study that I have given to them, render me I believe better able than most men to speak as I ought respecting them. I need not tell you that I would not have undertaken the office, unless I had felt that I could speak with perfect freedom, and with unchecked candour; and that in doing so, I should at once deserve the thanks of those for whom I wrote, and give pleasure to the much honoured and loved friend of whom I wrote. I do not know anything that has made me so happy for a long time, as getting your letter this morning; the trust in me which it expressed and proved; and the consciousness that I had it in my power to give you pleasure, and to do others good, at once, made me clap my hands again. Curiously enough, I bought, only the day before yesterday, a series of views on the Rhine by P. which gave me exceeding pleasure, and at which I was looking with much care and wonder at the peculiar and solemn feeling of light, and of sky form, which I had not before seen in your works; and I was saying to Effie that evening: ‘I cannot regret that Mr. Prout has done what he has—it being so good of its kind; but there is evidence here of powers which he has never developed, and which the public have not recognized.’

“Now, I shall have to trespass upon you, my dear Sir, so far as to ask you to let me see, some day soon, when I will come out to you on purpose, such of your earlier works, more especially of this date, as you happen to have by you; and I should like also, if I may be permitted, to be acquainted with the principal circumstances of the autobiography which you will send to the Art Journal, as I shall thus understand, and be able to explain, much in your modes of treatment of which at present I cannot speak with certainty. Where any expression of that ‘idolatry,’ or love of peculiar subject, occurs in your own writing, I should like to see it, as it would enable me to refer to it instead of merely supposing, or having to prove it from your works. However, I hope to call upon you to-morrow, after Church, and to arrange a day for talking the thing over. One point, however, I may mention at present. Mr. S. C. Hall wrote to me two very urgent letters begging me to write in the Art Journal for next year. I declined positively: being at present otherwise engaged. Now although the pleasure I have in my subject causes me to alter my intention, I see no reason for my putting the matter on other terms with Mr. Hall than it would have been if I had consented at that time. It would be well therefore if you would kindly write to him, and tell him, if he wishes me to do this article, to send me word first what space he wants filled; secondly, what space he can spare me, if I choose to write more; thirdly, what are his terms. I do not know if he expects his contributors to name their price or not. I am perfectly willing after the article is written to name mine; but after naming it, I would not alter it, and in case of this occasioning any demur or difficulty, it would perhaps be better that Mr. Hall should name his, for my acceptance or not, either in this case, or in any other in which it might be convenient for me to write in his journal. I have quite leisure enough to admit of my writing comfortably. I hope the second Dieppe is getting on nicely. Sincere regards to Miss Isabella from Effie and me.—Ever, dear Mr. Prout, believe me faithfully and respectfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

11. “PARK ST., Thursday.—DEAR MR. PROUT,—It is just past time and I have not time to look over the drawings before I write to thank you, and I have so many notes to answer that I can only assure you how grateful I am for the permission thus to become acquainted with the circumstances of your early life, and the works of your early enthusiasm, and how happy I shall be if I can any way prevent your feeling pain or discomfort from the manner in which your kindness may permit them to be made public.—Ever affectionately yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

12. “PARK ST., Thursday evening, Jan. 19, 1849.—DEAR MR. PROUT,—I cannot tell you how thankful I am for all your kind expressions, and how thankful that I have been able to give you some pleasure in what is thus far written. I hope you will not like the rest worse. But—poor Isabella! I am so sorry for her, after her illness too; she will never bear the sight of me again. It is so good and like you interceding for Haydon. Shall we cut out the ‘haughty’ and say instead of the last clause, ‘betrayed him into the extravagances and deserted him in the sufferings with which his name must remain sadly, but not unjustly, associated’?¹—Ever, dear Mr. Prout, most respectfully and affectionately yours,

J. RUSKIN.

“Our kindest regards to Miss Isabella, who I hope, but cannot trust, after what she has gone through, is better.

“I write in haste. I have not said the thousandth part of my thanks for your letter.

“I had nearly forgot. I think what credit is to be had out of the MS. is properly yours, as having entirely dictated its spirit, and furnished its materials—anything more, Mr. Hall must have, or his paper, for if I gave my name I should insist upon saying much more about you than perhaps under the circumstances would be desirable—I mean of my delight in your works.”

13. “D. HILL, 8th May.—DEAR MR. PROUT,—I cannot at all express my thanks, or my delight. I had not the least idea of the beauty and accuracy of those sketches of Venice,—so touchingly accurate are they, that my wife, who looks back to Venice with deep regret, actually and fairly burst into tears over them, and I was obliged to take them away from her. I, who in many cases like the sketches better than the places, pursued my walk through Venice with intense pleasure: especially because you have been so scrupulously and fondly faithful: and so often rendered the character of peculiar features, of which I believe few persons except myself could understand the precision. Indeed I think you hardly do yourself justice, with such subjects in your sketch-book, in sending to the exhibition such a ‘Composition from materials in Venice,’ as you are pleased to entitle ‘The Rialto.’

“However, your pre-eminent distinction from all other artists is that you do not compose on the spot, whatever you do at home. I shall take your most kind permission to keep these books some days, and Effie thanks you for them—through her tears. With kindest regards from us both to yourself and Miss Isabella, ever, my dear Mr. Prout, most faithfully yours,

“J. RUSKIN.”

¹ [For the form ultimately given to the passage about Haydon, see Vol. XII. p. 307.]

14. (To Miss ISABELLA PROUT.) “Jan. 23, 1869.—MY DEAR MISS PROUT,—I was sincerely glad to hear from you, not that I need to be put in mind either of you or your Father, for I often think of both, nor can I ever cease to take extreme pleasure in all that I can see of your Father’s work. As to the immediate object of your letter,—my presentation to Christ’s Hospital has unhappily long been promised. I have been slightly unwell for some time, and unable to answer letters after my day’s work is done, unless thus by another hand, but I cannot longer delay the expression of my Mother’s pleasure and mine in hearing from you, nor the assurance that I am always faithfully yours,
J. RUSKIN.”

TO THE REV. H. D. RAWNSLEY

The Atlantic Monthly, April 1900, contained an account of some letters to Mr. Rawnsley: see the Bibliography, above, p. 176.

TO D. G. ROSSETTI

Anderton’s Sale Catalogue, New York, March 16, 1909, No. 494. A copy of D. G. Rossetti’s Dante and his Circle, presented by him to Alice Wilding, 1875, with an (undated) letter from Ruskin inserted. Of this the following passages are printed:—

“DEAR ROSSETTI,—What is the exact meaning of ‘di mano in mano’ in Leonardo’s first chapter?¹ I’ve always read Italian carelessly merely to get at the main import, and now I am constantly stumbling on phrases I am not sure of. . . . William has been sending me some nice books lately. I hope to see you both when I’ve done that Oxford work. . . . Ever yours affecty.,
J. RUSKIN.”

TO JOSEPH AND ARNOLD TOYNBEE

In Reminiscences and Letters of Joseph and Arnold Toynbee, by Gertrude Toynbee (1910), there are three letters; two to Joseph Toynbee, F.R.S., the other to his son Arnold (for whom, see Vol. XX. p. xlv.):—

1 (p. 82). To JOSEPH TOYNBEE. “DENMARK HILL, Jan. 8, 1866.—MY DEAR SIR,—I am sincerely obliged to you for your letter; the book² is partly experimental; not what I would like to say, but all that it seems to me I may venture, in the present state of public prejudice, to say with any hope of being heard—or of being useful after obtaining such audience. It is a great pleasure to me that any father of a family should consider the book serviceable and find his children pleased with it; and the pamphlets you have done me the favour to send show me that yours is no thoughtless approval. I like the one on disease exceedingly, and that on museums seems highly sensible and practical.³—Believe me, sincerely yours,

“J. RUSKIN.”

2 (pp. 82–83). To JOSEPH TOYNBEE. “DENMARK HILL, Feb. 8, 1866.—MY DEAR SIR,—I am heartily obliged by your letter, and particularly glad that you like that piece about human nature.¹ I shall speak more and more strongly as I can get a hearing—every word of truth spoken to the English public at present is answered by a stone flung at you—and I can’t take a cartload all at once. So Mrs. Penny² is a friend of yours. She is a fine creature; but when women reach a certain age, their heads get as cocoanuts; and it’s lucky if the milk isn’t sour, which is not yet with her. Where did you find that saying of the lawyers about honesty? It would be useful to me.—Truly yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

“It is curious your speaking of The Happy Warrior; I had always read it just as you do, as a type of what all men may become. Sir Herbert Edwardes read it to me, showing that it is quite specially written for soldiers, and literal in every expression.³ I am going to use part of it in a lecture to the cadets at Woolwich on the 16th;⁴ it is entirely glorious. Is your little tradesman at Bethnal Green still living?”

3 (pp. 174–175). “NAPLES, May 2, 1874.—DEAR MR. TOYNBEE,—I have kept your kind note by me, desiring to thank you for it very seriously; and not having been able, in a hurried run to Sicily (and the work it required to make it useful), to answer any letters of importance lately. I much blame myself for not having endeavoured to reach the men who, I might have known, were, in probably the ratio of their true sympathy with me and need of mine, unlikely to ask for it themselves. But my error was partly the result of my desire to keep as far as possible for some time to the work which I was appointed to do. It was not my duty to act in any other direction for some time at least. But I am certain that it is now my duty: and a much more serious one than any that are directly official. I hope, when I return to Oxford, that we may have little councils of friends both old and young in my rooms at Corpus, which will be pleasanter for us than formal lectures, and will reach many other, or rather pause at many nearer, needs of thought than any connected with the arts. Please write me a line to the Hôtel de Russie, Rome, to say if you get this tardy answer safe; and with renewed thanks for your note, believe me, ever faithfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

TO BRYCE WRIGHT

In Chats in the Book-room, by Horace N. Pym, privately printed, 1896, five letters to Mr. Bryce Wright, a dealer in minerals, are printed. For another letter to the same correspondent, see Vol. XXXVII. p. 358.

1 (pp. 137–138). “BRANTWOOD, 22nd May ‘81.—MY DEAR WRIGHT,—I am very greatly obliged to you for letting me see these opals, quite

² [Sister of Ruskin’s tutor, the Rev. W. L. Brown; she married Mr. Penny in 1865, and died in 1893. She was the author of The Romance of a Dull Life (see below, p. 383), some other novels, and various essays, etc.]

³ [Ruskin refers to this incident in connexion with Wordsworth’s poem both in the Appendix to Crown of Wild Olive, Vol. XVIII. p. 516, and in A Knight’s Faith, Vol. XXXI. p. 506.]

unexampled, as you rightly say, from that locality—but from that locality I never buy. My kind is the opal formed in pores and cavities, throughout the mass of that compact brown jasper; this, which is merely a superficial crust of jelly on the surface of a nasty brown sandstone, I do not myself value in the least. I wish you could get at some of the geology of the two sorts, but I suppose everything is kept close by the diggers and the Jews at present.

“As for the cameos, the best of the two, ‘supposed’ (by whom?) to represent Isis, represents neither Egyptian nor Oxonian Isis, but only an ill-made French woman of the town bathing at Boulogne, and the other is only a ‘Minerve’ of the Halles, a petroleuse in a mob-cap, sulphur-fire colour. I don’t depreciate what I want to buy, as you know well, but it is not safe to send me things in the set way ‘supposed’ to be this or that! If ever you get any more nice little cranes,¹ or cockatoos, looking like what they’re supposed to be meant for, they shall at least be returned with compliments. I send back the box by to-day’s rail; put down all the expenses to my account, as I am always amused and interested by a parcel from you.

“You needn’t print this letter as an advertisement, unless you like!—Ever faithfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

2 (p. 139). “BRANTWOOD, 23rd May.—MY DEAR WRIGHT,—The silver’s safe here, and I want to buy it for Sheffield, but the price seems to me awful.² It must always be attached to it at the Museum, and I fear great displeasure from the public for giving such a price. What is there in the specimen to make it so valuable? I have not anything like it, nor do I recollect its like (or I shouldn’t want it), but if so rare, why does not the British Museum take it?—Ever truly yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

3 (pp. 139–140). “BRANTWOOD, Wednesday.—MY DEAR WRIGHT,—I am very glad of your long and interesting letter, and can perfectly understand all your difficulties, and have always observed your activity and attention to your business with much sympathy, but of late certainly I have been frightened at your prices, and, before I saw the golds, was rather uneasy at having so soon to pay for them. But you are quite right in your estimate of the interest and value of the collection, and I hope to be able to be of considerable service to you yet, though I fear it cannot be in buying specimens at seventy guineas, unless there is something to be shown for the money, like that great native silver!

“I have really not been able to examine the red ones yet—the golds alone were more than I could judge of till I got a quiet hour this morning. I might possibly offer to change some of the locally interesting ones for a proustite, but I can’t afford any more cash just now.—Ever very heartily yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

4 (pp. 140–141). “BRANTWOOD, 3rd Nov. or 4th (?), Friday.—DEAR WRIGHT,—My telegram will, I hope, enable you to act with promptness about the golds, which will be of extreme value to me; and its short saying about the proustites will, I hope, not be construed by you as meaning that I will buy them also!

“You don’t really suppose that you are to be paid interest of money on minerals, merely because they have lain long in your hands. If I sold my old arm-chair, which has got the rickets, would you expect the purchaser to pay me forty years’ interest on the original price? Your proustite may perhaps be as good as ever it was, but it is not worth more to me or to Sheffield because you have had either the enjoyment or the care of it longer than you expected.

“But I am really very seriously obliged by the sight of it, with the others, and perhaps may make an effort to lump some of the new ones with the gold in an estimate of large purchase. I think the gold, by your description, must be a great credit to Sheffield and to me; perhaps I mayn’t be able to part with it!—Ever faithfully yours,

J. RUSKIN.”

5 (p. 142). “HERNE HILL, S.E., 6 May ‘84.—MY DEAR BRYCE,—I can’t resist this tourmaline, and have carried it off with me. For you and Regent Street it’s not monstrous in price neither; but I must send you back your (pink!) apatite. I wish I’d come to see you, but have been laid up all the time I’ve been here—just got to the pictures, and that’s all.—Yours always (much to my damage!), J.

LETTERS OR EXTRACTS PRINTED IN SALE CATALOGUES OF AUTOGRAPHS

(Supplementary to XXXVII. 730–739)

1845. Nov. 21 (DENMARK HILL). To Rev. EDWARD COLERIDGE.—“As for the drawing—whatever I can do shall be at your service—but I have nothing by me at present, for I never make a drawing. I only work in bits and scraps from the real thing—fragments that are useful to me, and absurd to other people. And, moreover, I dislike what I do so particularly that I am always reluctant to let it out of my extinguisher cupboard.” (No. 721 in Catalogue No. 253, and No. 842 in No. 262, of Maggs Brothers, 1909.)

1849. To S. C. HALL.—“I am glad to have the paper [probably on Prout, see XII. 304] in the Art Journal, and am quite well satisfied, as I told you in the outset, to be on the footing of all other contributors. This is my political economy in all things.” (No. 633 in Catalogue, No. 258, of Maggs Brothers, 1910.)

1859. Sept. 10 (LAUSANNE). To E. S. DALLAS.—“I am a free trader—a liberal in most other matters—and in general tone of thought, much more likely to be mistaken for a Red Republican than for a Tory—though I am nearly equally removed from both—what a Whig is, I neither know nor care. . . . Neither Scott nor anybody else can build either Gothic or Italian at present. All real work in those styles depends primarily on mastery of figure sculpture. All modern architecture is spurious, and must remain so till our architects become sculptors.” (No. 168 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, July 6, 1910. This extract is a continuation of that given in XXXVII. 726.)

(n.d., but probably circ. 1861–3.) To FRANCIS BENNOCH.—“I have had no official intelligence yet respecting that sculpture business, but I will not fail to keep in mind the names you give me in case I should have to act in the matter. . . . Give every living being on the face of the earth ten thousand pounds of gold (or any other quantity you like to name, 100,000 if you like; or say—give every one as much as he would like to have at once), give every one neither more nor less, and not one would be able to make the smallest use of his gold, except to play at ducks and drakes with, or gild his saucepans instead of copper.” (No. 844 in Catalogue No. 262 of Maggs Brothers, 1910.)

Circ. 1865.—“The round arch was invented, or at least brought into [general use], by the Romans, and entirely for low purposes—aqueducts, sewers, etc.; they concealed it in their temples. The early middle age builders adopted and decorated it.” (No. 719 in Catalogue, No. 253, Maggs Brothers, 1909.)

1867. June 10. To J. HOLDEN.—“Your enquiry did not in any way offend me: but the matter is too grave to be given account of at present. I am in correspondence with Mr. Carlyle, and I cannot, until that correspondence is concluded, take any further steps.”¹ (No. 32 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, July 6, 1910.)

1869. Jan. 26 (DENMARK HILL). To MISS JEWSBURY.—“Thanks for your good words of Mr. Carlyle—whom I have never loved less than I did, even though I cannot return to the peace of heart that used to be between us.” (No. 172 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, Feb. 28, 1910.)

(n.d., but between 1871 and 1875.) To H. RITCHIE.—“I was greatly pleased by the bits about myself when I was young. The utter loneliness of my life now makes me look back on those days as belonging to another world altogether.” (No. 103 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, March 1, 1910.)

1875. Jan. 30 (WARWICK).—“Before taking the trouble to send me your picture, you had better simply offer it for sale by auction .|.|. buying it in at what-ever price you like to give for it. If you get it cheap—depend upon it, it is no Turner. The dealers never let one go cheap, now; and they know him (confound them). . . . It sounds to me like a subject got up in imitation of him.” (No. 147 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, July 6, 1910, and No. 843 in Catalogue No. 262 of Maggs Brothers.)

1877. To B. M. PICKERING, declining to write a preface to Mr. Punchard’s poems,² “for I see no occasion at present for anybody to write poems at all.” (No. 137 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, June 9, 10, 1909.)

1877. August 18 (BRANTWOOD).—To E. A. PANKHURST.—“I am most grateful also for the offer to correct the piece for me, and shall certainly avail myself of it—but it will take me yet at least a month’s rest to recover from the mischief done by working against time at Venice and partly since.” (No. 840 in Catalogue No. 262 of Maggs Brothers, 1910.)

1882. (SHEFFIELD).—Inquiring for some casts from Venice which had disappeared: “.|.|. only a bit of a dragon—a Noah leaf, and two birds appear!—the fisherman with the boat, hammering—the huge roll circle—the Madonna of Assisi—and the birds of the Noah, all not to be heard of.” (No. 146 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, July 6, 1910.)

1884–5. (BRANTWOOD and EUSTON HOTEL).—A series of letters on Ruskin’s stones and shells.—To Mr. R. DAMON, a dealer.—“I never buy shells either for locality or rarity, but only for beauty. .|.|. I think myself rather a fool for giving you your price for the four I have kept.” “Would it be possible for you to get me some of the granite stones described? .|.|. Shall be delighted with the agate .|.|. but for the size or symmetry only. It is only the unusual forms that interest me. Should be extremely obliged if you would send me the two emeralds on approval with the Japanese ball.” “My crystals are such as you may see any day in the British Museum, except in one or two instances which are neither S. American nor Russian, but common Swiss. .|.|. I am really too much occupied at present to show you them.” (No. 839 in Catalogue No. 262 of Maggs Brothers, 1910.)

² [King Saul and Other Poems, by E. G. Punchard: Pickering, 1877.]

1885. Jan. 15 (BRANTWOOD). To Mrs. PRICE.—Speaks of his ill-health since leaving Oxford: “.|. all friends of my own—too frequent experience—warn me alike to make no further exertion at present, but to watch the crocus buds, and be as idle.” (No. 66 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, July 6, 1910.)

1886. 24th April. To Dr. JOHN DOUGALL.—“The whole two paragraphs are expressly on lichens and mosses. What should I have begun talking of oxide of iron for? Or what would it have mattered how many years that lasted?” (No. 634 in Catalogue, No. 259, of Maggs Brothers, 1910.)

(n.d.) A note sending the exact time of his birth, “½ past 7 A.M. (under Aquarius), 8th Feb. 1819.”

(n.d., but between 1873 and 1886.) To Rev. C. CHAPMAN (see above, p. 331).—“I must really put this matter of the church at rest between you and me, by speaking clearly out for good and all. There are not above half a dozen clergymen in the whole number I know whom I would not pay, if I had it, their annual stipends to, if they would only hold their tongues—in the pulpit and out of it.” (No. 104 in Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue, March 1, 1910.)

A LETTER NOT INCLUDED IN “ARROWS OF THE CHACE”

In The Weekly Review, Nov. 28, 1863, there appeared, under the heading “Great Britain, France, and Poland,” the letter which Ruskin enclosed to his father on Nov. 23, and which is printed at Vol. XXXVI. p. 459. In the Review the following “P. S.” was added:—

“Your correspondent is a clergyman. I would desire, with his leave and yours, in lieu of other reply, to commend to his deep attention this magnificent closing stanza of a rhyme of the painter Dante Rossetti’s, written beside one of the Taurine marbles of Nineveh in the British Museum¹:—

The smile rose first; anon drew nigh
The thought . . . ‘Those heavy wings, spread high,
So sure of flight, which do not fly;
That set gaze—never on the sky;
Those sculptured flanks—it cannot see;
Its crown, a brow contracting load;
Its planted feet—which trust the sod . . .
Oh Nineveh, was this thy God—
Thine, also, mighty Nineveh?’ ”

199. The "church near Pavia" must be the Certosa; and, as the date of this passage is 1836, Ruskin must have visited Pavia on his tour of 1835. This explains a passage in XXXV. 623, where he notices his early and indiscriminate praise of a building which he afterwards greatly disliked.
247, n.¹, line 1, for "vol. i." read "vol. v."

1878, vol. ii. 223.
44, n.^{*} Ruskin here failed to verify his reference (iv. 28). Herodotus says the opposite:
"Thunder does not come at the time when it comes in other countries, but is very frequent in the summer; and if thunder comes in winter, it is marvelled at as a prodigy."

 xxxix. Jowett may be added to the list of early readers of Modern Painters vol. i. "I have read it all through," he wrote (December 23, 1844), "with the greatest delight; the minute observation and power of description it shows are truly admirable. . . . Since I read it I fancy I have a keener perception of the symmetry of natural scenery. The book is written by Ruskin, a child of genius certainly" (Life and Letters of Jowett, 1897, i. 114).
 liv., line 22, for "No. 83" read "No. 84."
 lv., line 7 from foot, the "Slaver" was put up for sale in 1869, but was then bought in. Ruskin sold it to America in 1872: see XXXVII. 689.

 402, § 14, compare VII. 170.
 414, *n.*² The reference to M. P., vol. v., is wrong. The drawing is Plate 61.
 417, n. (last lines). "Delphi" is the vignette (in Byron's Works) of "Parnassus and the Castalian Spring."
 420, line 1. The exact reference is "p. 303."
 487–8 (geological accuracy of Turner's "Upper Fall of the Tees"). Mr. Collingwood notes in his Ruskin Reader (see above, p. 32) that Ruskin's statement is "strikingly confirmed by the scientific account, and section, given by Mr. C. T. Clough, F.G.S., in the Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society, November 1876. The High Force of Tees is, like Niagara, formed of hard rock, lying over soft. The soft shale and limestone are eaten away underneath, and the hard basalt falls in, time after time; and so the face of the waterfall recedes."

- 495, line 3 from foot of text, for "forward" read "first." "Forward" occurs for the first time in ed. 5, and the error has appeared in all subsequent eds.
- 498, *n.*¹, and 516, *n.*¹, for "xvii." read "xviii."
- 499, line 7 from foot, "reflected" should be "reflective."
- 533, line 3 of note, for "Geneva" read "Genoa."
- 542, line 4 and *n.*². Ruskin here failed to revise his text, in accordance with a revision in an earlier chapter. The "rule" to which he really refers is not "our fifth rule" in the revised arrangement (p. 506), but the fifth in the original order (p. 521)—the eighth in the revised order (p. 508).
- 549, *n.*¹ (line 2), the "not" should be deleted.

394. The following letter from Mr. G. D. Leslie, R.A., appeared in the Morning Post of April 24, 1892, under the heading “A Prophecy and its Fulfilment”:—

“On page 3 of your issue of Thursday, the 14th inst., by strange chance a prophecy made by Mr. Ruskin in September 1843, and its fulfilment, in St. Paul’s Cathedral on the 12th of April 1892, appear. The one in a review of The Life and Letters of Joseph Severn, and the other in the letter of ‘A Colonial Visitor’ on the desecration of St. Paul’s Cathedral. The first, an extract from a letter written in Venice, September 1843, by Mr. Ruskin to Mr. Severn, reads thus:—

“[I see what the world is coming to. We shall put it into a chain armour of railroad, and then everybody will go everywhere every day until every place is like every other place, and when they are tired of changing stations and police, they will congregate in knots in great cities, which will consist of club-houses, coffee-houses, and newspaper offices; the churches will be turned into assembly-rooms; and people will eat, sleep, and gamble to their graves.]”

“The ‘Colonial Visitor’ writes thus as to his experience of a visit to St. Paul’s Cathedral on the 12th of April 1892:—

“[‘Yesterday afternoon I was an early attendant at our magnificent cathedral in order to obtain a good seat to hear the “Passion Music.” The Service is supposed to be a very solemn one, yet many of the congregation filled up the period of waiting (4 P.M. till 7 P.M.) by reading illustrated and other newspapers, periodicals, and books (some uncommonly like novels). Others beguiled the time by consuming light refreshments, sucking sweets, etc. A buzz of conversation on the topics of the day and family matters went on around me until I had serious thoughts of leaving the sacred building. Soon after six o’clock the pianoforte tuner came upon the scene, and put the finishing touches tot he instruments.]”

 210, *n.*¹, for "110-111" read "140-141."
 225, *n.*¹ (line 1), for "2" read "1 and 2".
 282, *n.*², for "273" read "281."
 383 n. ("now and then a wearied king," etc.). Ruskin may also have been thinking—as Mr. Collingwood points out in his Ruskin Reader—of Diocletian, who, after his abdication, replied to those who would persuade him to return to the throne, that he took more pleasure in cultivating his little garden than he had found in ruling the world (see Gibbon, ch. xiii.).
 384, *n.*¹, for "chapter" read "chapters."
 400, line 5 from foot of text, for "affected" read "effected." This misprint occurred in the Small and subsequent Editions.
 427, line 9, "internal evidence in my work of its originality." See the passage from Mill cited below, under VII. 229.

Vol. VI.

p. xxvi., in the account of Ruskin's studies of the Pass of Faido, it should be added that Plate 81 (VII.) is from the same scene: see VII. 435 n.

22 (last line of § 13): "the breeze less offence to his nobility." The reference is to Shakespeare, 1 Henry IV., Act i. sc. 3:—

"He called them untaught knaves,
 To bring a slovenly unhandsome unmannerly corse
 Betwixt the wind and his nobility."

- 24, *n.*² (line 4), for "St. Ouen" read "St. Omer"; (line 9 from foot), for "moulding" read "mouldering."
 90, *n.*³ for "17" read "5".
 117, line 4, "strewed the snow on Lebanon": see Jeremiah xviii. 14.
 173, lines 2, 3. The reference is to V. 300.
 174, line 12, "stony channels in the sun." This may be a reminiscence of the passage in Rob Roy quoted by Ruskin in XXXI. 509 n.
 218, Fig. 28, the letter "b" should be supplied to the second drawing.
 226, *n.*¹, for "§ 3" read "§ 4."
 227, § 13 (line 13). The reference-letter "d" should be inserted in Fig. 35 on the highest peak between c and e.
 262 (§ 22, ad init.): "coiled plungings of the crest."—"This refers especially," says Mr. Collingwood, in his Ruskin Reader, "to the Aiguille Pourri near Chamouni, in which the gullies and buttresses are singularly curved into writhing lines; but the description of the way the crags have been sculptured is true of the Matterhorn and many other mountain-crests, which have been made, not by some force pushing up the mountain into its present form, but by aqueous erosion."
 268, Fig. 66 is copied from Plate 35 in Lefebvre's Opera Selectiora quæ Titianus et Caliari, etc.
 328, n. There is a printer's error here (which occurs in the Small and all subsequent editions). The note should read:—".|.thus, in simple circular curvature, a, b, Fig. 96, being the fourth of a large circle, and b, c the half of a smaller one, the quantity of the element of circular curvature in the entire line a c is three-fourths of that in any circle,—the same as the quantity in the line e f."
 331, § 17 (line 1). "The following Plate": i.e. following the one last mentioned; it is opposite p. 287 in the text.
 358, *n.*¹, for "6" read "61."
 370, 371. Figs. 108, 109 are copied from Plate 35 in Lefebvre's Opera Selectiora quæ Titianus et Caliari, etc.
 415, supply "2" to the second note

- 417, *n.*¹ (line 1), for "4" read "1."
 434, § 20 (last line but one). "Vortex" in all eds.; but in the sense here intended, vertex is in English the usual form.
 442, *n.*¹ (last line), for "3" read "4."
 461, *n.*¹ (line 1), for "Exodus xvii. 17" read "Exodus xvii. 12."
 464, *n.*¹ (line 1), for "Matthew xxiii. 28" read "Luke xiii. 34, 35."

 xx., xxi., the Fairies' Hollow, spoken of successively as "at Chamouni" and at "Châtelard," was a spot near the latter place, on the old road to Chamouni.
 xxi., line 1, for "Polygola" read "Polygala."
 xlv., heading of letter, for "Ambrozio" read "Ambrogio."
 xlvi., line 1. Insert a semicolon after "reality."
 lii., line 5 from foot, for "Zubarans" read "Zurbarans."
 lv., lines 21, 22. The date is wrong. It was in 1856 that Ruskin met Mrs. Beecher Stowe in Switzerland.
 lxxvii., lines 11, 12. For Ruskin's vogue in France, see XXXVIII. xxi.–ii.
 lxxviii., *n.*¹, for "Nasmyth" read "Naesmyth": for the letter, see XXXVI. 361–362.
 41, *n.*², for "17" read "30."
 47, line 3 from foot. The reference is to chap. viii.

 188, n.^{*}, for "chap. 2" read "chap. 11."
 203, *n.*² (line 4), for "hit" read "his."
 228, *n.*². The passage from the Advancement of Learning is a good parallel; but the primary reference is to the Essays, as quoted in Vol. IV. 206 n.
 229. Mill's opinion of Ruskin at about this period appears in his Diary for Jan. 21, 1854 (Letters of John Stuart Mill, 1910, vol. ii. p. 361):—
 "It is long since there has been an age of which it could be said, as truly as of this, that nearly all the writers, even the good ones, were but commentators: expanders and appliers of ideas borrowed from others. Among those of the present time I can think only of two (now that Carlyle has written himself out, and become a mere commentator on himself) who seem to draw out what they say from a source within themselves; and to the practical doctrines and tendencies of both these, there are the gravest objections. Come on the Continent; in England (ourselves excepted) I can think only of Ruskin."
 266, line 18, for "things" read "thing."
 290, *n.*¹ (line 5), for "contained" read "continued."
 314, n., for "308" read "309."
 324, *n.*² (last line), for "us" read "as."
 356, n.^{*} (line 6), for "sculpture" read "sculptor." This misprint crept into the Small Edition.
 376, *n.*², for "XX." read "XXV."
 429, line 2 from foot of text, for "Blitzius" read "Bitzius."
 Between pp. 436, 437, Plate 84, the drawing from which this was engraved is at Oxford, Reference Series 93 (XXI. 35).
 463, *n.*¹, for "ii." read "i."
 474, Fig. 16. The drawing here engraved is at Oxford, Educational Series 218 (XXI. 94).
 474–5, §§ 10, 11. This passage, much revised, appears in Proserpina: see XXV. 243 seq

Vol. VIII.

- p. xx., *n.*⁶. For "Milan" read "Melun." The journey of 1846 also included the Italian Riviera, Sestri, etc.: see XXXV. 405, 632.
- xxiv. The statement that Ruskin made Miss Mitford's acquaintance in the Lake District is wrong. For the correct account, see XXXVI. xxix.
- xxxiv., line 1, the paper on Prout was, however, on reconsideration included in Vol. XII., the "Notes" being given in Vol. XIV.
- xxxvii., *n.*³. To the list of reviews should be added the "Comments" by George Wightwick, noted in IX. 55–56.
- xxxviii., *n.*¹. To the list of reviews should be added "The British Quarterly Review, August 1849."
- 33, the reference numeral "2" is omitted from the second note.
- 69, *n.*³, in the reference to Herodotus, for "68" read "67"; the passage is again referred to in XVII. 251, and XXXVI. 332.
- 82, n., third line from foot, for "came" read "come."
- 85, aphorism, for "1 5" read "15."
- 120, *n.*², for "olling" read "rolling."
- 131, *n.*¹, delete the references to Stones of Venice, vol. ii.
- 136, line 5, for "east" read "west." This misprint has occurred in all eds.
- 143, *n.*² (line 5), for "33" read "23."
- 206, § 14, compare IX. 55.
- 216, Plate XIV., compare Rudimentary Series No. 42 (XXI. 178).
- 233, § 10 (line 1), delete the comma after "respect." This misprint was first introduced in the ed. of 1880.
- 244, *n.*¹ delete this note; for a passage in XVI. 432 makes it almost certain that "St. Ouen" here was a slip of the pen for "St. Omer."
- 256, *n.*¹ (last line but one), for "§§ 4, 59," read "§§ 4, 67, 85."
- 259, *n.*⁴, for "Apple" read "Almond."
- 278, line 11, for Yorkshire read Leicestershire (or Nottinghamshire), Lough-borough being in the former county, Sutton Bonnington in the latter.

Vol. IX.

- p. xi., 7th line from foot, the passage here indexed is a diary-extract.
- xiv., Note on the Illustrations, line 5, for "August 1882" read "February 1883."
- xx., and 184, Fig. 37. The "Swiss roof" was engraved from a drawing formerly in Sir J. Simon's collection, "At the Foot of the Môle": see above, p. 267.
- xxvii., 3rd line from foot. The date should be "1857": see XXXVI. 260.
- xxviii. This letter was here reprinted from the earlier of two versions of it printed by Professor Norton: for collation, see XXXVII. 685 (No. 9). To the corrections there noted, it should be added that in line 25 "never used" should be "used never"; and that in line 3 from foot, "at once" should be inserted after "see."
- xxxviii., *n.*² More probably "£12,000" should be "£1200."
- li., line 22, for "Canale della" read "Rio di Santa."
- 46, *n.*¹ (line 5), delete "and historian," etc. The Francesco Sansovino of p. 20 n. was the son of Jacopo, the architect.
- 94, line 1. "We do not at present speak," etc. The subject is resumed at pp. 360, 362.
- 95, § 8 (line 4), "which we left": i.e. at pp. 81–84.
- 103, *n.*¹, "Roland's breach": compare Modern Painters, vol. iv. (VI. 213).
- 122, lines 14–16. It is clear from the context here, and still more from pp. 132, 133, that "Southern" and "Northern" should be transposed; the oblique arrangement being characteristic of the N., the square of the S.
- 131, § 29 (line 2), for "from" read "form."
- 180, line 7. For "§ 27 b, in," read "27, b is." This misprint originated in the Small Edition.
- 185, line 9, "Sotto piombi": compare X. 342

- 210, *n.*². An explanation of this matter is furnished by Miss Webb, daughter of the Rev. Benjamin Webb, who in his last letter (1885) to the congregation of St. Andrew's, Wells Street, spoke of his desire for new seats in the nave, to replace those "now much mutilated, besides being originally of a most inappropriate design, rightly ridiculed by Mr. Ruskin." The church was re-seated in 1898. It is clear that "West St." was a misprint for "Wells St.," and that Ruskin confused in his mind the closely adjacent Margaret Street Chapel (afterward replaced by All Saints') and St. Andrew's, Wells Street. (See the Guardian, March 14, 1906, p. 457, and the Church Times, March 16, 1906, p. 341.)
- 249, line 11 from foot (of notes), Signor Boni gave up the work.
- 297, *n.*¹, for "§ 310" read "§§ 35, 36."
- 320, *n.*¹, the exact reference to Ruskin's drawing is XIV. 423.
- 325, line 2, for "fitted" read "fitter."
- 340, Fig. 60. The reference-letter "c" should be inserted at the top left-hand corner at the apex of the dotted lines.
- 396, line 4, for "on" read "as."
- 404, *n.*¹ (last line), for "second" read "third."

- lxiv., the date of Plate E (p. 156) is more probably 1876: see Fors Clavigera, Letter 70 (XXVIII. 724 n.).
- 40, n., the description in the text and the explanatory footnote refer to a state of things now past. For several years Venice has been supplied with excellent spring water, brought in pipes from Sant' Ambrogio, above Treviso: see an account of "The Water of Venice" in the Globe, March 30, 1904.
- 135, *n.*², references should be added to "Isaiah vi. 3 and the Te Deum."
- 150, line 5 from foot (of notes), insert a comma after "palace."
- 165, lines 1 and 2, add a reference to "1 Kings vii. 17."
- "line 9. The "square or oblong objects" are the knops of the ancient Oriental knop and flower ornament, derived from Assyria.
- 214, line 5, "work that they do under the sun," add a reference to "Ecclesiastes viii. 9."
- 222, lines 8 and 9. A copy of Stones of Venice which was in Mr. George Allen's possession has the following correction in Ruskin's hand: ".|.]. Francia and Raffaele in his best time belong eminently to this class."
- "lines 18–23. The same copy corrects the passage thus:—
- "The principal men of this class are Titian, Veronese, Tintoret, Michael Angelo, Leonardo, Correggio, and Turner. Raffaele in his second time and Rubens are transitional; the first inclining to the eclectic, and the last to the impure class, Raffaele rarely giving all the evil, Rubens never all the good."
- 242, n.^{*}. Ruskin's reference is wrong; it should be ch. xviii.; Vol. ii. ch. vi. in ed. 1 of The Heart of Midlothian.
- 258, *n.*³ (last line), insert "Memphis" before "the ancient."
- 279, line 3 from foot of text, for "Christofore" read "Christofero."
- 287, n., for "6" read "5 B."
- 291, line 11, insert a comma after "1," and omit the comma after 1 a.
- "line 21, for "1 a" read "1 e."
- 299, § 33, last line, "of these more hereafter." See XI. 281. § 34 (line 3), for "35" read "14."
- 308, line 8 from foot of note, for "honor" read "horror"; line 3 from foot, for "227" read "226."
- 310, last line of text. The exact reference is XI. 284

- 348, *n.*², for "ecree" read "decree."
 374, "the study of classical literature .|. fostered in the Christian writers the unfortunate love of systematizing," etc. On this subject the reader may be referred to Dr. Edwin Hatch's Hibbert Lectures, 1888: The Influence of Greek Ideas and Usages upon the Christian Church.
 400, line 17, "I have above said": in ch. vii. § 41 (p. 306).
 406, line 3. The copy referred to above (under p. 222) contains the following note by Ruskin at the words "Malicious Envy":—

"Compare Ovid's Envy: ignavi plenissima frigris [Metamorph.], II. 763, especially her withering of the crops, 792."

- 426, *n.*². The subject appears to be Moses showing the book of the law to the Israelites, two of whom kneel before him with their hands on the pages of the book, taking an oath to observe it (Exodus xxiv. 3).
 427, *n. (last line), for "§ 59" (so in all eds.) read "§ 60."
 447, Appendix 8. The first of the inscriptions now reads:

"Mutat quod sumpsit, quod tollat crimina mundi Totum et quod sumpsit, vultus vestisq. refulsit."

Whether Ruskin transcribed wrongly, or whether the lettering has been restored and amended, cannot be said.

- 451, *n.*⁴. The reference may be to a picture belonging to the Church of the Madeleine (No. 37 in the Catalogue), which has been ascribed to Van Eyck and Dürer in turn. It is described by Lady Ritchie in her "Blackstick Papers, No. 9" (Cornhill Magazine, July 1904, p. 46).
- 490, n. A correspondent writes:—
 "For 'the Tonic Sol-Fa system' you should have said 'the fixed-do method used in Germany by Wilhem.' The truth is that no two methods could be more absolutely opposed. The Tonic Sol-Fa method gives the name doh to the tonic of the major scale, at whatever pitch it may be found; ray to the second of the scale, me to the third, and so on; and it teaches pupils to think of the sound (the 'mental effect,' to use the Tonic Sol-Fa term) of the various notes of the scale as compared with the keytone or tonic, so that when the keytone is struck any other note of the scale can easily be thought of and sung. The Wilhem or Hullah Method uses the Sol-Fa syllables (which are a modification of a set of syllables long in use as mnemonics), but it uses them merely as mnemonics, and it expects its pupils to sing by interval. In the key of C the two methods appear to be identical, for C is the 'fixed do'; that is to say, the name do is given to C, re to D, mi to E, and so on. But it is not intended that pupils learning the Hullah Method should associate the names with the scale relations as the Tonic Sol-Fa Method does, and the more the pupils do so associate them the more difficult they find it to go on to the next step—viz., to sing in another key. For example, the National Anthem in the Tonic Sol-Fa notation begins—doh, doh, ray, te, doh, ray, no matter in what key it is sung. On the Hullah Method the notes would be called do, do, re, si, do, re, if they were in the key of C; but fa, fa, sol, mi, fa, sol, if the tune was being sung in the key of F; while modifications of the syllables were required and provided for every note which was sharp or flat in the signature."

Boston was the author of The Fourfold State, The Crook in the Lot, and other well-known works; his connexion with the Marrow was confined to suggesting its republication in Scotland, and defending it vigorously when it was subsequently assailed as heretical.

xli.–xlv. This passage, calling attention to the neglect of Turner's sketches in the tin boxes at the National Gallery, appeared in August 1904. In April 1905 Mr. A. J. Finberg was commissioned by the Trustees to undertake a complete examination and arrangement of all the sketches and drawings. The result of his labours was given to the world in 1909 in the shape of A Complete Inventory of the Drawings of the Turner Bequest. .|.|. Arranged Chronologically by A. J. Finberg. 2 vols. Published by Order of the Trustees.

This work, which is likely to open a new era in the study of Turner, is the source of numerous corrections and additions noted below. It contains some hitherto unprinted Ruskiniana: see below. It has rendered possible the identification of several pieces mentioned by Ruskin (in which identification I have been aided by much kind help from Mr. Finberg.—E. T. C.); see, e.g., addenda to pp. 191, 192, etc., noted below. It has necessitated some corrections in Ruskin's ascription of pieces to Turner: see, e.g., addenda to pp. 255, 257, 631, 637, noted below. Finally, it contains for the first time a printed and numbered inventory of the whole collection.

It may be added that since Vol. XIII. appeared, the arrangement of the Turner Bequest (oils as well as drawings) has been altered, owing to the opening of the new Turner Wing at the Tate Gallery. The oil-pictures and the drawings are now for the most part at the Tate Gallery, though some are retained in Trafalgar Square.

xliii., last line but one of text and n. There was both a general catalogue (by Ruskin) and a schedule (drawn up previously by the executors). In Ruskin's Report of 1858 to the Trustees, "the schedule" (p. 322) means the latter. At a later date Ruskin drew up a Catalogue for the Trustees. This Catalogue (of which nothing was known when I inquired at the National Gallery) was found during Mr. Finberg's researches. It is written in an accountbook, and is dated 14th May 1862. It gives account of 308 parcels of unexhibited drawings then placed in the tin-boxes, and indicates each parcel as "R," "M," or "O"; "R" standing for "fine," "M" for "middling," and "O" for "bad" and "rubbish." The object of this class-list was to give an indication of what drawings were most, and what least, suitable for public exhibition. The first two pages of the Catalogue are transcribed in Mr. Finberg's Inventory, vol. i. p. x. Ruskin's endorsements on each parcel are also transcribed throughout the Inventory; e.g.:—

Schedule No. 274. "Earliest book: of original sketches of the 1790 subjects. Most interesting" (vol. i. p. 3).

Schedule No. 367. "Scrawls, but useful for evidence about Swiss fortresses" (vol. ii. p. 1040).

"6. Book, unfinished, containing only 18 coloured Ideas. 15 of the Lake of Lucerne, seen from the town, and 3 marines" (vol. ii. p. 1153).

lii., for "Cozens" read "Cousen."

liv., lines 3 and 4, cancel the words "when he was leaving .|.|. death of his parents." Ruskin did not leave Denmark Hill till 1872, and his mother did not die till 1871

- 6, "The Flag of England." There is a proof of this engraving in the British Museum, with the following note in ink in Ruskin's handwriting:—
 "Turner's touched proof of the engraving of the drawing given by me to Cambridge.—J. Ruskin.
 "N.B.—The pencil stands for enforcement of shade on the gun; for light, on the anchor. This was Turner's short-hand, understood by all his engravers."
- 134, *n.*¹ Delete "not elsewhere .|. Ruskin," and read "referred to at XII. 455, XXV. 27."
- 137, *n.*³. The anecdotes, which were not added to Dilecta, are these:—Mrs. Dart (for whom see XIII. 473 n.), in reminiscences of Turner's visits in youth at Bristol, described how he used to go out sketching before breakfast. An anecdote, sent to Ruskin by another acquaintance of Turner's, tells of a visit to a country-house, where he was commissioned to make a series of views. "Why, Mr. Turner," said the lady of the house, "when did you do them, for you have never been absent from us all day?" "When you were still in bed," was Turner's reply. Towards the end of his life, said another acquaintance, Turner would get up early in the morning, or in the night, to put down his dreams on canvas.

- 192, No. 4, CCCLIX. (13) in the Inventory.
- 194 (No. 8). Turner's sketch of Coblenz. In writing to the Committee of the Manchester Art Museum, which had acquired a copy of the drawing which Turner made from this sketch, Ruskin said:—
 "In nearly every case I know, the sketches for drawings of the last period are quieter and more natural than the drawings made from them; the imagination exerting itself afterwards, too exclusively, stimulated by pride in beauty of execution. When the effects are changed, it is nearly always for the worse. The finished drawing is one of the most accomplished of Turner's works, but I wish he had simply enlarged the sketch instead of modifying it."

When I entered, Ruskin was reading one of the original manuscripts of the Waverley series. He took the pen, and laying it reverently on the page, said, ‘Ah, they should never be parted.’ And during the whole of that visit to Oxford, and indeed for some time afterwards, I had to allow him to keep the pen.”

- 420–1, Turner’s drawing of “The Aiguillette.” A copy of this, by W. Ward, is in the Manchester Art Museum. Ruskin wrote as follows to the Committee of the Museum on hearing that they had decided to buy the copy:—
 “I am very heartily glad you have taken The Aiguillette, as I think it will always be a thoroughly instructive example—it is one of the most literally true drawings Turner ever made. The little bridge, cottage, and small cascade over the intermediate crags under the Aiguillette, which is the northern extremity of the precipices of the Aiguille de Varens, were always a favourite place of rest with me in the Valley of Cluse, before I knew Turner had ever seen them.”

513. Mr. Douglas Freshfield has pointed out that Turner’s “Pass of the Splügen” “ought not to be so called. It is a landscape in the Rhine valley below Coire and near Ragatz. It is miles away from any pass, and might as well be called the San Bernardino or the Lukmanier or the Julier, lying equally on the road to any of these old highways. We think this fact of some importance for Turner's sake, for seen looking up through the hot vaporous air of the Rheinthal, snow and rocks contrast very differently to what they do when seen on a pass or in the highlands of Savoy; and Mr. Ruskin's criticism on the snowy range, and also possibly that on the absence of trees, might be modified by careful calling to mind of the exact neighbourhood represented in this lovely drawing" (Alpine Journal, vol. ix. p. 45).

- 29, *n.*². Collins did not stand as model for either the “Huguenot” or the “Black Brunswicker.” The former was General Lemprière; the latter, a professional model.
- 67, No. 531, the painter’s initials should be “W. C. T.”
- 116, lines 4–6, compare XIV. xxiv., 164.
- 168, *n.*¹ (line 2), for “116” read “166.”
- 174, *n.*¹, “a single harsh word,” etc. For the source of this quotation, see VII. 339 n.
- 192, *n.*². E. H. Corbould died at the age of ninety in 1905.
- 213, *n.*³. The explanation is that Ruskin by a slip of the pen wrote the name of Vernet instead of that of Baron Gros, whose two large compositions of the Plague (“Bonaparte visiting the plague-stricken at Jaffa”) and “Napoleon at Eylau” are in the Louvre (C 388 and C 389).
- 217, *n.*³ (line 1), for “picture” read “pictures.”
- 223, last line of notes, for “§ 153” read “§ 7 (Vol. XIX. 7).”
- 254, *n.*¹ (line 4), for “§§ 52–54” read “§§ 58 seq.”
- 287, *n.*³ (line 1), for “1504” read “1054.”
- 308, last line of notes, for “76” read “66.”
- 318, under “Leslie, C. R.,” delete the entry “Sir Plume,” etc.
- 337, *n.*¹, for “§§ 56” read “§ 64.”

- 341, line 3, the comma after “boots” is deleted by Ruskin in his copy of Arrows of the Chace.
- 358, date of letter, for “19th Jan.” read “9th Jan.” The dates of other letters quoted in the note on pp. 357–358 are Nov. 3, 5, 15, and Dec. 11, 1887.
- 388, § 26, line 3. For “1858” read “1868”: see Catalogue of Flamboyant Architecture, xix. 276.
- 389, *n.*¹, the picture in the Salon of 1873 here referred to was No. 71, “Fin d’une Chanson,” by Charles Edouard de Beaumont.
438. “119 (?) Improvements in Modern London.” Ruskin’s exhibit under this title was an advertisement headed “Glazed Terra Cotta,” and announcing, with coloured illustrations, that “Lipscombe & Co. (of Temple Bar) will be pleased to point out how any existing house may best be decorated with architectural ornamentation, kept in stock.”
- 449, No. 10, for “410” read “412.”
- 469, line 6, and *n.*¹. Mr. Holman Hunt (Pre-Raphaelitism and the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, 1905, vol. ii. p. 128) has the following passage bearing on the Seddon Exhibition and Ruskin’s praise of the “Penelope”:—
 “Rossetti proposed that each of his painter friends should take up one of the unfinished works of the deceased and bring it to completion. Brown, with generous enthusiasm, put this proposal into execution on a very embryonic painting of Penelope, but the other pictures were left without additional work. . . . A meeting was held, at which Lord Goderich presided, and Ruskin made an address at the Society of Arts, in which, misled as to the true workman, he said that while beforehand he had only regarded Seddon as a landscape painter of great promise, he now saw by the ‘Penelope’ that he was also a great figure painter; this was the prelude to much generous laudation of Seddon’s landscapes.”
- 499, line 20. “Brignol Bay”: so in Mr. Severn’s Catalogue; presumably a misprint for “Brignall Banks.”

Vol. XV.

- p. 39, *n.*¹ (last line), for “Queen of the Air, § 144,” read “Cestus, § 70 (XIX. 120).”
- 81, Fig. 10 is copied from Titian’s “Peter Martyr” in Lefebvre’s Opera Selectiora, etc.
- 98, lines 4 and 9 from foot of note. Ruskin says that Dunblane Abbey was etched not by Turner but by Lupton. “A letter, however, from Lupton to the late Mr. Henry Vaughan distinctly states that Ruskin was mistaken, and that the etching was Turner’s own” (Rawlinson’s Turner’s Liber Studiorum, ed. 1906, p. 228).
- “n. *,” list at the beginning. For another selection of the best plates in the Liber, see 13, 96. “River Wye” is the plate called “Chepstow.” In the second list, No. 1 is “Bridge and Goats,” No. 3 “Bridge and Cows,” No. 5 “Twickenham,” No. 10 “Oakham.”
- 185, *n.*¹, for “pt. iv.” read “pt. vi.”
- 186, § 214. Compare Modern Painters, vol. v. (VII. 39).
- 339, line 3, delete “the reference is now given in a footnote.”
- 380, *n.*¹. For another reference to the book, see XXI. 298.
- 425, *n.*¹, insert “not” before “used.”
- 437, n. The drawing is not of Glastonbury. It is No. 450 b in the National Gallery (Inventory, CXLVI. 21), a Yorkshire subject.
- 500, line 13 from foot. The drawing by Wilson is No. 117 in the Reference Series at Oxford (XXI. 38).

Vol. XVI.

- p. ix., the date of “First Letter” to Acland should be “May 25, 1858.”
- xlvi., line 3, for “lxxiii.” read “lxxiv.”
- xlvi., line 1 and *n.*¹, delete the reference and note.
- xlix., line 21, for “427” read “431.”

- ii. To the account of the Oxford Museum, it may be added that since Vol. XVI. appeared Professor Henry A. Miers, F.R.S., until recently the curator of the Museum, interested himself in promoting the completion of the carving. He issued an appeal (quarto, 4 pp. with frontispiece, in grey wrappers), headed "The New Carvings at the University Museum," from which the following extracts are taken:—

"After the completion of the 30 capitals on the ground floor, and 16 on the upper floor in the west corridor, the work was abandoned, and for 45 years the remaining 80 capitals have stood as mere blocks, unsightly loads upon the beautiful marble shafts. Owing to the munificence of the Rev. H. T. Morgan of St. Margaret's, Lincoln, this reproach is now being removed. Mr. Morgan, who had watched the O'Sheas at work when he was an undergraduate at Trinity, wrote to me in May 1905, and expressed his desire to continue some part of the long-abandoned carving at his own expense. He .|. undertook to pay for the completion of the unfinished west corridor and the whole of the south corridor . . . The The plate of Capital No. 125 (Canterbury Bell) may be taken as a fair example of the beautiful work now in progress. .|. The first process is to make a finished artistic sketch from the living plant at the Botanic Garden, and then, with the help of the sketch and a specimen of the flower and foliage, the carving is elaborated. . . . No such series of carved plants exists in England (or perhaps elsewhere), and it will be sad if the series cannot be carried on continuously, and completed by the men who are now engaged upon it. . . . The University possesses no fitting memorial of Professor Ruskin; there may be many who might like to help in finishing a noble piece of work which was near to his heart and was mainly due to his inspiration, and to make the sculptural decoration of the Museum a lasting monument to his memory."

- iii. A design for the central doorway of the Museum was also made by John Hungerford Pollen; the drawing has been presented to the University by his widow (see Oxford Intelligence in the Times, Feb. 11, 1909).
- lxxi., line 5 from foot (of text), for "§ 16" read "§§ 10, 11."
6. "Mansfield Art Class." Reported also in the Art Journal, Nov. 1873, p. 349.

- 419, line 2, for "[pp. 286, 419]" read "[pp. 286, 386]."
- 433, § 5. Carlyle on distressed needlewomen: see his Shooting Niagara (Miscellanies, vii. 204, ed. 1872).
- 437, n.³. "May I," writes a correspondent, "suggest an interpretation of 'clinical education'?' The expression is intended, I think, to be illustrative of the preceding phrase—'of everyday life.' The 'clinical education' of a medical student is his training in bedside practice—in what is to be his everyday experience during his professional career; and Ruskin here says that Cruikshank felt his training in the depicting of everyday subjects to have been defective, excellent as we consider his achievements in that branch of art to have been. Professor Henry Drummond, in his student days, used the same metaphor in an address to his fellow-students on 'Spiritual Diagnosis,' in which he spoke of the necessity of practice in 'dealing with individuals' as a preparation for the work of the ministry; and the idea was borrowed by Dr. John Watson ('Ian Maclaren') and made the basis of an address (26th June 1901) to a Baptist theological college on 'Clinical Theology.'|

- 440, *n.*². "Here again," writes the same correspondent, "the passage seems clear. The reference is to the Bible: 'the greatest good was to be derived from the reading of one book (one particular book, viz., the Bible), which he hoped was and would continue to be of the popular taste.'"
- 441, § 8 (line 10), for "foot" read "head."
- 447, *n.*¹, insert "iii." before "295–300."
- 449, *n.*¹. Temple was at the time Inspector of Training Colleges.

- 75, *n.*³. Cancel the note, and read "See above, p. 53."
- 87, last line, 88, first line, and 88 *n.*¹. Ruskin's derivation was presumably from □□□□ and □□□□□, to prick or pierce—the thing that injures the divine part of man, as he says.
- 103, line 3 of author's note, "p. 98" is a reference to the first edition of Mill's Political Economy (book i. ch. v. § 9).
- 112, line 5 and *n.*¹, and 320, line 12 and n. It should have been remarked that the maxim of the Church Catechism, as referred to by Ruskin, is a popular misquotation. The Catechism speaks of "that state of life, unto which it shall please God to call me"—an idea very different from the other.
- " line 3 from foot of text, for "□□□□□□" read "□□□□□□."

- 337, § 23. The cast of the Pantomime at Covent Garden Theatre in 1866–1867 was:—"Ali Baba: W. H. Payne. Ganem: Fred. Payne. Abdallah: Kate Carson. Morgiana: Rachael Sanger." The donkey and the children were played by unnamed actors.
- 358, line 5. Ruskin was at a performance of the "Huguenot Captain" on October 6, 1866.
- 368, line 4. The exact reference is XVII. 21.
- 405, *n.*². Reference may be made to an exhaustive discussion by Mr. H.B. Cotterill (in his edition of Lycidas, published by Blackie) on the identity of the flower. He maintains with great force that the flower referred to by the Greeks must be "our dark-blue garden Larkspur."
- 425, *n.*¹. A reference to the Esterhazy jewels will also be found in Lockhart's Life of Scott, ed. 1, vol. v. p. 95. In line 7, for "qualifying" read "gratifying."
- 451, *n.*⁴. Mr. Sorby died in 1908

485. The two letters to Mr. Hartley were also included in Ruskin's Letters to F. J. Furnivall (see XXXVII. 649), where, in a note to the former, it is explained that

“the letter was addressed to a young salesman in one of the Manchester ware-houses, who had gone through a course of reading in Political Economy; and to whom Unto this Last had come as a revelation of a new order of thought, with a new ideal, and a fuller view of the possibilities of life. A respectful letter of earnest thanks was written to Ruskin, still clinging to the idea that by each man working for his own true interest the Providence of God over-ruled all for the common weal.”

Similarly it is explained that Ruskin's second letter was sent in reply to an answer written by Mr. Hartley after reading the papers in Fraser's Magazine, and Carlyle's Past and Present:—

“The writer was deeply imbued with a sense of the truth of the main positions laid down, and realised thoroughly the principles of Help and Service. A respectful protest was, however, submitted, upon what was felt to be a narrowing of Ruskin's theories to combat the errors of one class. It was felt that his special insistence upon the defects of traders, apart from the other professions, tended to retard the adoption of his principles, and that one class alone should not be held up for reprobation, when the other professions also fell far short of realising their perfect ideal. A minor protest was also submitted against any unnecessary toil being looked upon as degrading: and the letter ended with an account of a conversation with the salesman of a leading firm of calico printers, who had, in a business transaction, advanced arguments drawn from Ruskin's economic writings.”

- 501, line 10 from foot, for “ $\frac{a}{b}$ ” read “ $\frac{a}{6}$ ”. The misprint occurred in Arrows of the Chace.
- 523, line 9 from foot (of text), “the ugly bridegroom in the Arabian Nights”: see XXXIV. 470.
- 525, lines 14 and 19 (of the passage from Xenophon). There should be no stop after “cares,” and no note of interrogation after “evil.” These corrections (important to the sense) were marked by Ruskin in his copy of Arrows of the Chace.
- 543, n.³, for “195” read “156.”
- 545, lines 5 and 6. The Queen of the Air reads: “.|. and every acre of sand gained from the sea in Lincolnshire makes life easier all over England.”
- “ line 21. The Queen of the Air reads: “But shall we do so by letting them steal their food, and do|.|.”
- 556, n.¹. The paper was also reprinted (in great part) in Fors Clavigera, Letter 60: see XXVIII. 466.
- 560, n.². The reference is rather to canto xi. (which is the canto quoted on XVII. 220); and Ruskin implies that the 4000 gold crowns mentioned in the text were probably made by usury.

Vol. XVIII.

- p. x., “The Rocks of Holyhead.” For “1862” read “1861.”
- x., lxx. n., “An Evening with Sir C. Hallé.” The date is “Dec. 1864”; see XXXVI. 476. The letter was therefore addressed to Ruskin's mother, not to his father (who was then dead).
- xi., “Letter to Mr. Allen.” For “May” read “August.”
- xxii., line 14 and n.². The Act of 1906, passed in consequence of the decisions of the House of Lords, restored the immunity.
- xxxi., n.², line 5. The poem was no doubt George Herbert's “Dialogue” (in The Temple), beginning “Sweetest Saviour, if my soul Were but worth the having.” Ruskin mentions it in Præterita (ii. § 110) among pieces which he learnt by heart.
- xxxix., line 7 from foot, for “much” read “mud.”

- xl., line 2. The reference here, and in XXII. 505, is to Carlyle's Latter-Day Pamphlets, No. iii.
- lvi., n.¹, for "251" read "252."
- lviii., line 7, for "Art" read "Arts."
- lxix., line 7, for "rich" read "river."
- 35, line 4, for "p. 163 (§ 117)" read "p. 165 (§ 118)."
- 47, n.². The other school-girl was the elder sister, Emily.
- 53, n.² (line 5), "my reserved 'trot for the avenue.]" The quotation is from Friends in Council, New Series, 1859, vol. ii. p. 120: "As the all-accomplished Master of Trinity once said, he 'reserved a trot for the avenue.]"
- 59, § 8 (line 6), for "Yet" read "But."
- 60, last line but one, for "talking" read "talked." These misprints crept into the Small Edition (also into the "Luxe" ed.).
- 73, line 2, insert a comma before "while."
- 74, n.¹, for "2 Corinthians" read "1 Corinthians."
- 87, n.² (line 3), for "National" read "Natural."
- 100, n. *, some eds. italicise □□□□□.
- 153, line 23, for "ourselves and hearers" read "ourselves the hearers." This misprint has occurred in all editions of Sesame and Lilies. The first edition of the Lecture (Afternoon Lectures, etc., XVIII. 15) prints "the" correctly.
- 161, n.¹, for "John xiii. 15" read "John xv. 13."
- 170, n., line 4, "Plate III." in Ariadne is Pl. XXVII. in Vol. XXII.
- " " third line from foot. The sense requires "more severe," not "less severe."
- 195, line 16, delete the "(?)."
- 206, line 17, for "221" read "223."
- 229, line 2 from foot, for "four" read "fore."
- 363, n.² (last line), for "XX." read "XXI."
- 373, n. The date of the lecture at Woolwich, hitherto uncertain, is fixed by a letter from Ruskin which was printed in 1910 and is given above (p. 345). It was Feb. 16, 1866; Ruskin's "1865" on p. 459 being a slip.
- 406, n.¹ (last line), for "elements" read "events."
- 416, n.¹, for "366" read "368."
- 450, n.¹, cancel the reference to Vol. II.
- 466, line 8 from foot of text, "Olympic dust," see Horace, Odes, i. i., 3.
- 490, line 9 from foot of text, for "will" read "wills."
- 498, n., line 2, for "1889" read "1869."
- 519, line 11 from foot of text, insert quotation marks after "Trinity."
- 537, n. See further on the subject, XXXVI. 331, 347.
- 547, last line but one (of the letter), for "anything" read "any." This correction is marked by Ruskin in his copy of Arrows of the Chace. See also XXXVI. 459.
- 548, last line, for "tripidare" read "trepidare."

Vol. XIX.

- p. xi., line 5, delete "lxxii."
- xii., "The Scala Ironwork," for "lii." read "liii."
- " " "With Hunt at Venice," for "liv." read "lv."
- xxi., line 18, the reference to note 1 is omitted.
- xxii., line 15, for "Feb. 5" read "Feb. 4."
- xxiv., line 15. The British Museum drawing is not reproduced, but similar drawings will be found reproduced at pp. 226, 262 of Vol. XXI.
- xxix., letter of July 2, for "Grasmere" in each place read "Grassmoor."
- xxxiv., n.² (line 1), for "14th" read "17th."
- xl., line 15, for "n" read "in."
- xliii., line 3 of the larger print, for "lxxv." read "lxxvi."
- xlix., letter from "Verona, May 21." Compare Eagle's Nest, § 125 (XXII. 210).

- 92, *n.*², for "11" read "12."
- 115, line 8 from foot of text, for "Tiber" read "Tibur" (Tivoli).
- 132, *n.*¹. In a copy of Queen of the Air (now in the library of Mr. S. W. Bush), Ruskin struck out the words "his liberty" and inserted "the" before "magnificent," writing in the margin: "Printer's mistake—made sentence exquisitely unintelligible. I wonder how many respectful people have been trying to make something unusually fine of it." The exquisite unintelligibility remained uncorrected until the Library Edition.
- 159, line 2, "a sad wise valour": a quotation from George Herbert's Church Porch: see Index.
- 163, *n.*¹, delete "Vol. XIII. p. 430." For Ruskin's visits to Cambridge, see the Index.

- 371, last line (of notes), for "XX." read "XXI."
- 400, line 24. In Mr. Bush's copy of the book, Ruskin inserted a comma after "fight," with the note, "If printers ever leave out a comma, it is sure to be the most necessary one in the book!"

427. The synopsis of Verona and its Rivers was separately reprinted from the Proceedings, octavo, pp. 7. There is no title-page, the following title occupying the upper portion of p. 1:—

Royal Institution of Great Britain. | Weekly Evening Meeting. | Friday, February 4, 1870. | William Spottiswoode, Esq., M.A., F.R.S., Treasurer and | Vice-President in the Chair. | John Ruskin, Esq., F.R.S., M.R.I. | Slade Professor of Fine Arts, Oxford. | A Talk respecting Verona and its Rivers.

Issued, stitched and without wrappers. (The “F.R.S.” after Ruskin’s name was an error.)

” In the collation of Verona and other Lectures (1894), it should be stated that the Appendix on “Saxon Money” is printed, not in Our Fathers have Told Us, Vol. XXXIII., but in XXX. 278.

65, n.¹, for “57” read “11.”

76, § 70. For Virgil, compare XXXVII. 13–14.

87, n.³, for “Ecclesiasticus” read “Ecclesiastes.”

94, this page (“Its stress .|. For Ever”) was quoted by Ruskin in The Storm-Cloud (XXXIV. 174), and in his copy of the latter book he made the following revisions:—line 2, “Its strength” for “Its stress”; line 4, “but” inserted after “often,” and “a” for “the” before “whirlwind.”

99, n.² (line 1), for “57” read “58.”

142, n.¹. For Leonardo’s Medusa, compare XXXVII. 8.

155, n.³, for “141” read “142.”

163, n.², for “36” read “37.”

171, n.², for “148” read “149.”

172, n.², cancel the words “Princess .|. (Vol. XXI. p. 26).” The example placed at Oxford was changed.

173, n.² (line 4), for “§ 43” read “S 43” (i.e., No. 43 in the Standard Series XXI. 26).

175, § 187, lines 4 and 5. Compare XXII. 56.

231, n., for “2” read “12.”

235, n.², for “D” read “E.”

236, n.¹ (line 3), for “Raniero” read “Ranieri.”

241, § 65 (line 6), for “Luini” read “Luni” (Carrara). This misprint appears in all the small editions of Aratra.

253, § 80 (end), “more to say afterwards”: see pp. 341, 410.

356, line 7 and n.³, the precise reference is to ch. 3 of The Water-Babies: “even if you do not care about the salmon river, you ought, like all good boys, to know your Bewick.”

364, § 234. Compare Fors Clavigera, Letter 35, § 8 (XXVII. 655).

396, n.², for “E” read “F.”

400, n.² (line 1), for “F” read “E.”

407, § 1 (line 11), for “(Economics)” read “(Economicus).”

Vol. XXI.

- p. xix., lines 10–13. The matter is of little importance, but the statement in the text is not precisely accurate. The Art Classes in connexion with the Science and Art Department were at the time of Ruskin's appointment held in the very room which is now the Ruskin School, and had been there for four or five years. Also, they were not confined to townspeople, but were attended by members of the University, mostly resident, and many of their wives and daughters. The room was only separated from the sculpture gallery by temporary screens; the wall was built after Ruskin had got possession of it, and it was only then that the South Kensington classes were moved to another part of the building, with Ruskin's entire consent, because his course did not include the kind of technical instruction which was given in them.
- 23, *n.*³ (line 2), for "99" read "97."
- 37, No. 107, *n.*³. It is doubtful whether the drawing is by Bunney, or by T. M. Rooke. It may be the drawing by Bunney mentioned by Ruskin in XXX. 63; but the description does not accurately correspond. It may therefore be by Mr. Rooke (see XXX. 226).
- 40, No. 139. On this drawing, see a letter to Burne-Jones of June 28, 1862: XXXVI. 409.
- 42, No. 156, *n.*². It appears that Ruskin had two studies made of this subject. Bunney's is at Sheffield (XXX. 231); this one at Oxford is therefore by Burgess.
- 43, No. 170. Possibly the drawing is by Ruskin: see XXIV. 296.
- 75, No. 8. For some notes on this example, see Bibliography, above, p. 128.
- 82, *n.*⁴, for "Plate C" read "Plate D."
- 83, *n.*⁷, for "205" read "204."
- 90, *n.*³. Delete the words "the studies are now reproduced in Deucalion"; and for "former" read "latter."
- 93, *n.*⁸, delete "and Eagle's Nest, § 110."
- 118, No. 37 (line 1), for "Testament" read "Treatment."
- 120, line 4. The word "designs" must be a misprint; perhaps for "deities."
- 143, *n.*² (lines 6–8). The quotation is from Gerarde's Herball, 1597, vol. ii. p. 802.
- 149, last line of notes. The date "1877" was a mistake; it should probably be "1872."
- 150, *n.*³ (line 2), for "458" read "90 n."
- 171, *n.*¹ (last line). Delete the words "It is now at Brantwood." See XXXIII. 379 n.
- 193, No. 87, *n.*¹. For "probably 1834" read "1832." See XXXV. 621, 622.
- 219, *n.*¹ (line 2), for "Vol. IV." read "Vol. VI."
- 233, *n.*⁴. The plate in Proserpina is called "States of Adversity."
- 268, last line (of the notes), for "86" read "76."
- 270, *n.*¹. Twelve of the dispersed leaves were in 1910 acquired by Mr. Henry Yates Thompson from Miss Bradford, to whom Ruskin had given them.
- 301, No. 5, for "S. Martino" read "Duomo."
- 302, No. 31, *n.*¹. For "He himself was at Avallon later in the year." read "He himself had been at Avallon in the preceding year." "That window of the Sacristan at Avallon," wrote Ruskin to Mr. Randal (July 10, 1883), "might be a lesson to any one; it is going to Oxford."
- " No. 47. The Ponte Vecchio, otherwise called the Ponte della Pietra. Ruskin commissioned this sketch in a letter to Signor Alessandri of June 3, 1884: "I want certainly a careful view of the Ponte della Pietra with the river thundering through [sketch] and the gate at the end."
- 306, No. 178. This drawing was No. 113 in the Exhibition at the Fine Art Society in 1886: see XXX. 179

311, Construction 1. In line 4, for “k l” read “k m.” The full Construction should be as follows:—

“Draw the basic line A D an inch long.
With centre A, and radius A D, describe arc k m.
With centre D, and the same radius, describe arc l m, cutting the arc k m in V and m.
With centre V, and the same radius, describe arc k l, cutting the arcs k m and l m in k and l.
Join A V and D V.”

313, Construction 9 (line 1), for “dd” read “da.”

“Construction 10 (line 3), for “A Q” read “a q.”

325, “Rome,” for “Capital” read “Capitol.”

Vol. XXII.

p. xxvi., n., line 2, for “Sesti” read “Sestri.”

xxix., line 15, “28th” should be “29th.”

13, *n.*². The photograph shown was more probably of the “Scarborough” in the Farnley collection; reproduced in Turner and Ruskin, vol. ii. p. 216.

109, *n.*¹ (line 4), for “Tyrwhitt’s” read “Tyrwhitt.”

121, line 13, delete the comma between “Sandro” and “Botticelli.”

156, *n.*¹, line 1, for “1861” read “1862.”

166, *n.*⁴. Compare Fors Clavigera, Letter 48 (XXVIII. 221).

200, n., line 2, for “Nos. 172, 173” read “No. 173.”

207, *n.*¹, for “18” read “8.”

225, *n.*⁴, for “209” read “290.”

239, n., line 17, a quotation from Hamlet; line 29, a very doubtful piece of etymology.

287, *n.*¹ (line 3), for “347” read “348.”

359, line 5 from foot of text, for “4” read “6.”

398. In the Letters of Dr. John Brown, p. 225, Ruskin’s reference is wrongly taken to be to the “Moses” of J. R. Herbert.

415, second line from foot, for another reference to the Cyprian Aphrodite, see XXIV. 388 (line 2).

455, *n.*¹, for “18” read “8.”

456, *n.*¹. The plate in question is “The Forge” by James Sharples (1825–1893). See Smiles, Self-Help.

498, line 3 from foot of text, for “skirting (?)” read “shieling” (shepherd’s hut).

504, *n.*⁴. This note should be cancelled. The exact reference is given in XXVIII. 564 n.

507, line 14, for “on them” read “of them.”

” “On the horror of great darkness,” etc. The following passage occurs verbatim in Fors Clavigera, Letter 65 (XXVIII. 594–595).

514, line 26, for “important” read “impotent.”

515, *n.*². For a more exact reference to Bishop Fraser’s words, see XXXIV. 348 n.

520, line 3, for “Edwards” read “Edward.”

523, § 46 (last line but one). For “Robinson Crusoe’s pottery,” see XXVIII. 199.

Vol. XXIII.

p. x., xi., owing to a “re-make-up” several of the references should be moved one page forward.

xv. Title of Plate XXV. and lettering of the Plate (p. 278). The drawing from which this Plate was engraved was not by Ruskin, but by Signor Alessandri: it is at Sheffield (XXX. 192).

xvii., No. 4, for “Duomo” read “Upper Church.”

xxx., *n.*⁴ (line 2), for “Sesti” read “Sestri.”

- xlviii., *n.*² (line 12). The reliquary was, however, given to one of Miss Alexander's peasant-friends: see XXXII. 299.
- lvii., last line of text, delete "67."
- lxviii. Add at the end:—
 "17. On extreme right, old Herne Hill Bookcase, my Father's—with my Plato, Shakespeare, Scott poetry, and Danish Flora, etc., etc.—John Ruskin, Brantwood, 13th Sept. 1881."
- 11, § 2 (line 3), "at Ferentino." This is a mistake of Ruskin's; it should be Castel-Fiorentino, as he states in XXXIII. 480. Ferentino was the scene, not of the Emperor's death, but of his betrothal.
- 16, *n.*² (line 1), for "XXXVIII." read "XXXVII."
- 30, § 39. There is a plaster-cast of the fountain in the Architectural Gallery of the Science and Art Museum at Dublin.
- 92, 103, for "delit" read "délit." The passage in Viollet le Duc referred to on pp. 102–3 is at vol. vi. p. 318 of his dictionary of architecture.
- 137, *n.*³. Cancel this note. Pisa, as a Ghibelline city, was on the side of Manfred, not of Charles of Anjou. "Scylla of the Tyrrhene Sea" is merely Ruskin's way of re-writing Sismondi's "a storm on the Tyrrhene Sea." (see Sismondi, French ed. of 1826, vol. iii. p. 335).
- 147, line 1. It is still used for the same purpose.
 " *n.*¹, for "p. 76" read "p. 112."
- 148, *n.*², for "27" read "17."
- 153, *n.*³, alter the reference to "§ 40, p. 31."
- 169, *n.*¹, for "8" read "7."
- 177, line 5 from foot, for "Tours" read "Troyes."
- 178, lines 3 and 4, delete "in alliance with Pisa and Sicily"; line 4, for "233" read "243."
- 186, *n.*¹ (line 1), for "lix." read "lx."
194. In the lettering of Plate XVII., for "Francesca" read "Francesco."
 " § 15 (line 1), for "tower" read "town."
- 204, § 26 (line 7), for "horror" read "honour."
- 208, line 5 from foot of note, for "drawing" read "wax bust." The ascription of it to Raphael is doubtful.
- 223, *n.*² (line 1), for "226" read "230."
- 233, line 9, "Two" should have been "Thirty": see XXXVII. 131.
- 250, *n.*². For the cutting from the Daily Telegraph, see XXVIII. 237.
- 259, *n.*⁴, for "4" read "5."
- 265, *n.*³, for "§ 105" read "§ 111."
- 274, *n.*², "does not name even money," etc. For the allusion here, see XXIII. 76–77.
- 276, *n.*⁴ (line 2), for "§ 119" read "§ 125."
- 277, *n.*², for "16" read "46."
- 317, *n.*¹. Cancel this note; and substitute:—"See Love's Labour's Lost, Act v. sc. 2: 'While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.'"]
- 325, *n.*¹ (line 2), for "Sebastino" read "Sebastiano."
- 337, n. should be *n.*²; and *n.*², *n.*¹
- 344, § 48. A misrepresentation of this passage, made in a popular book, may be noted. In Earthwork out of Tuscany (ch. ii., ad fin.) Mr. Maurice Hewlett writes:—
 "In this same story-telling Giotto is an adept. He loves to gather his fellows round him and speak of Saints and Archangels, where our youngsters talk of fairy godmothers and white rabbits. To say this is not Art, as the critics profanely teach, is monstrous. Is not the Fioretti literature, or the Gospel according to St. Luke literature? .|. So when I learn from the works of Ruskin that he can 'read a picture to you as, if Mr. Spurgeon knew anything about art, Mr. Spurgeon would read it,—that is to say, from the plain, common-sense Protestant side,' .|. I make haste to laugh lest I should do wrong to Tuscany, that looked upon the world to love it: for she saw that it was very good."

Mr. Hewlett's haste prevented him from reading the following words, which would have destroyed his point; for Ruskin continues: "If you are content with that view of it, you may leave the chapel, and, as far as any study of history is concerned, Florence also; for you can never know anything either about Giotto, or her." Mr. Hewlett's view of Giotto as an adept in storytelling is also Ruskin's: see, e.g., XXIII. 333.

- 345, *n.*², for "John xxiv. 15" read "Joshua xxiv. 15."
 356, lines 4, 5, "the crown, which you will find," etc. See XXIII. pp. 361, 439.
 360, for "2 Esdras" read "1 Esdras."
 383, *n.*¹. Mr. Newman's drawing is the subject of a letter from Ruskin in XXX. lxxiii.
 407, *n.*¹, for "vi." read "v."
 469. The report from the Eton minute-book was printed also in the Bookman, March 1900: see XXXIV. 627.

Vol. XXIV.

- xxxii., lines 3, 4. "Mrs. Richmond Ritchie's account of Low Bank Ground is," writes Mr. Collingwood, "misleading in saying that the cottage had been the site of a Priory. Oddly enough, Mrs. Radcliffe made the same mistake, a century earlier, about the Hall opposite: and many writers who ought to have known better have confused Coniston with Conishead. There is said to have been a 'celt' of Furness at Waterhead (Mr. Marshall's house), and Bank Ground (not Low Bank Ground) is said to have been the site of a hermitage: but there was no Priory at Coniston. Of course, Monk Coniston belonged to Furness Abbey, and there could not be a Priory on land owned by Cistercians."
- xxxiii., lines 13–15. The punctuation needs amendment, thus: "from natural things to those of art—from veins of gold, meandering in the marble and speaking of past ages, to coins, marking the history of man."
- xxxiv., *n.*² (line 3), for "September 7" read "September 4."
- xl. In Ruskin's letter, for "mento" read "mente."
- l., line 23, for "p. 116" read "p. 166."
- lxiii., line 11. This statement is incorrect. Ruskin visited Venice again, though in failing health, in 1888: see XXXV. xxxii.; line 28, for "LI." read "LIX."
- 18, *n.*⁴, for "towns" read "towers."
- 150, *n.*² (last line), for "185" read "186."
- 170, *n.*¹, for "7" read "4."
187. Cheney's book (compare XXIX. 64 n.). The full title of the book (small 4to, pp. 112) is Original Documents relating to Venetian Painters and their Pictures in the 16th Century. Communicated by Edward Cheney. Paul Veronese's examination before the Inquisition is given in the original Italian at pp. 86–98; in English, pp. 98–107. Facsimiles of Tintoret's receipts (see Vol. XXIX. Pl. 6) are given in an appendix. Mr. Cheney remarks (p. 107):—
 "The injunctions of the Holy Office were only partially obeyed; the 'bleeding nose' was retrenched, but the dog remains with the dwarf, the parrot and 'the Germans,' nor can I discover that Paolo materially altered his style of composition in consequence of these remonstrances, nor that he was more inclined for the future to check the exuberance of his fancy even when treating the most sacred subjects."
- Compare XXIV. 190.
- 296, *n.*¹. It is not certain that the sketch is by Ruskin: see above, XXI. 43.
- 316, *n.*¹ (line 2), read "he receives Elijah's mantle (2 Kings ii. 14)."
- 335, n., the square brackets here are Ruskin's, not the editors'.
- 354, line 7 from foot of text. See, on the subject of this music, XXXVII. 450–451 n.

 464, n.⁴, for "112" read "122."
 539, line 5 from foot of text. But one hears (in old cookery-books and from Disraeli) of primrose salad.

Vol. XXVI.

- Frontispiece*, xiii. and lxviii. This drawing, though it has been exhibited under Ruskin's name (Coniston No. 163, R. W. S. 391, Manchester 416), is in fact by Mr. Alexander Macdonald, master of the Ruskin Drawing School at Oxford.
 Mr. Macdonald made it for Ruskin when on a visit to Brantwood.
- p. xi., the year of the "Evening with Forbes" is 1844, not 1846.
 xii., owing to a "re-make-up" some of the references to pages require to be put one forward (lii. for li., etc.)
 xiii. Plate A (and lettering of the Plate itself). The true date is 1874 (see above, p.
 242).
 xxx. Some extracts from a later letter of Carlyle to Ruskin (Feb. 14, 1866) were given as No. 96 in Sotheby's Sale Catalogue, July 6, 1910. In this letter there is a further reference to the box of cigars. Carlyle mentions in it that he was blackballed at the Athenæum Club.

 241, line 14, "The priest I say,—the presbyter I mean." For this quotation from Christopher Harvey, see XXXIV. 204.
 436, § 21. With reference to Ruskin's hopes for a revival of the art of illuminated "scripture," it may be noted that of recent years much work has been produced in the style of the Middle Ages; some account of it is given in the Morning Post, May 27, 1907.
 448, *n.*³, for "533" read "532."
 501, *n.*¹. The year of the letter to Ellis is 1871, not 1874.
 511, line 5 from foot of text: "in Sheffield" should be "in Castleford"; see p. 505.
 517, line 10, delete the dash at the end of the line

- 583, *n.*⁶. Many more of Caldara's drawings are at Whitelands College: see XXX. 357.
 637, § 26, for "Blacknell" read "Bracknell."
 703, "loadless traveller's song." The reference is to Juvenal, x. 22.
 721, *n.*¹ (line 7). "At the Revolution"—that is, "During the Civil War."
 738, *n.*¹. It has been suggested that by "Iapetic" Ruskin meant "Japhethic": see XXVIII. 522.

Vol. XXIX.

- p. xxiv., letter of Nov. 2, line 4, for "commended" read "commanded."
 32, *n.*², for "739" read "740."
 145, line 6 from foot of letter, for "joined" read "joiner."
 155, *n.*². Since this note was written, a letter from Ruskin has been traced which explains the matter (see XXXIV. 512).
 165, line 2, "must still," etc. The reference is to XXVIII. 436.
 234, *n.*⁵, for "261, 262" read "269–270."
 249, *n.*³, delete "Not last Fors, but."
 290, last line (of text), and *n.*⁷ For the speech referred to, see XXXIV. 348 n.
 301, last line, for "thee" read "them." This misprint has appeared in all editions of Fors.
 325, last few lines of text. Ruskin did not, however, issue any such sheets of his private accounts.
 343, *n.*³, for "285" read "286."
 386, *n.*¹, for "335" read "334."
 436. Messrs. Townsend & Baker's letter was supplemented by one from Dean Howson in the Liverpool Mercury, June 8, 1883.
 460, n., line 1, for "Richard" read "Robert."
 461, § 12. The following is a note by Mr. Andrew Lang which appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette of November 15, 1883:—
 "I know the meeting of Tweed and Ettrick well," "A. L." writes to us, "and many a good trout I have caught there, but I do not know the 'bridge of Ettrick' from which Mr. Ruskin, as quoted in the Pall Mall Gazette, 'saw the two streams join, and the Tweed for miles down the vale, and the Ettrick for miles up among his hills.' From the bridge over Ettrick nearest the junction (Lindean) you cannot see Tweed at all. From Tweed Bridge you see the waters meet, but you do not see up Ettrick. The description is wrong, at least as the bridges now stand, and have stood for many years. It will be good news for Mr. Ruskin that the tributaries of Tweed are soon to be purified of the dye from the mills, thanks to the energy of certain manufacturers at Galashiels and elsewhere. Even now, where the waters meet, they run pure enough when the rivers are at all full."
 475, *n.*⁵ (lines 6 and 7), for Ruskin's drawing of the inn at Martigny, see now Catalogue of Drawings, above, p. 266.
 477, for "Luxmore" read "Luxmoore."
 504, *n.*² (line 3), for "Crowley" read "Crossley": see XXXI. 507.
 511, *n.*¹ Insert a comma after "Plautus" (which should not have been in italics).
 517. The Plate should be made to face this page.
 542. The letter "on the purchase of pictures" was addressed to Mr. S. J. Viccars, of Leicester.
 580. The year of the trial was 1878.
 594, n.^{*}, line 1, for "decision" read "definition."

Vol. XXX.

- p. xlix., line 8 from foot of text. Mr. Faunthrope states that any objects once belonging to St. George's Guild, which may be at Whitelands, were gifts from Ruskin to the College.
 lxxv. To the history of the Ruskin Museum at Sheffield it may be added that in 1909 the Guild of St. George agreed to extend the lease of the collections: see above, p. 189

- 51, line 7, for “former” read “farmer.”
 63, *n.*¹, 226, lines 14 and 15. The statements are by inadvertence contradictory, the authorship of the drawing being doubtful: see, above, under XXI. 37.
 87, for “Hill” read “Mill.”
 164, line 9 from foot, for “Hill” read “Mill.”
 166, line 8 from foot, for “British” read “Ruskin.”
 197, “Triumph of St. George,” for “XXVI.” read “XXIV.”
 211, line 14, for “matters” read “months.”
 220, “La Halle aux Blès,” for “131” read “121.”
 227, line 33, for “XXIV.” read “XXVIII.”
 249, line 3, for “Men” read “Man.”
 281, *n.*², for “XII.” read “XIII.”
 288, line 14, for “Esquimaux’s” read “Esquimaux’s.”
 298, line 1, for “the same” read “the Rev. J. P. Fauthorpe.”
 319, line 11 from foot. See XXX. 51.
 340, first letter. The gold crystals are at Whitelands College; to which Ruskin also presented specimens of the noble, half-noble, and quarter-noble (see pp. 272–273).
 341, line 14, for “Gall” read “Gale.”
 ” *n.*¹, for “357” read “355.”
 357, line 12, for “XXVIII.” read “XXVII.”

Vol. XXXI.

- p. xi., Plate I., for “xl.” read “xlii.”
 xiv., line 16, for “5, 7” read “7, 9”; line 21, for “20” read “22.”
 xvi., line 2, for “10” read “12.”
 xvii., line 5, for “25” read “27”; line 7, for “26” read “28”; line 5 from foot, for “5” read “7”; last line, for “27” read “29.”
 xix., line 8, for “10” read “12.”
 xxii., *n.*² (line 1), for “Prints” read “Poets.”
 11, *n.*², for “v.” read “iv.”
 15, *n.*³, for “21” read “23.”
 105, line 4, “Saturday at e’en.” The quotation is from Guy Mannering, ch. 37.
 211, n., for “444” read “344.”
 263, line 1827, for “Then” read “Than”; line 1825, insert a comma after “might.”

Vol. XXXII.

- p. xxi., *n.*³, for “307” read “308.”
 xxviii., *n.*³ (line 2), for “p. 230” read “p. 331.”
 64, *n.*¹, for “Philemon” read “Philippians.”
 72, *n.*¹, for “16” read “17.”
 162, *n.*¹, for “Dombey and Son” read “Martin Chuzzlewit.”
 417, line 19, for “two” read “too.”
 480, line 26, delete the comma after “Motte.”

Vol. XXXIII.

- p. xxi., line 7, for “one of Proserpina” read “two of Proserpina.”
 xliii., lines 11 and 12. For “Sagredo di San Michele” (near Turin) should probably be read “St. Michel” (in Savoy on the other side of the Cenis): see Index.
 lvii., *n.*² (last line), for “15” read “16.”
 lviii., last line, insert “4” before the last note.
 lx., line 1, insert “ch. iii.” before “§ 36.”
 lxiv., MS. of Bible of Amiens. That of ch. iii. §§ 48–52 was in the possession of Mrs. T. Thornton, by whom it has been presented to the British Museum; see above, p. 198

- lxvi., last line but one, for "202" read "226."
 39, n.², for "Garpey" read "Gaspey."
 58, n.³, for "Gbbion" read "Gibbon."
 79, line 7, for the "—" substitute a comma.
 96, n.² (line 12), "I do not know," etc.: the word is discussed and defined at XIX.
 30, 31.
 144, n.¹ (last line), for "7" read "9."
 169, n.², for "5" read "6."
 197, n.², insert "i." before "Thessalonians."
 209, n.². This note requires amendment. Ruskin states correctly that the legend had been "shortened already to its initials," for on some coins of Victoria (e.g. the florin) Fid. Def. becomes F.D. merely. In later coins of Victoria the Fid. Def. was restored. In coins of Edward VII. both forms also occur.
 234, n.¹ (line 1), for "Meuthon" read "Menthon."
 238, n.². For the drawing of Avallon, see now the Catalogue of Drawings, above, p. 230.
 280, n.², for "Lilian" read "Lilias."
 348, lines 1 and 2, the "baby thrown into a basket of roses" appears in Miss Greenaway's Mother Goose.
 354, n.¹. Cancel the note. Ruskin's reference was to the old Ashmolean Society: see E. B. Poulton's Viriamu Jones and other Oxford Memories, p. 250.
 396, line 13. It may be noted that the phrase "the Corregiescity of Corregio" occurs first in Tristram Shandy (iii. 12, 60).
 423, n.⁴, for "6" read "8."
 429, n.³, for "Matthew" read "John."
 454, n.¹ (line 1), for "to" read "from."
 466, n.¹ (line 5), for "Norway" read "Normandy."
 476, last line of notes, for "XXXI." read "XXX."
 498, n.⁴ (last line), for "view" read "piety."
 533, n.¹, for "XXXIV." read "XXIV."

Vol. XXXIV.

- p. xx., "Railways in the Lake District," for "xxvi." read "xxxi."
 xxi., "Ruskin at his Desk," for "1883" read "1882."
 xxvii., line 11, for "§ 40" read "p. 40" (§ 37).
 xl., n.³, for "xlvi." read "xliv.-v."
 103, n.³ (line 2), for "545" read "546."
 114, line 3 from end, for "666" read "366."
 171, n.², for "13" read "17."
 174, line 19, delete "the" before "leprosy"; and see above for corrections at p. 194 of Vol. XX.
 189, Variae Lectiones. In Letter 42 (p. 240, line 6), ed. 7 misprints "reward" as "second."
 235, n.¹, for "cxxxvi." read "cxxxvii."
 280, line 14 of Ruskin's note, "what I have above called": really below, p. 291, where "the nonsense of Ivanhoe" is spoken of.
 305, n., Scott's letter on the Tolbooth: compare XIII. 466.
 325, n.* (line 2), for "stanza 80" read "stanzas 85, 86."
 333, the quotation from Byron. For some remarks by Tennyson on the passage, see XXXVI. xl.
 " n.*, transfer the reference (²) to "Island, iii. 3."
 341, n.*. Ruskin's "Passionate Pilgrim" is a slip for "The Phoenix and the Turtle."
 343, n.⁸ (last line), for "XII." read "XIII."
 350, line 3, "the fields which with covetous spirit he sold." See the first line of Wordsworth's poem, "Repentance."

- 409, lines 6 and 7, "those whom the Holy Ghost has made our overseers." See Acts xx. 28.
- 413, *n.*³, for "CXXXII. 3" read "CXXXIII. 2."
- 429, *n.*³, for "17" read "7."
- 453, *n.*¹. More probably, however, Ruskin referred not to "The Assumption" but to "The Nativity" (No. 1034).
- 467, No. 66, for "592" read "593."
482. Mrs. Hugh Blackburn died in August 1909. Besides her work in painting, she possessed some skill in sculpture, and a bust of her husband by her is in the Hunterian Museum of Glasgow University. He was Professor of Mathematics in that University; for a notice of him, see Obituary in the Times, Oct. 12, 1909.
- 497, Letter on Usury, line 7, for "money" (so printed in Igdrasil and Ruskiniana) read "usury."
- 498, *n.*³, for "13" read "15."
- 509, *n.*³, for "529" read "528."
- 520, Parental Responsibility. This letter was also printed in the Young Man, July 1895, p. 217.
- 547, line 7, for ".|. real use there practically: I was .|." (so printed in Igdrasil and Ruskiniana) read ".|. real use where practically I was|.".
- 558, "George Eliot." This letter was addressed to Mr. John Tenney. The MS. shows the following misprints in the text:—p. 559, line 3, insert "of" before "an author"; lines 6, 7, italicise "I" and "judged"; line 11, read "[Foregone conclusions,] Sir, you will find are the business|.".
- 565, last line, for "49" read "xlix."
- 581, line 7, for "p. 342" read "p. 242."
- 603, last line (of text), and 604, first line. For "that .|. year of peace" (so printed in Igdrasil and Ruskiniana) read "what .|. year of grace."
605. "Books which have influenced me." In the Bookman, October 1908, p. 15, Dr. Robertson Nicoll prints the private letter from Ruskin which accompanied his contribution to the "symposium." A cheque for £3, 3s. had been enclosed to him, and he was referred to a letter which Gladstone had written on the same subject:—
 "May 14, 1887.—I am always ready to do a good three guineas' worth of work—if anybody will be so good as to ask me for it—but I fear that I should have to charge you more for reading one of Mr. Gladstone's letters. You have luckily left it out of your note."
- Then follows the letter as printed (pp. 605–606). The conclusion was:—
 "I think this is a fair two guineas' worth of information. You shall have an explanatory third guinea's worth if you tell me what you'd like explained."
- The second letter was printed in full (p. 606).
- 617, line 3, for "own" (so printed in Igdrasil and Ruskiniana) read "old."
624. In the contents of Ruskiniana, "1 a" should be added: "Illuminated MSS. .|. 130 n. .|. XII. 481 n."
- 681, line 4 from foot of text, for "xviii." read "viii."
- 707, "Mill's 'Liberty.]" This book was in 1909 presented by Mr. Cook to the British Museum.
- 708, "Mill's 'Political Economy.]" This book has been presented by Mr. T. Thornton's widow to the British Museum.
- 709, "Rejected Books." For additional notes from Messrs. Puttick and Simpson's Catalogue, see above, p. 91.
- 717, Master and Servant. This reminiscence was first recorded by Egbert Rydings in "Some Recollections of John Ruskin" in the Young Man, July 1895, pp. 220–221.
- 722, "The Eagle's Eye." This is an extract from one of Ruskin's letters in Hortus: see XXXVII. 224

- 723, "Art, Immortality, and Nature." On the subject of Perugino's "infidelity," see, however, XXII. 424–425.
- 735, Ruskin Society of London's Address; line 2, for "on" read "upon"; 2–3, for "your eightieth birthday" read "the eightieth anniversary of your birthday"; line 7, for "in" read "for"; line 10, for "elegant" read "eloquent," and for "words; being" read "words. Being"; line 12, insert "to others" after "known"; line 13, for "pleasant" read "pleasing."

Vol. XXXV.

- p. xxix., line 14, the exact date of the letter is April 19.
 xxxi., *n.*⁴, for "174–176" read "674–676."
1. In line 13 of the Public Orator's speech (there quoted from a report in the Times), for "ad" read "ab," and for "acque" read "æque"; in line 14, for "habuit" read "habuisse"; in line 16, "degeneri" for "de generi"; and in line 19, "ætatem auream" for "ætatis aureæ." A revised version of the speech (or the Times' report may have been inaccurate) appears in the Rev. W. W. Merry's Orationes Crweianæ, etc. (Oxford 1909):—
- "Quotus quisque .|. fundaverit. Quid autem de ingenio, quid de scriptis dicam? Etenim si .|. coronam facile credideris; sin ad .|. improbaveris, si generi vatum irritabili adscribendum esse censueris (quippe qui optimo jure vates est nominandus et Musarum interpres): illud certe ab omnibus in laude est ponendum, nihil potius in animo eum habuisse quam reverentiam, justitiam, sanctitatem inculcare. Quam ob rem .|. ætatis aureæ imaginem denuo restituere conarentur."
- 17, *n.*² (line 2), for "458" read "438."
 73, *n.*³, for "xviii." read "xix."
 140, *n.*³ (last line). Cancel the line, as the letter in question was ultimately not included.
- 180, line 13 from foot of text, for "Giuletta" read "Giulietta."
 220, *n.*¹, line 2, for "387" read "323."
 265, *n.*¹, for the drawing of Genoa, see now the Catalogue of Drawings, p. 254.
 276, line 2. Ruskin was mistaken; Mr. Thomas Richmond was the elder brother of George.
- "*n.*³. The drawing of the Forum is No. 88 in the Reference Series at Oxford (XXI. 34).
- 298, last line but one of note, for "296" read "297."
 308, *n.*² (line 5 from foot), for "Fitten" read "Fitton."
 328, line 8 from foot of text, for "Prieure" read "Prieuré."
 "*n.*² (line 3), for "1822" read "1820."
 329, the date of the diary extract is June 14.
 332, line 3, "June" was a slip for "July."
 334, *n.*², for "435 seq." read "456."
 336, § 100, the date of the diary extract is July 27.
 439, lines 21 seq. Mr. W. Warde Fowler kindly supplies the following note: "I should almost unhesitatingly say the bird was a Grey Wagtail (Motacilla Melanops). The description of its action is exact: how he came to miss the yellow of the under parts I cannot explain, unless he were looking at the bird from some little height above it, which I should imagine was quite possible. I cannot think of any other bird in the Alpine region which would fit the description."
- 458, line 11, see XXXVI. lxxxix. and *n.*¹.
 485, line 15, for "with" read "without."
 525, line 5. Ruskin's memory was here slightly at fault. His introduction to Mrs. La Touche was earlier; as it appears from a letter from her to him of Feb. 1858 in Letters of a Noble Woman, p. 37.
 587, *n.*¹ (line 5), for "G. Combe" read "W. Combe."
 603, "Andrew" (Richardson) "d. in Australia" should be "d. on his way to Australia": see XXXV

- 612, *n.*¹ (line 1), for "XI." read "X."
 613, note in middle of text, for "625" read "624."
 615, line 12 of text, for "hearing" read "bearing."
 631, *n.*³. For another reference to the Graphic Society, see IV. xl.

Vol. XXXVI.

p. xx., n. §, for "Blanche" we should probably read "Bertha": for whom, see the General Index.

xl., *n.*¹. The ascription of the poem to a Captain Ogilvie was made by Hogg in his Jacobite Relics, and rests on no authority: see the Centenary Edition of Burns, by Henley and Henderson, vol. iii. p. 433. The lines quoted by Tennyson's biographer from the "Song of the Rover" in Rokeby were adapted by Scott from a song by Burns, "It was a' for our rightfu' King." The song by Burns is more likely to have been the one referred to by Tennyson and Ruskin as "that most romantic of lyrics." The verse as written by Burns is:—

"He turn'd him right and round about
 Upon the Irish shore,
 And gave his bridle reins a shake,
 With adieu for evermore, my dear—
 And adieu for evermore."

- lxxvi., *n.*², for "on" read "in."
 xci., 281. The drawing by Turner of Geneva (Plate XIV.) is No. CCXCIII. (61) in the National Gallery inventory; No. 439 e in the list in Vol. XIII. p. 630.
 15. The two letters from Ruskin to his father were printed in W. G. Collingwood's Life and Work of John Ruskin, 1900, p. 67.
 29, n., cancel "The attack .|.]. Autobiography," and see XXXV. 283–284.
 54, *n.*¹. The "next letter" (from Macugnaga, July 27) is, it should be explained, not printed.
 57, *n.*², for "XIII." read "VIII."
 146, Letter to Furnivall. "I am afraid it will not convert me," etc. Dr. Furnivall's letter, to which Ruskin here replies, was doubtless suggested by a passage in Stones of Venice, vol. iii., then recently published: see XI. 128.
 147 *n.*¹. The letter refers more probably, not to the Poems (1844), but to Tamerton Church Tower (1853), a volume which included revised versions of the earlier Poems.
 177, *n.*⁴. Mr. Lowes Dickinson died in 1908 at the age of 89.
 185, line 12, for "their" read "sheer." The misprint occurs in Mr. Wise's edition. No. 2 in that edition was in fact earlier in date than No. 1.
 189. Cayley's reply to Ruskin's criticisms may be read in the Rossetti Papers, p. 86.
 233, n. Mr. William Ward's note needs correction. Miss Agnes Harrison married not "Mr. John Macdonell of the American Bar," but Mr. (now Sir) John Macdonell, C.B., LL.D., a Master of the Supreme Court.
 268, *n.*³, for "Locksley Hall" read "Maud": see V. 219 n.
 319, *n.*¹ (line 5), for the reference to the Times, see XXVI. xxvi.
 329, *n.*², for "here reproduced (Plate XVIII.)" read "reproduced in the Introduction (Plate B)."
 371, line 24, "duly set." The reference is to Milton, see XXVII. 87.
 387, n. Cancel the first sentence of the note. The reference is to a novel entitled The Romance of a Dull Life, which was published in 1861. It was anonymous, but the author was Mrs. A. S. Penny, a daughter of Ruskin's Oxford tutor, the Rev. W. L. Brown (see XXXVIII. 344). On p. 118 of the novel, one of the characters says to another, "Do you remember those lines of Mr. Ruskin's that we found in an Annual? They express what I mean so beautifully." The lines from "The Hills of Carrara" are then quoted 424, letter to Mrs. Hewitt. Some further extracts from this were printed in a Catalogue (No. 256) by Maggs Brothers, 1910:—

... "not disagreeable. . . . You ask for an account of my mind—you might as well ask for a well-drawn map of Middlesex, with the Duke of Buccleuch's plans for embanking the Thames. You ask to know my plans . . . Is the Burden of Life lighter? Much, for I have less of it now, and less in prospect than ever before. What else is there? Of Associates? . . . neither men nor women. Seriously I am living alone, and like it. . . . I am surprised at your surprise, though sorry for the fact. A gentleman's education, whatever it may cost (and the costlier usually the worse), is an education as at present understood—to be a gentleman. A tradesman wants a servant who has been educated to be a tradesman. If your son knew the qualities of tea—coal—iron—or wine, he would have received the education required by a grocer, ironmaster, or wine merchant. I don't . . . to anybody. By the way, Aubrey de Vere . . . hold of. He will do you good, he is one of the very, very, very few religious men living. You may tell him (I knew him once, and know his work still)—that if ever I get better, I mean to be religious again too, but my religion is to be old Greek. It will do quite as well as his, and is entirely 'certain' also, which is an immense comfort."

432, *n.*². More probably the reference is to the drawing of Alpine Rose leaves, No. 55 in the Catalogue (above, p. 226).

586, *n.*³, for "573" read "571."

590, line 6 from foot of text, insert reference (³) after "'the greatest thinker.'"

Vol. XXXVII.

p. xviii., Richmond, George, last line, for "728" read "729."

22, *n.*¹, for "22" read "18."

35, line 5, for "Edward" read "Edmund."

91, line 6. Really the third edition.

103 (and other places, see Index), for "Rev. E. Peter Barrow" read "Rev. Edwin Pinder Barrow." "Peter" was merely a nickname.

470, letter to Arthur Severn, line 12, insert a reference-number "2" after "Arthur's boom-stroke." Note 2 should be as follows:—

²[The story is given as a remarkable instance of telepathy in vol. i. pp. 188–9 of Phantasms of the Living, by E. Gurney, F. W. H. Myers, and F. Podmore (1886).]

In line 17 of the same letter, alter "2" to "3," and similarly make the existing "note²" become "note³." The note to Miss Greenaway thus becomes "4," and the note at "beyond" becomes "5." The existing note³ (note⁴ as it should be) should end at "Vol. XXIX. p. xxviii."

475, for "Brantwood" in the address read "Herne Hill."

591, 4 lines from foot, for "very" read "my." Ruskin had lent Mrs. Firth three or four of his diaries.

594, letter to Miss Oldham, line 7, "what I said of music": i.e. in XXXII. 300.

650, No. 27. The year is probably 1855.

700, Letters to Short, last line, for "XIV." read "XV."

721, No. 1, for "III." read "II."

726, line 5, for "Seventeen" read "Eighteen"; and after "17" add:—

18 (p. 194, in facsimile)—to M. H. Spielmann. "Sandgate, 22nd Jan. '88.—Dear Spielmann,—I hope this may catch you, before you start to-morrow, to assure you that I quit Messrs. Cassell of all debt to me and that I'll do my best for next article—but I have been extremely unfit for anything this last ten days or so—and can give you my deepest sympathy in the terror that the thought of having a speech to make would be to me. But I have no doubt you will say all that is right, and say it easily.—Ever affectionately yours, J. Ruskin."

729, No. 21. The drawing, having afterwards been traced, is given in this volume, Plate 4.

733, letter to Le Keux, printed again by Messrs. Maggs in their Catalogues, Nos. 253 and 262 (1909, 1910), with the additional words, "You will see where I have scratched out and touched.

IV. TURNER DRAWINGS AT THE NATIONAL GALLERY AND TATE GALLERY

Conspectus showing the numbers in the new Inventory corresponding with the former Exhibition Numbers as given in this Edition.

As explained above (p. 360), the Turner Drawings have now been rearranged, and re-numbered.

A strictly chronological arrangement has been adopted, the whole collection being grouped in 365 sections (I.–CCCLXV.), with 5 further sections containing drawings, now ascertained not to be by Turner or doubtfully ascribed to him (CCCLXVI.–CCCLXXX.). In the case of chronological sections, comprising separate drawings, the individual pieces are numbered alphabetically (I. A, B, etc.); in the case of sections, comprising sketch-books, the pieces are denoted by numbers (II. 1, 2, 3, etc.).

This system of numbering, adopted in Mr. Finberg's Inventory (see above, p. 360), is followed in the new Catalogue (1910) of the Tate Gallery. The numbers of the oil-pictures remain unchanged; but the numbers of the drawings (in the Catalogue and on the frames) are those of the Inventory. This system is doubtless destined to be permanent.

It thus becomes necessary, in order that the references throughout this edition may still be serviceable, to give a conspectus showing the number in the new Inventory corresponding with the former Exhibition numbers.
