Welcome to our academic community

Lancaster provides an outstanding environment for postgraduate study. Learn how to make the most of the features that make us different.

Excellence in research and teaching

Lancaster is one of the few UK universities to achieve both a high score for research excellence and a Gold Award for teaching excellence.

Find out more about support and opportunities available to you on page 6.

Facilities tailored to you

We recognise that postgraduates have unique study needs. That's why we created postgraduate-specific areas in the Library, the city centre and within the Graduate College.

More than £270million has been invested into the campus since 2013 with up to £250million planned over the next five years.

Find out more about study spaces on page 9.

Talent and career development

World-leading academics offer academic leadership and guidance, while all postgraduates can also access support from our expert careers service.

Find out more about career guidance on pages 16-17.

Our collegiate system

Lancaster is one of a few leading UK universities to operate a college structure. All our postgraduate students are members of Graduate College - a community for postgraduates that caters for your needs and supports your success.

Find out more about your college and what it offers on pages 10-11.

Develop your studies

Make the most of personal guidance from world-leading academics and regular opportunities to share knowledge.

Department and faculty guidance

Lancaster University consists of four faculties and 27 departments. They all offer personal support and guidance from academics who help make Lancaster one of the UK's elite universities. Your department will advise you on the approach they have developed for your programme.

Library and learning development

The Library's Faculty Librarians offer subject-specific guidance on making the most of resources at the University's Library – rated joint number one in the UK by students.

The Library also offers research advice and training aimed specifically at postgraduate students. It covers such key areas as copyright, research data management, disseminating research and measuring impact.

The learning development team offers a range of one-to-ones and workshops to develop your academic skills, including English language. For more information visit the Learning Skills website at lancaster.ac.uk/library

Share knowledge

World-leading figures from academia and industry contribute to a busy lecture schedule at Lancaster. Our postgraduates have the opportunity not only to attend, but to take part by sharing their own work.

Postgraduate research conference

Taught and research postgraduates are invited to attend the annual Postgraduate Research Conference – an opportunity for the community to share ideas, make connections and develop presentation techniques.

Researchers at Lancaster also have a monthly opportunity to share their work at the New Café. In an informal setting, students learn how to pitch their research to different audiences and receive feedback from other researchers from different disciplines. Visit lancaster.ac.uk/new-cafe for more details.

Insider advice

Postgraduate students from across the University share their tips for making the most of your programme at Lancaster.

Andressa Gomide
Linguistics

"It's a very supportive place. There are plenty of opportunities to work with outstanding scholars and to develop as a researcher. Be sure to make the most of the many green areas on campus – they create a really friendly and relaxing atmosphere."

Niklas Reich
Biomedicine

"Be proactive. There is lots of support from the Careers team and plenty of opportunities to pursue your academic interests and make progress in your career. But you need to decide what interests you and take advantage of what's available."

Mike Ryder
English

"My advice is to take full advantage of all the things that are on offer, from day trips and public lectures, to classical concerts in the Great Hall. Not only will you broaden your horizons, but you'll also get to meet some great new people from all over the world."

Joy Wang
Contemporary Arts

"I studied for a Masters here and am now doing my PhD. The academic quality is very high and by pushing myself to get involved in societies I've become more and more a part of Lancaster University. My advice is to be brave, be curious and take chances."

Mathew Gillings
Linguistics

"There is a really thriving research community here within both Graduate College and the individual faculties. My advice is to take full advantage of it to get your academic career off to the best start."

Emily Chi
Politics, Philosophy and Management

"Be open. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity to meet people from so many different countries. Don't be afraid to join clubs and societies and make friends with people from right across the University."

Graduate College

Every postgraduate at Lancaster can rely on the support of Graduate College - a close-knit community that offers events and opportunities sure to enhance your university experience.

We understand the needs of our postgraduate community, and that's why Lancaster has a college dedicated to you. Take a look at how Graduate College will support you during your time at Lancaster.

@lancastergraduatecollege

Facilities

Graduate College has been designed specifically to meet the needs of postgraduate students. Its accommodation is located in a quiet area of campus, with its own dedicated study and social hub. This recently refurbished space is ideal for group and quiet study as well as taking a break to play pool, darts or table tennis. The Graduate College Bar, the Herdwick, is nearby and is known for its traditional pub atmosphere and range of local beers. A Graduate College PC Lab is also available 24 hours a day, and students have the option to use a city centre study space (see page 9). All facilities are available for those who live on or off campus.

Personal assistance

Every student can find personal support in their college. You will be able to call upon a friendly support network that includes student reps, your College Manager and a Wellbeing Officer. Your college support team can refer you to specialist support services if needed and will also liaise with academic departments on your behalf. A Buddy Scheme is also available to those coming from overseas. Current postgraduates contact international students before they arrive to answer any questions and support them to settle into life at Lancaster.

Inter-college competition

Friendly rivalries are a key feature of college life, played out through numerous competitions and sporting events. Graduate College has its own sporting teams including football, netball and darts.

Social activities

Graduate College regularly organises day trips to locations across the UK, including major cities and rural beauty spots. Quizzes, music events and arts activities are also a regular feature of college life, while the year climaxes with a summer festival.

Representation

Elected postgraduate students form the Postgraduate Board. Supported by the students' union, they represent the interests of all postgraduate students and work together on social, sporting and welfare activities.

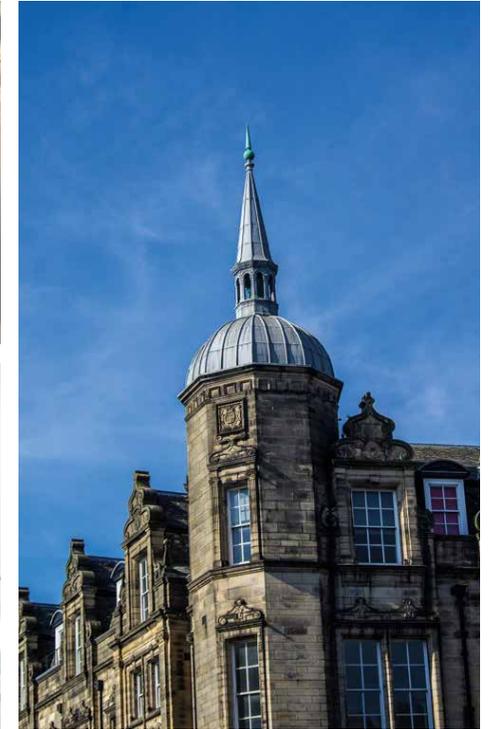

Support for families

On campus there is a strong community of students with young families and a range of useful facilities. The University offers an excellent pre-school, our Sports Centre provides children's activities, and campus features a medical centre and dentist. Visit lancaster.ac.uk/students-with-families to find out more.

Relax :)

There's going to be lots happening in the weeks to come, so make sure you take time to relax and congratulate yourself on achieving your place.

Don't forget...

If you have a disability/medical condition, help us to put support in place by registering with the Disability Service before you arrive. Get in touch with the team at disability@lancaster.ac.uk

Register online

An email will invite you to begin registration online on 2nd September. You will then complete registration during Welcome Week.

Say hello to your union

You can also expect to receive an email telling you all about Lancaster University Students' Union.

Say hello to your department

By the end of this week, your department will have been in touch to offer you its congratulations and welcome you to the programme.

Some departments will have needed to contact students earlier in the summer.

Say hello to your college

You are a member of Graduate College. You will receive a welcome either through the post or via email this week. If you will live on campus, you'll also be told important information such as what size bedsheets you need. All students will also be told how to pay a small one-off college fee that goes towards welfare, events and entertainment.

It's time to go

Campus residents should be ready to move in on Saturday 28th or Sunday 29th September from 10am.

Welcome Week

Get settled in through a week-long schedule of social activities and academic inductions. You'll find details in your welcome schedule available at lancaster.ac.uk/welcome-week

Health facilities

A doctor, dentist and pharmacy are all available on campus.

lancaster.ac.uk/health-services

Health Centre

You must register with a doctor. Most students choose our on-campus Health Centre. The practice also has a surgery on King Street in Lancaster city centre.

Pharmacy

We have a pharmacy in the centre of campus that can provide advice and dispense prescriptions.

Dental clinic

Our on-campus dental clinic offers Simplyhealth-accredited private treatment.

Emergencies

If you are on campus and using a mobile phone, call 999, then immediately contact Security Reception on 01524 594541. You may also dial 999 from any internal telephone line. This will connect you to the Security Reception, which is staffed 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. They will call emergency services on your behalf.
