

Branded Merchandise Guidelines

In line with sustainability being one of Lancaster University's key values, this should be considered in all marketing and events at the University.

When it comes to branded merchandise, these are the three key questions to consider:

• Is it essential?

Before you order, consider whether giving away items is essential. Instead of Open Day event freebies or visitor gifts, pledge to the student hardship fund or commit to planting a tree on campus.

Are there alternatives?

Alongside the donation ideas mentioned above, the University Food & Dining Team can also make branded biscuits for an event. Order these through catering. These are made on-site and can feature a logo or design on top.

Still want merchandise?

Consider the environmental/ethical impact of your product choice. The design should be kept generic so you can use it at other events too and avoid waste. Make it something that they will use – and not throw away. Everything must have sustainable credentials.

How to order

Over 50% of the University's carbon emissions come from goods and services we buy, so the Procurement Team have worked with the below two suppliers to ensure their sustainability credentials. Avoid choosing other online suppliers as we cannot vouch for their ethical credentials.

For stock products, the price will be online and you will have to raise a PO for that amount. You put the order through online and raise a PO, the PO is sent to our sales inbox where our warehouse team will pick it up and attribute it to the order, then get it sent out. For alternative products or designs, a quote will need to be requested and will be sent to you. Allwag cannot send anything out without a PO or cost centre code. With procurement often taking 1/2 days to raise POs it's best not to leave orders to the day before stock is required!

We have selected a range of products that have been assessed for their sustainable credentials, from a list of frequently ordered products. The details of these products follow this text. If you wish to order other items, please email n.bauer@lancaster.ac.uk and we can discuss alternatives or sustainable options.
